CARE AND SYMPATHY—As veterinarian Joseph Spinelli gives a shot to Blackie, the Tiburon peninsula's well-known sway-backed horse, Blackie's caretaker, Paul J. Bertalla of Mill Valley, holds the ailing horse's head. The animal, who is 40 years old, has nearly become a county landmark during the 28 years he has lived in a pasture close to Tiburon Boulevard. He became ill during the night. (Independent-Journal photo by Richard Smith)

Tiburon's Famed Horse Fights Illness

BULLETIN

Blackie, Tiburon's famed sway-backed horse, was to be humanely put to sleep by a veterinarian, after being found ill in his pasture this morning.

Blackie, Tiburon's horse with the remarkable swayed back, was taken ill today.

For nearly 30 years, he has stood in his own pasture near Tiburon Boulevard, sturdy as the cavalry horse he was. Today, he was lying on his side, covered by a quilt and under the care of a veterinarian.

Shortly after dawn, Blackie's caretaker, Paul Jo Bertalla, found him lying ill in the pasture.

Dr. Joseph Spinelli was called, as were officers of Marin County Humane Society. A small crowd quickly gathered.

Dr. Spinelli gave the 40-year-old horse several shots and ordered complete rest. Exactly what was wrong, he wouldn't say.

Blackie's right eye was

Alert Clerk Thwarts Stolen Check Attempt

An alert Corte Madera store clerk led to the arrest yesterday of a man suspected of trying to pass one of 1,100 blank payroll checks stolen 48 hours earlier from the Marin Country Day School, Corte Madera.

Taken into custody was 34-year-old Richard Paul Ledger of Washington, D.C., who was charged with possession of a forged document. He was booked in Marin County jail and was held today on $5,500 bail.

Corte Madera Police Insp. Harold Hockett, who made the arrest, said all merchants in the area had been alerted after the blank checks were stolen from the school office building at 5221 Paradise Drive.

The theft, believed to have taken place about Thursday, was reported yesterday. No sign of forced entry was found at the school building, Hockett said.

Reports started coming in yesterday of attempts to pass the checks in San Rafael. One check, for $168.85, was successfully passed at George's Recreation Parlor, 842 Fourth Street.

At 3:15 p.m., police said, Ledger walked into Littleman's store in the Corte Madera Shopping Center, picked up two bottles of vodka and a bottle of whisky and attempted to pass one of the payroll checks made out for $202.59, said Hockett.

Store clerk Martin Flynn remembered the police warning and told the suspect, "I have to go to the safe to get that kind of money."

He tipped the police. Suspicious because of the delay, the suspect fled the store, but two members of the staff kept him in sight until police arrived, said Hockett.

Hockett said police received an anonymous telephone call that they would find "a parcel of goodies" at a spot in Samuel P. Taylor State Park.

Accompanied by Police Officer Charles Rester, Hockett went to the spot and recovered 1,048 of the 1,100 stolen checks.

Immediately after the theft was discovered yesterday, the Wells Fargo Bank account on which the checks could be drawn was closed and a new one opened for the school.

Red Attacks Increasing In Viet Nam

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. Marines fought off a determined Viet Cong attack near Chu Lai today and U.S. artillery dueled with enemy mortar fire as the Communists continued to step up their offensive.

Today's attack by about 100 Red troops on a 50-man Marine unit marked the second time in two days that the Viet Cong struck at U.S. emplacements.

A force of 160 Leathernecks hurled back a Viet Cong attack last night at Phu Bai, killing three Communists, spokesmen said. Marine losses were reported light.

Today's target for the Viet Cong was Phu Loi, an artillery base area 15 miles north of Saigon. U.S. spokesmen said the Reds fired 16 mortar rounds, but casualties were light.

The Viet Cong were also active in the northern part of the Mekong Delta, attacking a government outpost yesterday 60 miles southwest of Saigon. A spokesman said the 60-man defense force suffered heavy casualties.

President Says 'Long Road' Ahead In War

Senate Stymied As Hawks Cannot Obtain Quorum

COMBINED AP & UPI

WASHINGTON—President Johnson said today he is pleased with reports of allied military progress in South Viet Nam but "a long and hard road" lies ahead.

But administration efforts to speed up and resolve the Senate's Viet Nam debate failed for lack of a quorum today.

After some 40 minutes of confusion, frustration, and roll calls, the Senate had to break off its Saturday session because only about a third of the 100 senators answered the roll. A majority is required.

'NOT EASY'

"It is not going to be easy, it is not going to be short, it is going to require sacrifices—I want everyone to know that," the President told a news conference.

But Johnson reiterated that "we are determined to do what needs to be done there." And he insisted anew that "our objectives are limited."

"We want to defeat aggression, we want to defeat social misery, we want to establish a stable, democratic government (in South Viet Nam), and we want a just peace."

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., tried to object to an adjournment motion, saying, "There are no holidays in Viet Nam."

ROLL CALL FAILS

But his demand for a roll call vote on this failed, and by voice vote the Senate adjourned until noon Monday.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., acting as majority leader, had called for a Saturday session and had sent telegrams to the senators that "if you have a speech to make, come make your speech."

But Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., who had just finished one four-hour address attacking administration Viet Nam policy and planned another for Monday, said he knew of no one who planned to speak today.

"If no one shows up, I'll be here," promised Long, "and if the spirit moves me I may make a speech." The Louisiana Democrat is a strong supporter of President Johnson's policies.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey all but sent his regrets yesterday in response to an invitation from Chairman J. W. Fulbright to discuss his Asian

Administrator Suggests Dropping Civil Defense

Marin County Administrator Alan Bruce has recommended that the county civil defense office be abolished.

Bruce's recommendation, to go to county supervisors Tuesday, declares that the office as it now operates is nothing but a "paper" operation, yet is costing taxpayers about $4,000 a year.

He suggests the regular county work force could be put to work in a disaster, which is "precisely what would happen in any real emergency" under the present civil defense plan.

The chairman of the board of supervisors now serves as civil defense director. James V. Burdick, county veterans administrator, is deputy director.

Bruce says the cities of the county receive surplus equipment under the auspices of the county civil defense office, but they could continue to receive this benefit by setting up their own civil defense offices and doing their own paperwork.

Bruce said in his letter to the board that Burdick "feels that as presently constituted the office is no benefit to anyone and that the program should either be expanded or eliminated."

Viet Nam Bullet Hits Marin Man

A 19-year-old Marine from San Rafael was under intensive treatment today at the Alameda Naval Air Station hospital for a head wound suffered when he was hit by a sniper's bullet in Viet Nam Sunday.

Lance Cpl. Randolph J. Pashilk Jr. of 253 Prospect Drive was wounded in a military operation near the village of Quang Ngai, according to a Department of Defense telegram sent to his parents.

His mother, Mrs. Randolph Pashilk, said her son was given treatment at a medical station in Da Nang, then flown to the West Coast via Manila.

He was wounded just two years to the day after he joined the Marines. He enlisted Feb. 20, 1964, and went to Viet Nam last July 7.

Pashilk attended St. Raphael's School and San Rafael High School and was once an Independent-Journal carrier. He has two brothers who are also in military service. Gerald Pashilk, 20, is stationed at the Army's Fort Devon, Mass., while David Pashilk, 22, is stationed at Beale Air Force Base near Sacramento.

Sanitation, Hospital Directors Not Sworn

None of the three members of the San Rafael Sanitation District board had, until yesterday, taken the oath of office.

And, as far as County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell knows, none of the current members of the Marin Hospital District board have been sworn in yet.

These disclosures came out as Mitchell continued his scrutiny of the county's more than 30 small special districts for technical irregularities.

Yesterday, on Mitchell's advice, San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini and Councilman Fred Jensen went to the county clerk's office and were sworn in as members of the sanitary district board.

Third member of the board, County Supervisor Thomas T. Storer, is in bed with pneumonia, but presumably will be sworn in next week.

Bettini explained that he assumed he was sworn in simultaneously as a board member when he took the oath to become mayor last year. On the advice of County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney, Mitchell advised Bettini yesterday to take the separate oath immediately.

As for the hospital district board, Mitchell said he was unable to find any record in the county clerk's office of the board members taking an oath.

"They may very well have taken the oath of office," said Mitchell, "and this may be on file at the hospital. But the county counsel has advised me to tell them this should also be on file in the clerk's office."

Mrs. Marion C. Ibach, president of the hospital board, expressed surprise and insisted that board members have all been sworn in by County Clerk George H. Gnoss.

Moscow Shows Dogs' Pictures From Orbit

MOSCOW (UPI) —Moscow television today showed the first pictures of Blackie and Breeze, the Soviet spacedogs, in orbit.

The pictures provided the first word that their capsule, Cosmos 110, carries a television camera.

A commentator called the flight of Cosmos 110 and its canine passengers, launched into earth orbit Tuesday, an "important experiment." Earlier, Tass described it as a prelude to a major manned space flight.

The Moscow television pictures showed a round capsule with the dogs inside. The picture was fuzzy and only one of the dogs could be seen clearly. It appeared to be a shepherd, but the breed could not be definitely determined. The Soviets have not said what kind of dogs they are.

Off-Again, On-Again Flight Goes Perfectly

COMBINED AP & UPI

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. — The most powerful rocket ever launched by the United States a Saturn 1-B, hurled an unmanned Apollo moonship over a blazing re-entry course today and the craft was recovered after parachuting into the sea.

The spectacular launching was a successful beginning to a long series of Apollo shots whose goal is to land American astronauts on the moon in this decade.

If future launchings, including manned earth orbit trips, are as successful as today's maiden effort, the historic moon landing could be made as early as the first part of 1968.

The 11,000-pound cabin section of the spacecraft was retrieved from the sea at 2:13 p.m. (EST) after a blistering 40 minute flight that took it 310 miles into space and back to a parachute landing in the south Atlantic 5,300 miles southeast of Cape Kennedy. It landed within 20 miles of the intended bullseye.

FROGMEN HELP

Frogmen leaped from helicopters and secured the cabin section until the aircraft carrier Boxer came alongside to pick it up.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration hailed the shot as a tremendous success.

The 23-ton spacecraft, manned only by electronic brains for its initial trip into the heavens, was blasted into sunny Florida skies by a mighty, 1.6-million pound thrust Saturn 1B super rocket at 11:12 a.m. EST and splashed down in the Atlantic at about 11:46 a.m. EST.

EASY LANDING

Had astronauts been aboard, they apparently would have survived the flight in good shape.

Once the countdown reached within an instant of blastoff, only to have an automatic sensing device shut down the engines because it detected trouble in a fuel valve pressurization system.

The trouble was quickly remedied, and the countdown resumed. But again difficulty cropped up in the pressurization system. This time officials cancelled the shot, but reversed their decision minutes later and said the problem was not sufficiently serious.

Once the countdown was again resumed, it proceeded without hitch through the spectacular ignition that bathed the launch pad in a sea of flames.

Major objects of the test flight were to see how the Saturn 1B performed, and to

Bruce Cracks Down After Employees Receive Letter

A newsletter from the Marin County Employees Assn., given county employees with their paychecks early this month, has prompted a crack-down by County Administrator Alan Bruce.

Bruce proposed an administrative regulation which would require any pay check enclosure to be reviewed and approved by his office. County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, whose office distributes the pay checks, has protested Bruce's action.

The disagreement will be thrashed out before the county supervisors Tuesday.

The association newsletter said it was hoped that the association's new manager would be equal to or better than anyone working with personnel in the county. Bruce took this as a slap at the personnel department, which is part of his office.

Mitchell and Bruce Tuesday will also argue on another point, namely changing the date of pay checks to the last of the month, rather than the first of the month.

The change, approved by supervisors on Mitchell's recommendation last September, would mean that employees would be taxed in 1966 on 13 months of income, according to County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney.

Bruce has recommended that the September action be rescinded.

Flu Impact Continues To Be Felt

The influenza epidemic has not yet leveled off in the Bay Area, Dr. Lester Breslow, state director of public health, said yesterday.

Absentees from schools should continue to run high for the next few weeks, he added, although some counties elsewhere in the state may be through their worst periods.

All schools in Marin County, however, were scheduled to be open Monday, although some schools were reporting increases in absences. Others were showing improvements.

Breslow, in his report, added that the number of deaths in the state caused by respiratory diseases was at about the usual level for this time of year, so that none could be attributed to influenza specifically.

The health director also said influenza vaccine shots had proved their worth in several areas.

Closing schools, he said, does little to stop an epidemic, since nearly all children have been exposed by the time absences increase to the point where classes are suspended.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

LBJ To Cairo?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic (UAR) has invited President Johnson to visit Cairo, according to informed sources. The report came yesterday as the speaker of the UAR National Assembly, Anwar El-Sadat, ended four days of talks here with U.S. officials, including Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Korea Troops Due

SEOUL (UPI) — Negotiations on terms for the proposed dispatch of an additional 20,000 South Korean troops to Viet Nam have been concluded satisfactorily, Foreign Minister Lee Tong-Won said today. The additional division would raise to 43,000 the number of ROK troops in Viet Nam, second only to the United States among the Allies.

Nails Wreak Havoc

LYONS, France (UPI) — A stream of nails falling from a damaged box aboard a truck caused havoc over several miles of highway. Police reported more than 100 autos suffered blown tires before the nails were swept up.

Child Helps Viets

LONDON (UPI) — Fifty tins of dried milk will be delivered to the Vietnamese Embassy here today by seven-year-old Christopher Houston. Christopher got the milk for his birthday so he could "help the children in Viet Nam."

Quintuplets Born

EAST LONDON, South Africa (UPI) — Quintuplets were born to a South African native woman early today. Doctors said the three boys and two girls, born prematurely, were "doing fine." The mother is a middle-aged African housewife, Mrs. Nogesi Gquzulu.

Chinese Rite Set

MARYSVILLE (AP)—The Chinese community of Marysville, which dates back to Gold Rush days, is celebrating the annual commemoration of Bok Kai, the Chinese water god, this weekend. Traditional Chinese festivities such as the lions dance were scheduled today and tomorrow.

Florida Warmest

NEW YORK (UPI)—The lowest temperature reported this morning to the U.S. Weather Bureau, excluding Alaska and Hawaii, was 4 below zero at Hibbing, Minn. The highest reported yesterday was 77 degrees at Coral Gables, Fla.

Ghana Ties Pending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States expects to have favorable diplomatic relations with the new regime in Ghana, but is in no hurry to formally establish them. State Department Press Officer Robert J. McCloskey confirmed yesterday.

Idaho Approves

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Idaho became the 21st state today to ratify a proposed U.S. constitutional amendment on presidential succession and presidential inability. Ratification by 38 states is necessary for it to become law.

Lawmaker Balks

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Sen. Virgil O'Sullivan, D-Williams, says it "would be presumptuous" for lawmakers to act on constitutional revision this year when "an entirely new Legislature will be seated" in January.

Wilson Stumps Again

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson moved about the country today like a campaigner, strengthening the widely held belief that Britain will have a parliamentary general election March 31.

TO HONEYMOON IN TAHOE—Actor Brian Donlevy, 55, and Lillian Lugosi, 44, were married in civil ceremonies today in Indio. (UPI Telephoto)

Star Weds Ex-Mrs. Lugosi

INDIO (AP)—Actor Brian Donlevy, who gave his age as 55, was married yesterday to Lillian Lugosi, 44, who divorced horror-movie actor Bela Lugosi nine months before his death in 1956.

Donlevy has starred in such films as "Beau Geste" and "The Great McGinty."

The bride and groom said they plan a honeymoon in the Lake Tahoe vicinity and will live in Donlevy's home at Palm Desert.

The marriage was performed by Superior Judge Merrill Brown in his chambers at Indio.

The bride and groom said they have been mutual friends for about 12 years.

French Fire Silo Missile

PARIS (UPI)—France's three-stage nuclear punch moved closer to reality today with the first successful firing of an underground silo-based strategic missile.

The firing was reported by an air force spokesman yesterday. He said only that the 30-ton, two-stage solid fuel SSBS rocket was launched at the Biscarosse Proving Range in southwest France "less than two weeks ago."

The French nuclear deterrent program has three stages.

The first, a strike force of low-flying Mirage IV jet bombers capable of carrying nuclear bombs a distance of 1,500 miles, was activated last year.

The firing of the SSBS strategic missile cleared the decks for the start of the second stage—stationing 25-30 of them in underground silos in southern France, somewhat like the United States does in its western bases.

The third phase will be the "ultimate deterrent" —a fleet of some 20 nuclear armed submarines ranging the high seas at will, according to French plans.

Doctors Head Syrian Junta

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI)—Two civilian doctors moved into top government positions today as the new Socialist military junta strengthened its grip on revolt-torn Syria.

The revolutionary leaders of Wednesday's surprise, bloody left-wing coup, named bone surgeon Youssef Zayyen as premier-designate and physician Nureddin Atassi as president.

Zayyen

Both are former government officials who clashed with ousted President Amin Hafez.

Outside Syria, other Baath party Socialists continued to demand the release and reinstatement of the deposed government, but the new regime appeared to be in firm control.

Atassi

An indication of the junta's confidence came as it eased curfews and reopened air and seaports. A large number of tourists, including more than 100 Americans, who had been trapped in Syria since the revolt started, were allowed to leave.

The junta was under strong attack by Baghdad Radio and the Cairo press and other Arab states were reported cool to the new government.

Controversial Priest Ousted

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A controversial priest, suspended from the priesthood for his refusal to yield to James Francis Cardinal McIntyre's demand for "censorship" of his public statements, today faces a new life among narcotic addicts in Synanon House.

Refusing to assent to what he called "censorship," Father William H. Dubay was informed formally yesterday of his suspension for "irreverence and disobedience that has been cumulative and contumacious."

He is not excommunicated, however, and is allowed to receive the sacraments of the church.

Father Dubay, who has been critical of the cardinal occasionally since 1964 and once asked Pope Paul VI to oust Cardinal McIntyre for failure to act on racial issues, said he will move Monday into Synanon House—a privately operated home for the treatment of narcotics addicts in Santa Monica.

Draft Tests To Tell Students' Fate

Last Used In Korea Conflict

WASHINGTON (AP) — One million draft-eligible students are expected to take the Selective Service college qualification tests this spring. The exams will help draft boards determine whether the students may stay in school or be drafted.

Selective Service announced yesterday that the tests would be given on May 14, May 21 and June 3 at 1,200 locations throughout the continental United States, Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone.

Draft deferment tests were last used during the Korean war.

APRIL DEADLINE

College students and high school students graduating this year will be eligible — but they must apply to take the test by April 23. The test is optional.

Science Research Associates of Chicago will administer the exams which will be similar to general aptitude tests. About 50 per cent will relate to verbal and linguistic skills and the other 50 per cent to quantitative reasoning.

The three-hour test will cover four areas: reading comprehension: verbal relations; arithmetic reasoning; and data interpretation.

A Selective Service spokesman said the test has been so constructed that no special advantage will be given to any type of major course students are pursuing.

TO AID BOARDS

In announcing a return to the Korean war procedure, Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, said the tests will provide local boards with more data on students when they consider college deferment requests next autumn.

Under the new deferment procedures, local draft boards will seek information on class standing of students to be considered with the examinations in determining student deferments.

The use of class standings has been assailed by some college administrators as being unfair. Some said they may refuse to cooperate with draft boards.

Dr. John Weaver, vice president for instruction at Ohio State University, called the use of class ranking "a dangerous way to go about" deferment. He said a student low-ranked at a top school might stand far higher at one where standards are less demanding.

Dean John U. Monro of Harvard University said he would comply if students request that he withhold academic data from their draft boards.

About 1.8 million college students now hold deferments. At present draft boards grant such deferments on the basis of assurances from schools that students are enrolled full time and are doing satisfactory work.

Wolden Called Man Betrayed By Associates

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—San Francisco Assessor Russell Wolden was described yesterday by his attorney as a man betrayed by dishonest associates who accepted bribes while he tried to protect tax rolls.

Attorney James M. MacInnis, in his opening statements at Wolden's trial on bribery charges in San Francisco Superior Court, said the assessor needed financial help just to take trips.

"When Mr. Wolden went to Europe he was forced to do so as the guest of his friend, Adolph Schuman," the attorney said.

To complete the trip, the attorney went on, Wolden had to have a loan from Homer Goehler, a Portland, Ore., tax consultant free on $5,000 bail on bribery charges in San Diego.

MacInnis spoke in rebuttal to prosecution charges by Chief Asst. Dist. Atty. Francis Mayer who portrayed Wolden as a bribe-taker who accepted tens of thousands of dollars in illegal payments in return for reduced tax assessments.

Mayer attacked the assessor's dealings with Schuman, whose business tax was described as "practically static" despite large growth.

New Mexico Hamlet Turns Out For Last Tribute To Its Hero

LAS LUNAS, N.M. (AP) — All across New Mexico flags fly at half staff today. But the mourning is greatest in this rural community where a war hero has come home for the last time.

His name was Daniel Fernandez. Last week, the 21-year-old Army specialist fourth class deliberately threw himself over an exploding grenade in Viet Nam.

He died. But his buddies lived.

"Greater love than this no one has, that one lay down his life for his friends."

With that simple passage from the Gospel of St. John, the Rev. Francis Schuler will begin his sermon at a Requiem High Mass for Fernandez, held, not in a church, but in a school gymnasium so that more of the youth's friends might be able to attend.

After the Mass, the body will be taken to Santa Fe, about 90 miles north, for burial.

DANIEL FERNANDEZ
May receive medal

An eight-man rifle squad will fire a graveside salute and a bugler will sound Taps.

Lt. Gov. Mack Easley, acting in the absence of Gov. Jack M. Campbell, issued orders that flags in the state dip in tribute to the young hero today.

Representing the governor at the burial services will be Maj. Gen. John P. Jolly, the state's adjutant general.

Fernandez had been decorated with the Purple Heart and Air Medal for previous service as a helicopter door gunner in Viet Nam. He was sent home to recover from wounds but volunteered to return in January.

He had volunteered for the patrol action in which he lost his life, shielding comrades from the blast of the Viet Cong grenade.

For that action, his last, Daniel Fernandez has been recommended for his nation's highest military decoration, the Medal of Honor.

Downed Fliers Saved After Long Wait

DA NANG, South Viet Nam (UPI) —Two U.S. Marine flyers told today how they spent two hours in the South China Sea trying to draw the attention of passing helicopters, aircraft and ships—nearly in vain.

The two men, based at Da Nang, were flying in an F-4C phantom near Quang Tri Friday when the plane was hit by Communist ground fire.

"We had just made six bombing runs over the area when we got hit," said 1st Lt. Bob Pappas, 26, of E. St. Louis, Ill., pilot of the downed craft.

Pappas turned the plane toward the South China Sea.

"We were just heading out over the ocean when all our electric and hydraulic systems went out," he said.

First Lt. John R. Coleman, 25, of Bellmore, N.Y., the radar operator in the two-seat plane, ejected first.

Pappas stayed 30 seconds longer trying in vain to start the engines again. Then he also ejected.

Pappas and Coleman landed in the water, eight miles apart and 10 to 20 miles from shore.

Pappas said he tried everything possible to attract the attention of planes and ships searching for them. Apparently neither his radio nor that of his radar operator were working.

"I fired flares and smoke bombs to attract the attention of rescue helicopters and navy planes," he said. Both efforts failed.

Coleman, closer to shore, spotted a Navy ship and fired flares and emptied his pistol of all the tracer bullets. The destroyer-tender USS Falgout spotted him and pulled him out of the sea.

Coleman told the crew the direction the plane was traveling before he ejected and estimated how much farther out to sea Pappas might be.

The ship took the course and eight miles out the crew spotted Pappas and pulled him out. Both men were uninjured.

"It was a real inspiring sight when they pulled me aboard," said Pappas. "Everyone was waving at me and taking photos."

Meningitis Kills Soldier In Colorado

FT. CARSON, Colo. (UPI) — A 17-year-old Ft. Carson soldier has died of spinal meningitis, Army officials and Colorado health officials agreed today that it probably was an isolated case.

The victim was Pvt. Andrew T. Heningburg of Mobile, Ala. He died in the post hospital Thursday—a day after he was admitted complaining of breathing difficulty.

Authorities at Ft. Sill near Lawton, Okla., reported yesterday that William L. Brockner, 24, of Old Brookville, N.Y., a student in the officer candidate school, apparently had been stricken with meningitis. Brockner entered Reynolds Army Hospital Wednesday and his condition was last reported to be considerably improved.

Two cases of infectious meningitis also were reported yesterday in Opelika, Ala. Although neither case involved students at Auburn University, school officials suspended all strenuous activities by students as a precaution.

Driver Too Slow, Then Cross-Wise

SAN BRUNO (UPI)—Two deputy sheriffs said that they started trailing a car going only 8 miles an hour on the Bayshore Highway.

Suddenly, it started going slower and slower and moving east to west on the high-speed north to south highway. Finally, the car stopped and backed into the deputies' vehicle.

Driver Alfred Batteate Jr., 48 was arrested on suspicion of drunk driving.

Secondarily, you may lose sleep and suffer from Headaches, Backaches and feel old, tired, depressed. In such irritation, CYSTEX usually brings fast, relaxing comfort by curbing irritating germs in strong, acid urine and by analgesic pain relief. Get CYSTEX at druggists. Feel better fast.

U.S. Rejects Russ Note Over B-52

MOSCOW (UPI) —The United States has rejected official Kremlin allegations that the crash of a B-52 bomber over Spain violated the 1963 partial nuclear test ban treaty, it was learned today.

A communique delivered to the Soviet Foreign Ministry yesterday called the charges "without any foundation" and added that "no nuclear weapons test, no nuclear explosion of any kind and no radioactive pollution of the sea were involved in the unfortunate accident."

The Russian's charged Feb. 16 that the crash, in which an H-bomb was lost, violated the 1963 treaty. The American reply was delivered by Davis E. Boster, counselor for political affairs.

The reply declared that the flights of U.S. military aircraft were for the purpose of "reinforcing collective security against the threat posed by the huge nuclear forces of the Soviet Union including its many bomber aircraft.

"It is not surprising that the government of the U.S.S.R. is opposed to military security measures undertaken in defense against the threat of its armed power or that it should attempt to limit or reduce such defense."

Spectators Wonder If Two Defendants To Take Stand

MIAMI (UPI) —Why didn't Candy Mossler take the stand?

One facetious reason being advanced in courtroom circles here is that if she had, she would have outtalked everybody including the prosecutors and the quick-witted judge, George E. Schulz, at her murder trial.

The defense rested Friday at the end of the sixth week of the trial of Candy and her alleged incestuous lover, Melvin Lane Powers. He is her nephew.

The state alleges that the two murdered Candy's multimillionaire husband, Jacques Mossler, because he was interfering with their love affair.

Asked at the end of the court session yesterday why the defense didn't put the blonde former model in the witness chair, her chief attorney, Clyde Woody, said: "The trial isn't over yet."

It's not, and the prosecution is going to take all day Monday and perhaps part of Tuesday putting on rebuttal witnesses.

The defense intends to call witnesses to contradict these, if necessary—in court parlance, they are surrebuttal witnesses —but neither Candy nor Powers is expected to be one of them.

The trial is expected to go to the jury on Thursday.

Wedding Plans Curb Talk Dates

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson is putting aside most public activity for June and July so she can be free to plan her daughter Luci's Aug. 6 wedding.

The first lady's press secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter, said Mrs. Johnson has decided to limit her speaking engagements to one a month. She usually gets about 90 requests for talks each month.

The engagements Mrs. Johnson does not fill will be turned over to her newly created speakers' bureau, which supplies pinch hitters for her on beautification promotion.

Police Guard Black Muslim Convention

CHICAGO (UPI) —The Black Muslims convention opened in Chicago today under heavy police guard and amid speculation over the movement's most famous member, heavyweight boxing champion Cassius Clay.

More than 250 policemen surrounded the South Side Coliseum site for the two-day meeting, on foot and in patrol cars. Police Supt. Orlando W. Wilson feared there might be violence.

Speculation on Clay centered around whether he would appear to hear either of the two scheduled long speeches by Black Muslim leader Elijah Muhammad.

Clay—called Muhammad Ali by the Muslims—was in town for an appearance before the Illinois Boxing Commission yesterday when Illinois Atty. Gen. William G. Clark, declared in effect that Clay's fight with Ernie Terrell was cancelled because National Sports Promotions, Inc., had been illegally granted a license for the March 29 bout.

Fight promoter Ben Bentley earlier said Clay would not attend the convention.

Police said they would not enter the Coliseum itself unless trouble broke out. Security inside will be maintained by the black supremacy sect's elite guards, the "Fruit of Islam," who are trained in karate.

Indonesian Youth Defy Sukarno

SINGAPORE (UPI) —Barbed wire and machine gun emplacements ringed President Sukarno's palace today amid reports that troops were searching Jakarta for former Defense Minister Gen. A. H. Nasution.

Travelers reaching Singapore said student demonstrators against the government appeared to have public sympathy, and a Japanese correspondent reported from Jakarta that student leaders intend to defy Sukarno's authority.

The report said students vowed to resist Sukarno's order Friday night outlawing all demonstrations and banning the powerful Indonesian University Student Action Assn. (KAMI).

The order came after 10,000 students and others joined a massive funeral procession mourning the death of five students reported killed when palace guiardsmen opened fire on anti-Communist demonstrators Wednesday and Thursday.

The President also forbade all gatherings of more than five persons and doubled Jakarta curfew hours to keep the streets clear from 9 p.m. until dawn.

Tower Toppled

LAKE CHARLES, La. (UPI) — A hit and run helicopter knocked over a 300-foot radio tower and damaged the roof of the Louisiana State Police headquarters yesterday. The 'copter then sped away. State police said the pilot might not have realized what he had done.

Novato Faces Dilemma Over Bridge By-Pass

The Novato City Council was placed on the horns of a dilemma last night in regard to its scheduled construction of a new bridge over Warner Creek.

City Public Works Director Lawrence A. Coleman told councilmen that it would cost the city between $12,000 and $17,000 to set up a temporary by-pass so traffic can continue on South Novato Boulevard.

On the other hand, warned Coleman, traffic will have to be detoured over Diablo Avenue and Center Road if no by-pass is constructed. This would add 1,000 feet to the route and would divert traffic away from two shopping centers for four months.

Contract for the project was awarded Wednesday to the Future Construction Co. of Dublin for $49,888. Half the money for the job will come from county urban thoroughfare funds and the other half from state gas tax funds, but Coleman pointed out last night that neither fund can be tapped for the bypass.

The council, partly because of light attendance at its special meeting last night, postponed action to another special session at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Coleman said he was also negotiating with the contractor on the cost of speeding up the job by working overtime during the week and on weekends. He said the cost of that change has not been determined, and admitted he was not sure where such extra money would come from.

The public works director said the bypass had been tentatively ruled out by the city staff in initial planning on the project. This was done, he said, because of its cost and the expected difficulty of getting an easement across private property for a temporary road and bridge.

Increased Police Patrol Before Tiburon's Council

The Tiburon City Council Monday will deliberate whether to expand police patrols in the city on weekends.

Councilmen will meet at 8 p.m. in the multi-purpose room of Del Mar School.

City Mgr. Lawrence D. Rose recommends that an additional policeman be put on to cover the "grossly accentuated tourist and entertainment" activities which take place in the city on weekends.

The city now contracts with Marin County for use of sheriff's deputies as the city's police force. One deputy now is on duty at all times, but if councilmen adopt Rose's recommendation, two men would patrol the city from Friday night through Sunday night.

Rose also recommended that Sheriff's Sgt. George Barnes, head of the Tiburon sub-station, be promoted by Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos to the rank of lieutenant.

If promoted, Barnes would receive $753 per month, an additional cost to the city of $42 per month.

The council also will consider a query from the State Department of Fish and Game on changing the name of Hospital Cove on Angel Island to "Ayala Cove," after explorer Don Juan de Ayala.

Councilmen have received several letters protesting such a change. One was from Richard M. Sims, judge of the District Court of Appeals in San Francisco and former Marin County Superior Court judge.

Rose will also recommend to the council that Tiburon Boulevard be widened from Main Street to Mar West Street, with installation of curbs, gutters and sidewalks. Such a project, Rose maintains, would help relieve downtown parking and would help storm drainage there.

Woman Motorist Suffers Cut Lip

Donna L. Stahl, 33, of 9 Charlotte Drive, San Rafael, was treated at San Rafael General Hospital yesterday for a cut lip after her car hit that of Michael J. Lowrie, parked in front of his home at 219 Canal Street at 2:51 p.m.

Mrs. Stahl, who was eastbound, was unable to tell what had caused the accident, according to San Rafael police.

YMCA To Hear Expert On Sex

Teen-age dating, sex attitudes and relationships with parents and friends will be discussed by young members of the Marin Young Men's Christian Assn., in San Rafael and Dr. Evelyn Duvall, author of the book "Sense and Non-sense About Sex," at a meeting March 9 at 7:30 p.m.

The discussion will be part of a day-long program at which Dr. Duvall will meet with YMCA professional staff, laymen and parents and explore the role of the association in its work with teen-agers.

Dr. Duvall has been a frequent resource leader for YMCA national and local programs on family life education. Many of her books have been published by the YMCA in New York.

Johnson today said, also, that in Honolulu recently, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in South Viet Nam, reported to him on "his plans and his evaluations and his hopes—and I was very pleased with what he had to say."

He said this in reply to a question about reports of more encouraging news on the military front in South Viet Nam.

But Johnson refrained from "public predictions of battle strategy or what might result" because that would not serve the national interest.

And he refused to say directly whether, with reference to his assertion Wednesday night in a New York speech that "the tide of battle has turned," he meant that the allies now were winning in South Viet Nam.

Johnson also said:

—Despite strong objections among some senators to his Viet Nam policies, he is "rather pleased that differences are as minimal as they are" between him and members of Congress on this and other issues.

—He would not rule out possible further tax increases as a result of the Viet Nam war. But he said "we don't want to put the brakes on too fast" to check inflation.

—He thinks Congress "will act wisely" on Sen. Wayne Morse's proposal to rescind the 1964 resolution which backed his military program in Viet Nam, and he thinks he "still could carry out" U.S. obligations there under his authority as commander-in-chief and under U.S. treaty commitments without the resolution.

Mitchell's investigation sped up after audits of several small districts disclosed that directors were not properly elected or were not properly sworn in.

County Administrator Alan Bruce has called for a meeting with Mitchell and Gnoss to decide who in the county government actually is responsible for making sure special districts follow the rules properly.

The meeting was originally set for Wednesday but has been postponed to an indefinite date.

Mitchell, meanwhile, said he has finished checking into all but about eight of the special districts.

Sheppard Set For Washington Trip To Court

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard and his second wife, Arianne, plan to leave tomorrow for Washington where the U.S. Supreme Court will hear his appeal from his 1954 murder conviction.

The Sheppards had been due in Washington last Wednesday for arguments originally scheduled Thursday, but cancelled the trip when Sheppard developed a fever of 104 degrees. The court did not get to the Sheppard case on the docket and rescheduled it for Monday. Sheppard reportedly was sufficiently recovered.

Sheppard was freed in July, 1964, from the Ohio Penitentiary where he had served nearly nine years for the July 4, 1954, slaying of his first wife, Marilyn. U.S. District Judge Carl Weinman of Dayton, Ohio, freed Sheppard on grounds he did not get a fair trial.

County Offices Filing To Open

Filing to run for county offices and others on the June 7 primary ballot will open Monday at the courthouse.

Candidates will have until the close of business March 25 to file their official papers with the county clerk's office.

In addition to 15 county offices, the ballot will contain 10 state offices, a congressional seat, three seats on the Marin Municipal Water District and five seats on each major political party's county central committee.

Since he took the first bite of grass at his pasture in 1938, Blackie has become a celebrity and a landmark on the landscape of Marin.

The people of Tiburon and surrounding area rallied to his aid two years ago when his grazing ground was threatened by the bulldozers cutting the new Tiburon Boulevard. His pasture was saved.

Motorists stopped their cars today when they saw Blackie's condition. One woman, thinking Blackie had died, immediately put pen to paper and composed poetry to his memory.

Officers Ordered To Bring Sad News

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Defense Department has ordered the Army and Air Force to send officers to notify the next of kin of servicemen killed or missing in action in South Viet Nam whenever possible.

In a memorandum to the services yesterday, Deputy Defense Secretary Cyrus Vance noted that next of kin now "are being notified by telegram delivered by mail, messenger or taxicab." He said "such impersonal procedures" were not in keeping with the government's interest in the welfare of servicemen's families.

Marin City Blaze Blamed On Dryer

The fire that destroyed the home of Dr. Robert V. Welts Feb. 16 in the hills above Marin City was apparently started by by lint from a clothes dryer, according to a report submitted yesterday to the sheriff's office.

The report said lint had bypassed a trap and collected on a rubber hose near open wires, where a spark could have touched it off. The fire destroyed the house and contents at the end of Eureka Road. Loss was set at $53,500. The owner was away on vacation at the time.

air attacks over North Viet Nam were hampered by poor weather. An Air Force spokesman said all the bombing yesterday was by radar.

Air Force pilots flying F105 Thunderchief jets smashed at an ammunition depot and storage area five miles from the city of Vinh. Other Air Force targets included the Vinh Loc bridge and highway complex.

Navy Skyraiders and F4 Phantoms from the carrier Ranger hit a mountain pass yesterday 37 miles southwest of Vinh.

In the ground war, the Viet Cong attack on the U.S. Marine position began with a barrage of mortars and recoilless rifles. The main attack came at dawn when Viet Cong fighters managed to cut their way through the outer triple apron of wire.

As they clawed through the single inner wire strand the assault was halted by concentrated small arms fire and artillery support from the embattled Marines.

Fire In Oakland Home Kills Boy

OAKLAND (AP) — An infant burned to death but neighbors rescued five other children from a residence fire today.

The body of Michael C. Brown, 1, was found beside his bed when firemen brought the blaze under control.

Battalion Chief Lawrence Toellner said he was told that Felicia Bess, the adult living in the small frame house, had gone out about 2 p.m. Friday and had not returned. Police are trying to locate her.

Toellner said the rescued children admitted they had been playing with fire—lighting scraps of paper from the water heater pilot light.

San Quentin Inmate Still Not Recaptured

Patrick Shields, 34-year-old San Quentin Prison inmate serving a 14-year sentence for mayhem and assault with a deadly weapon, was still at large today, 48 hours after he walked away from the prison's minimum security ranch.

An Oklahoma-born Indian, Shields had served 11 years of his term when he disappeared before midnight Thursday.

Exiles In Lagos Jubilant Over Nkrumah Ouster

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — Ghanaian exiles today jubilantly celebrated the overthrow of President Kwame Nkrumah and promised to call for American and British help if he tried to regain control.

"Mark my words, he will try," said Oheneba K. Richardson, secretary general of the opposition Ghana United Party.

"America, Britain and Nigeria will be forced to give us backing if Nkrumah relies on the forces of communism to bring him back," Richardson said at a celebration party at his exile home here.

Reports from Accra said the new military junta under army Lt. Gen. Joseph Ankrah was rounding up Nkrumah's political supporters and jailing members of the now outlawed Convention Peoples party.

Collision On Go-Kart Injures Teen-Ager

Raymond R. Romanin, 14, lost control of his new go-kart at 4:25 p.m. yesterday in the driveway of his home at 2468 Vineyard Road, Novato. The cart carried him across the driveway and into the side of his parents' parked camper truck, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Romanin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Natale Romainin, was treated at Novato General Hospital for a scraped left leg and released.

Ulysses Grant, by profession, was a leather tanner.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Doctor-Patient Relationships

If a doctor is treating you, you want him to keep your private affairs in confidence even when he is called upon to testify in court. In this respect a doctor is somewhat like a minister or a lawyer.

California law says that without his patient's consent no physician can be made to testify in court. To claim this privilege, one must show the court that a physician-patient relationship exists, that is, the patient had consulted the doctor for treatment.

A court sometimes names a doctor to make a physical or mental examination for evidence, not treatment. In this case, no confidentiality exists.

In a personal injury case, say an automobile accident case, one can call upon the plaintiff to go to a doctor of the defendant's choice to check out his claims. Since this information is not for treatment but to get evidence, it is not confidential.

Recently the courts held that a doctor's records of his drug prescriptions were also privileged. No litigant (or even a state investigator in some cases) can go through the doctor's confidential records. However state investigators have access to some narcotics prescriptions which cannot be kept secret.

The privilege of confidence really belongs to the patient, not the doctor. Only he can claim or give up the privilege. After the patient's death the privilege is largely lost, but even so his family can still claim some protection under the privilege. And lawyers and the law make some exceptions. In a will contest, a doctor can testify as to his former patient's mental condition.

When the patient sues his doctor for the injuries arising out of his treatment, the law then presumes that he has waived his privilege of confidence. He cannot complain if the doctor testifies since he brought up the whole question himself when he brought suit.

Doctors who break professional confidences are subject to lawsuits. He may have breached his contract with his patient or have invaded his right to privacy. However the doctor may discuss your case with other doctors since to do so may serve your interest and be the duty of the doctor.

Noise Around The House Is Greater Than Some Offices

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's no place like home — for noise.

The din around the house is greater than that at most offices and factories, and often reaches the unbearable point on nerves and eardrums.

The kitchen is the noisiest room, and one expert on "unwanted sound" compared its noise to that in the cockpit of the old DC-3.

Modern appliances, with which no homemaker would be without, are the major cause of the whine, whirr, roar, slam and hum that make home sometimes sound like a boiler factory. And in most instances the vacuum cleaner is the noisiest of 'em all.

A REPORT on some of the noise hazards in today's households comes from the Institute of Life Insurance which found from a review of several studies that noise in the ordinary home is not only extraordinary, it can become downright dangerous."

Robert Waldron, who did the research and report for the institute, cited one study from the U.S. Department of Agriculture of noise in a number of Georgia farm homes during several different 24-hour periods.

The study, which had the advantage of avoiding big city background sounds, turned up the fact that the "quiet hour" after the kids are off to school and pop's off to work often is one of the noisiest.

AVERAGE NOISE levels during that morning period in one home reached more than 77 decibels, the measuring stick which scientists use on noise; in another, 80, still another, 81.

The study taped average noise levels in the 70 and 80 decibel range also from 7 to 8 a.m., noon to 2 p.m., and 5 to 9 p.m.

Waldron cited the comment from Dr. Lee E. Farr, of the University of Texas graduate school of biomedical sciences, that these noise levels commonly produce irritability and tiredness. Readings from zero to 60 are in the faint to moderate noise range, above that it's from loud to deafening.

Waldron said scientists generally agree that sustained levels from 95 to 100 are hazardous to the ears; from 100 to 120 can cause temporary deafness, and from 130 to 140 can cause permanent loss of hearing.

The slam of a door, a clap of thunder might register a high decibel but this is not sustained noise.

WITH TWO or more appliances going, however, the decibels go up significantly. One laboratory, testing a vent fan and dishwasher together, got an 88 decibel reading. With the garbage disposer going too, the level rose to 100.

Offices and factories generally rate quieter than home, Waldron said, because they are conscious of the better efficiency of workers in quiet surroundings. Offices, for instance, use sound-deadening ceilings, sound-absorbing wall-to-wall carpeting, draperies and upholstered furniture.

IN TURN, kitchens have any number of hard surfaces including a hard floor which help sound to bounce around.

Homemakers are now listening to an appliance before they buy, and in turn manufacturers are engineering in more soundproofing.

One other solution: Don't turn on all the noisemakers at once.

Mother Can Prepare Child For Encounter With Dentist

NEW YORK (UPI) — You expect your child to scream when he goes through a hall of horrors at an amusement park. The fright is part of the playful fun.

But you're hardly prepared for it when he screams during his first encounter with a dentist.

To a child not prepared, the experience can leave a lifetime fright imprint. The noise of the machines and the strange instruments put into his mouth make him dread going through such torture again.

The maker of a toothpaste in consultation with the dental profession, has offered these suggestions to make the first visit easier.

BEGIN A program of home dental care as soon as your child will accept it. Start with a soft toothbrush or cotton swab and a pleasant tasting toothpaste.

Explain the construction of teeth, their purpose and without too much fright, tell the ways teeth can be damaged. Your dentist might have a booklet that can help you with this chore.

Arrange for the child to meet the dentist non-professionally. Find out from other mothers when their children have appointments. Then, have your child accompany a friend who is a regular patient and does not resist going.

CALL AHEAD to the dentist's office. Let him know the situation. Perhaps he'll give your child a tour of the office and let him sit in the chair. On this first outing, mother should stay home. Let the child tell about his first visit.

Before the child's first examination, buy him a new toothbrush and tell him it is a present from the dentist.

Have a pre-arranged fun date with your child after the visit to the dentist. If he does react negatively, the prospect of a treat might calm him.

Guild Plans Fashion Show By Children

Plans are being made for the Blessed Sacrament Women's Guild, Santa Venetia, annual salad bowl luncheon to be held March 26 in the parish hall.

Highlight of the day will be a fashion show by the children of the parish, under the direction of Mrs. Raymond Gancel and Mrs. Walter Johnson.

Chairman is Mrs. Raymond Perkins, assisted by Mrs. Harold Curtis. Reservations chairmen are Mrs. George Bill and Mrs. W. B. Spellman, Hamilton Air Force Base.

Don Timoteo P-TA To Hold Festival

The Don Timoteo Parent-Teacher Assn. in Terra Linda will sponsor a science festival and book fair from March 8 through 11 from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., and 7 to 9 p.m. Materials and books will be on display in the school library.

The festival committee has invited students, parents and visitors. All areas of interest to children will be represented, including magnetism, nature, crafts, astronomy, seeds, maps and simple scientific equipment. The reading areas to be included are classics, fiction, biographies, adventure stories, mystery, nature and reference books.

The co-chairmen are Mrs. Harold Newman and Mrs. Louis Pagone.

The proceeds from the festival and book fair will be used to furnish educational materials to the school.

'Muddled Morals' Is Panel Topic

Gallinas School Parent-Teacher Assn. will have a panel discussion, "Our Muddled Morals" to be given Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the school.

Panel members will be the Rev. J. P. Sherman, the Rev. John O'Connor, and Bob Mc Innis, with M. O. Hill of the P-TA as the moderator.

During the evening an honorary life membership will be awarded by the P-TA.

SEW SIMPLE

Soft Draped Look Of Cowl Neckline Used In Lining

By EUNICE FARMER

I am making a blouse with a cowl neckline. This is made of lightweight silk and is an overblouse rather than a tuck-in blouse. I remember that you suggest underlining. How will this affect the soft cowl neckline?

Mrs. W.W.H.

Dear Mrs. W.W.H.

A garment with a cowl neckline usually is cut on the bias in order to achieve that soft draped look. You will cut the underlining exactly the same (bias). It will drape just as beautifully, in fact the extra weight of the two layers will give it more body and it should be even more attractive.

Is there any way to make a cardigan out of a slipover? I have found a beautiful silk print that matches an old sweater perfectly. I would like to make a jacket type sweater to go over a dress. I have seen these ready made.

Mrs. V.G.

Dear Mrs. V.G.

This isn't too difficult—and it is an excellent way to use your old sweaters. Often they are as good as new, but just don't go with anything.

1. Baste a piece of lightweight firm interfacing on the wrong side of the sweater from neck to lower edge at the center front.

2. Machine stitch two rows of stitching about ½ inch apart. I would suggest using a small stitch and it wouldn't be a bad idea to stitch each line twice. Be sure your sweater doesn't stretch out of shape. It may be necessary to place a piece of tissue paper over the sweater and stitch through the paper.

3. Carefully cut the sweater between the two rows of stitching. The interfacing will help keep the edges from becoming too limp. If you wish to change the length of the sweater, or the sleeve length, use the same procedure.

4. There are many ways of finishing the cut edges. You may bind the outer edges with a bias strip of your dress fabric. Finished braid or grosgrain ribbon is also used and is most attractive. Usually these jacket sweaters are lined. If you decide to line yours, remember to keep the lining slightly larger than the sweater so that it will "give." Use a very lightweight fabric for lining. Hope this gives many of you an idea for making something out of nothing.

Perhaps my catastrophe will help someone else. I cut a pattern just as directed, even though it seemed odd to me that the dart that came up at an angle from the side had a large piece cut out of it.

When I stitched the dart and tried the dress on, the dart was much too high for me. Since the dart was cut out, I couldn't do a thing about it. Why don't pattern companies try to avoid these "traps" we can instantly fall into?

Mrs. L.W.

Dear Mrs. L.W.

Unfortunately, these things happen to the beginner who doesn't realize the importance of measuring themselves before cutting. You must always measure from the shoulder to the tip of your bust and compare it with the same measurement on your patatern.

This is when you will decide whether the dart needs to be lowered. I would suggest that you avoid cutting the darts until after a fitting. The dart can be stitched and then the excess cut out after you are sure it's OK.

It's always a good idea to give yourself the benefit of the doubt when you are inexperienced.

"I just had to pass on this information about shortening 'stay-press' slacks. Instead of cutting off the trouser leg, just take a tuck under the cuff. In this way, you can let out the tuck when more length is needed without a mark showing."

This sure is easier than cutting the slacks and replacing the cuff. I asked a tailor about this and he thought it was a great idea—so, naturally, I am awarding this week's tailor trix pressing board to the lady who sent it, Mrs. R. M. Wippold, St. Louis, Mo.

Many of you will be making suits and coats in the near future. Sleeves seem to be the one detail that gives you the most trouble. You'll find my leaflet, "All About Sleeves," invaluable because of its easy-to-follow, step-by-step instructions. Send 10 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal and request this helpful leaflet.

Women Taking Part In Viet Nam Battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Remember the days when the WACs, those women soldiers, numbered in the tens of thousands during World War II? And the WAFs and the WAVES?

If you're slow to recall the exact names, they are: Women's Army Corps (WACs), Women's Air Force (WAFs) and — hardest of all — Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service (WAVES).

South Viet Nam has a relatively new counterpart, WAFCs, Women's Armed Forces Corps. Their strength is rising, and there's even a backlog of applicants.

"THEIR MAIN incentive," says a WAC who helped launch the WAFC training program in South Viet Nam last year, "is patriotism. They are quite articulate in stating their part in the Viet Nam struggle."

M. Sgt. Betty Adams told newsmen about the WAFCs at a Pentagon news conference. Basically the South Vietnamese corps' mission is like that of the U.S. women's services: Pulling together the country's volunteer womanpower trained in noncombat occupational skills.

SGT. ADAMS, 33, of Woodside, Long Island, N.Y., and Maj. Kathleen I. Wilkes of Cobbtown, Ga., went to Saigon in January 1965 to act as advisers to the new WAFC.

Sgt. Adams, overcoming a language barrier, helped launch the training center which opened near Saigon last March. Maj. Wilkes concentrated on policy decisions.

Most of the WAFC strength came in the form of Vietnamese women who had served in medical and welfare services of South Viet Nam's Women's Auxiliary Corps. Other members were recruited.

THE ENLISTMENT total last December: More than 1,000 with still others waiting to be processed.

"They are anxious to learn," Sgt. Adams said. "Their camaraderie and esprit de corps are apparent."

The Vietnamese women recruits are taught military law, first aid and map reading and undergo such field training as learning how to pitch a tent and set up a bivouac area. The pay is just under $20 a month, with a food and clothing allowance.

R. E. Coates Weds Karen Brodsgar

The First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael was the setting on Feb. 6 for the wedding of Karen Ann Brodsgar of San Rafael and Ronald Eugene Coates of Huntington, W. Va.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil J. Brodsgar of San Rafael.

Officiating at the 1:30 p.m. double ring ceremony was the Rev. Wesley A. Baker.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length gown of white peau de soie appliqued with white crystals and pearls.

Preceding the bride to the altar in a gown of aqua chiffon over taffeta was Marjorie Soldavini of San Anselmo as maid of honor, and Ronald McQueen of Los Angeles served the bridegroom as best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the San Rafael Elks Club.

The bride was graduated from the Terra Linda High School and is employed with the Pacific Telephone Co. in San Rafael.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Coates of Huntington. He was graduated from Barboursville High School in Huntington and attended the College of Marin. He is presently serving with the U.S. Air Force.

Following a wedding trip to Huntington, the newlyweds will reside in San Rafael.

Brown Pledges All-Out Third Term Campaign

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown told fellow Democrats today his quest for a third term will be "the greatest political campaign ever seen in this state."

"And in November we will take that campaign to victory at the polls," the governor said in remarks prepared for a meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee's executive committee.

Brown and Carmen Warschaw, Southern California Democratic chairman, attacked what they called "extremist infiltration" of the Republican Party, singling out the John Birch Society.

Mrs. Warschaw, in prepared remarks, said the volunteer California Republican Assembly, United Republicans of California and Young Republicans "are vying to see which can produce the most ridiculous brand of extremism."

"The Young Republicans booed George Christopher when he dared to attack the John Birch Society," Mrs. Warschaw said.

" . . . They gave Ronald Reagan a standing ovation, just to let everyone know where they stand."

Christopher, regarded as a moderate, and Reagan, a leader in Barry Goldwater's conservation campaign in 1964, are the leading candidates for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

Mrs. Warschaw also criticized the Democrats' own volunteer organization, the California Democratic Council. She referred to the organization's convention last week as "the spectacle in Bakersfield."

She said the CDC "has lost touch with our democratic officeholders and the grass roots Democrats who elect them."

She said the central committee, the official organization, can't count on volunteer groups to do the hard work of the campaign this year and must take the lead.

Brown said the campaign will be based on two principles:

What he called the "formidable" record of his administration and the Legislature's Democratic majorities over the past seven years.

"In the months ahead," he said, "we are going to see a lot of flak about the budget and taxes."

"If the Republicans want to cut back these programs, make them spell out exactly what they want to cut and by how much. Then the people will know what the alternatives are."

Reagan Hits State Budget As 'Sellout'

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Republican Ronald Reagan, in his most pointed attack yet on state issues, charged last night that Gov. Edmund G. Brown's $4.6 billion budget "is balanced on a pinpoint of time and on the edge of a cliff" and "represents a sellout of our future."

Reagan, GOP gubernatorial hopeful, told an invited audience estimated at 500 in the San Diego Hilton Inn that the budget for fiscal 1966-67 showed "sloppiness, incompetency and a tendency to sell out the future."

He appeared for the speech, which was televised live in San Diego and Los Angeles, despite a bout with the flu. He said his fever had reached 102 degrees and earlier in the day a doctor had ordered him to bed.

"We have a leadership gap in Sacramento," Reagan charged. "They've abdicated their responsibility and continually seek their answers in Washington."

"In the last eight years, the number of state employees has increased twice as fast as the population," he said. "The budget has increased four times as fast."

Actress Ida Lupino is a member of one of the oldest stage families in existence, the first in line being Georgius Lupino, who traveled from Italy to London in 1679 with a puppet show.

Convalescent Hospital Gets Use Permit

County Zoning Administrator Thomas E. Cordill has granted a use permit for an 82-bed convalescent hospital between Stetson and Maple avenues in Kentfield.

The development is planned by Joseph Pell and Robert Busse. The site is just east of the Kentfield fire station.

Neighbors protested the proposal at a hearing before Cordill Feb. 7.

Orginally Pell and Busse proposed a 99-bed hospital and later an 86-bed hospital. Cordill said there must be no more than 82 beds, that the building must be set back at least 20 feet from property lines, and that there can be no expansion until some access other than the one on Stetson Avenue is developed.

Agricultural Preserve Pact Signed

An agricultural preserve contract on 450 acres southeast of Nicasio has been signed by the owners, Henry F. Tomasini and Florence E. Knecht.

It is the third contract signed so far in Marin County.

The property is adjacent to a 150-acre parcel owned by John G. Kelly, who signed a contract last week. First rancher to sign was George W. Wheelwright, owner of the Green Gulch Ranch near Muir Beach.

Under the contract, the owner agrees to keep his property in agricultural use for 10 years. The county assessor can give the property owner a break on land assessment, disregarding development potential.

Ranchers have until noon March 7, to sign agreements to have an effect on property taxes for the next fiscal year, County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said.

KTIM-FM Switches To Higher Power

Radio KTIM's FM transmission increased nearly four times in power yesterday afternoon as a new high fidelity transmitter was brought into use for the first time.

General Manager Hugh Turner said the station now serves Marin County with 3,000 watts of power on the FM band. The increase, he said, enables listeners in Tiburon and Sausalito as well as the northern edges of the county to receive programs as well as they have been received in central Marin.

The 1,000th anniversary of Poland as a Christian nation will be observed next August in the U.S. and Canada.

Novato High School's Honor Role Recited

Honor roll for the fall semester at Novato High School was announced yesterday by Joseph Garguilo, vice principal.

During the fall semester, 100 students received a 3.5 grade point average or better, out of 1,900 students, he said.

Those who received straight A's, or a four point average, were: Steven Bowen, Scott Bulfinch, Dean Edwards, Wendy Kanoff, Diane Laferriere, Mark Moore, Barbara Palen and Leslie Sherman.

Students with a 3.86 point average were: Marcy Eisenhauer, Marie Katz, Bruce Palmer, Dale Pensotte and Mary Sturken.

Those with a 3.83 average were: Robert Anderson, Gertrude Berger, Sharon Gehlken, Candy Hagler, Leigh Jensen, Leslie Marks, Marion Mayrhofer, Kathleen, McElroy, Vivian Morse, Kerry Onderdonk, Michael Sanders, Lucy Steinkamp, Janice Thorn, Jeffery Wagner, Mary Jo White and John Zaloudek.

Three students, Janet Baker, Karen Morrow and Nancy Perlman, received 3.8 grade point average. Susan Scott had a 3.75 average.

Four students received 3.71 as grade average. These were Nanette Baget, Pamela Bugge, Henry Hicks and Peggy Warner.

Those with 3.67 grade points were: Janice Bueler, Carolyn Clark, James Cowen, Carol Cuzner, Robin Dickenson, Deborah Dohm, Joann Dunn, Stephen Freeberg, Ellen Gargiulo, Charleen Hale, Gretchen Henerlau, Gregory Hodges, Barbara Jones, Rodney Kinney, Nancy Jordan, Regina Lowe, Kathleen Lyons, Michael Magill, Gregory Rockwell, Nancy Swartz, Kent Tonnemacher and Mary Wallace.

Four students received 3.6 grade points. They were Sheila Barrett, Peggy Bennison, Karla Shannon and Kathy Wollam.

Students with 3.57 grade point averages were: Susan Dangerfield, Patsey Dunlap, Diana Helpenny, Mary Milbourn, Patricia Ray, Stephen Sexton, Anita Rose Soper, Nancy Ellen Sturken, Mike Wilson and Susan Yates.

Those with 3.5 grade points were: Karen Born, Joyce Campbell, Diana Castaldi, Leslie Catlin, Barbara Chronister, Pieter Den Heijer, Kenneth Donaldson, Robert Edwards, Lauren Elkin, Peggy Eldredge, Donald George, Sharon Heilman, Maureen Heyman, Sheila Hodges, Karl Johansson, Robert Johnson, William Katz, Linda Lahr, Joanne May, Michelle Moody, Teresa Moran, Corinne Ohagen, Carl Rechsteiner, Cheryl Rogers, Michael Roman, Sharon Sanders, Barbara Schrieber, Bonnie Jean Swan, Barbara Wagner and Charles Walker.

Youth Orchestra's Rehearsals Slated

Rehearsals for a performance of the Marin Chamber Orchestra, sponsored by the San Anselmo and San Rafael recreation departments, will be open to youngsters tomorrow and the following Sunday at 2 p.m. in Alexander Hall on the San Francisco Theological Seminary campus in San Anselmo, that city's park and recreation department announced.

The orchestra will present its first concert of the season March 13 at 4 p.m. on the seminary campus.

Jetliner's Pilot Dies After Landing

CHICAGO (UPI)—Capt. Clarence Cobb delicately touched the Braniff jet liner down at O'Hare International Airport yesterday. As he taxied the big plane, loaded with 54 passengers, toward the terminals, he slumped over. Moments later he was dead.

First Officer B. J. Self notified the tower after Cobb, 45, complained of feeling ill and took over the controls.

Bridge Board Allows Aide To Assist

The Golden Gate Bridge board voted 8 to 5 yesterday to allow its chief engineer to do consultant work for the Marin Transit District—but only on a limited basis and on his own time.

Last week directors met as a "committee-of-the-whole" and approved the plan to loan Arthur Jenkins to the transit district. Yesterday, however, several members of the board raised objections to the proposal.

Stephan C. Leonoudakis of San Francisco recalled that the district's attorney, Jerome B. White, had previously warned Jenkins might be involved in a conflict of interest with the transit district.

Leonoudakis offered a substitute motion enabling the district to cooperate with Marin County Transit District in a number of ways, but which would forbid outside employment by Jenkins. It was not passed.

Jenkins agreed that his sideline work might result in certain conflicts of interest on such issues as commuter bus bridge tolls, but said his first loyalty would always be to the bridge authority.

The majority of board members agreed that any mass transportation bus schemes supported by Jenkins could lead to a decrease in the number of private cars passing over the bridge and would, consequently, be an advantage to the bridge authority.

Young Republicans Facing Trouble On Pair Of Fronts

CORONADO (AP)— Republican State Chairman Gaylord Parkinson raised the possibility today of a state GOP investigation of the California Young Republicans.

With the YRs facing the loss of their national charter, Parkinson said the organization provides "the first concrete example" of a possible John Birch Society takeover of a segment of the Republican party.

He said if the group is cleared of charges brought by the National Young Republicans, "the field is still open for an investigation by the State Central Committee."

Parkinson spoke as the State Central Committee opened a weekend meeting.

The chairman of the Young Republican National Federation, Sen. Tom VanSickle of Kansas, recommended yesterday that the California YRs charter be revoked. He called for a hearing on the case April 2.

"If it isn't done to our satisfaction," said Parkinson, "then we reserve the right to take another look at it."

VanSickle wrote the California YR president, Mike Djordjevich of Daly City, that he was seeking revocation of the charter because:

1. California YR membership has dropped drastically.

2. Djordjevich and other new officers "have publicly stated immature and irresponsible views."

3. The state YRs have failed to transfer $4,700 to the national organization — money he said was owed from the 1964 Republican National Convention.

Djordjevich said the national charges were "vague and incomplete." He said they were the result of internal YR politics.

Parkinson reserved comment on the national charges. He talked instead of possible Birch influence in the YRs.

"With evidence before us of three top officers being members of the John Birch Society, we have before us the first concrete example of a conspiratorial effort . . . and if it is proved there is some sort of conspiracy, then I would say there is no place in the California Republican Party for the John Birch Society," Parkinson said yesterday.

Djordjevich has identified three of his officers as Birch Society members. He said they are: Martin Carlson of Ventura, executive vice president; Stanley Kompst of Pleasant Hill, national committeeman; and Norman Mark of Sutter County, treasurer.

He repeated the views that apparently angered the national YRs, saying the United States should get out of the United Nations and the income tax should be abolished.

But he said these views were supported by the 1965 National Young Republican platform.

He denied Parkinson's conspiracy charge and said the three officers who are members of the John Birch Society "hid nothing."

"There are fine, dedicated Americans in the Birch Society and these people who were elected with me are fine, dedicated Americans'," he said.

Three Wyoming Men Survive Plane Crash

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Three Wyoming men escaped injury when their light plane crashed on takeoff at San Francisco International Airport last night.

They were identified as Reymond Bickel, the pilot; his father, W. E. Bickel, and R. R. Mollring.

Religious, Social Views To Be Told

Members of six religious denominations will discuss basic beliefs and attitudes toward major issues in an eight-week series of public discussions entitled "Modern Religions — Facts and Focus."

Beginning Tuesday from 9-10 p.m. at Temple Rodef Sholom, Santa Venetia, the Marin Jewish Center, Congregation Kol Shofar, Temple Rodef Sholom and the Bureau of Jewish Education will sponsor the course and a course in "Basic Judaism" as part of the second year of the Joint Jewish Studies Institute of Marin.

In "modern religions," prominent clergy will present viewpoints on such tenets as man and God, sin, salvation, Heaven and Hell and conversion. They will discuss their religious position on intermarriage, social action, birth control.

Speakers will be: March 1, Rev. William Burns of St. Anselm's Roman Catholic Church; March 8, Dr. Fred Fisher of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, Strawberry; March 15, Dr. Darrell Smith, Mormon; March 29, Rev. Karel Botermans of the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Marin in San Rafael; April 12, James Cassen of the Bay Area Ethical Culture Fellowship; April 19, Judaism, speaker to be announced.

For the same eight weeks from 7:45 to 8:45 p.m. Tuesdays a course in "Basic Judaism" will be offered, to present the essentials of Jewish history, religious beliefs and practices. The instructor will be Rabbi Morris Schussheim of Congregation Kol Shofar.

Theologian Explains The Meaning Of Faith

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

What is faith?

Christian theologians have been trying for 20 centuries to formulate an adequate answer to that question.

One of the first attempts was made by the anonymous author of the New Testament's Epistle to the Hebrews. He said that "faith gives substance to our hopes, and makes us certain of realities we do not see."

To Martin Luther, faith was not so much a matter of believing in propositions as of trusting a person. "Faith," he said, "is a lively confidence in the goodness of God."

In our own century, the Scottish theologian, John Baillie described faith as "a primary mode of apprehending reality," which is as "self-authenticating" as the physical senses of sight, touch and hearing.

Latest to undertake the classic task of defining faith is the distinguished English theologian, Austin Farrer, warden of Keble College at Oxford University. His thoughts are contained in a book entitled "Saving Belief."

Dr. Farrer takes issue with the view, very widespread today, that faith is primarily an act of will — a sort of dogged determination to believe things for which we find little or no persuasive evidence.

"Faith is neither an attitude we adopt in looking for an object of conviction, nor an attitude we work up to bolster a conviction already lodged in our minds," he says.

"Faith implies genuine persuasion, and persuasion is not genuine unless it comes from the thing which persuades us. It cannot be got going by stoking up the furnaces of the will."

He also finds inadequate Luther's attempt to equate faith with trustfulness.

"How can an attitude of trustfulness — evidently appropriate to God if He exists—be appropriate to a decision whether He exists or not? We can trust Him if He exists, but we cannot, in the same sense, trust Him to exist."

Dr. Farrar says Faith is an "attitude of mind" which is open and responsive to the evidence of a creator that is writ large and small throughout the universe.

Everything that exists—from the galaxies to our own self-conscious human minds—is persuasive proof — to some — that behind all this there has to be "a supreme creative will. . .an infinite and changeless cause."

"Without the readiness of faith, the evidence of God will not be accepted, or will not convince," says Dr. Farrer. "This is not to say that faith is put in the place of evidence. What convinces us is not our faith, but the evidence; faith is a subjective condition favorable to the reception of the evidence."

He then suggests that faith is the "natural" human response: what really needs explanation is not the existence of faith, but the phenomenon of unfaith which blinds men to the evidence of God.

Dr. Farrer sees an analogy in the psychology of human relationships. Sympathy opens our eyes to aspects of another personality which would be quite invisible to us if we were cynical or suspicious. In the same way, he believes, disbelief may stem from "an ingrained prejudice, a subconscious resolve to count God out, an unacknowledged voluntary blindness."

This does not mean that disbelief is an act of willful wickedness. Just as "some men are so warped by circumstances that they are cynical and mistrustful toward other human beings through no fault of their own. . .so it is true that many men are incapable of faith."

"They can be cured, however," he concludes. "And God will cure them, whether in this life or hereafter."

Pastor's Car Still Working

A Nevada pastor who was given a used car in 1961 by students at Golden Gate Baptist Seminary at Strawberry has put 100,000 miles on the car in his ministerial work.

Rev. LaVern A. Inzer of Winnemucca was given the car, bought by student donations, after he had been fired from his weekday job as a bookkeeper for preaching against houses of prostitution in the city.

Inzer, once a student at the seminary, is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Winnemucca. He is still driving the car.

World Council Tells Viet Nam Peace Plan

All sides involved in the Viet Nam fighting have been urged to take action toward peace by the central committee of the World Council of Churches in annual session in Geneva, Switzerland.

The policy-making body called for a stop in the Viet Nam fighting as "the most effective step" toward negotiation, and outlined a 10-point program designed to bring the combatants to the conference table.

Another cease-fire was advocated with a "cooling off period" adequate to test the possibilities of negotiation, and a "considerably enlarged unit of the International Control Commission to ensure that cease-fire commitments are honored."

The statement also urged all-out efforts to bring the People's Republic of China into the world community of nations.

It further called for a stop to the bombing of the North, and an end to the military infiltration of the South by North Viet Nam.

The United States was urged to announce its commitment to a withdrawal of its troops "phased in accordance with provisions for peace-keeping machinery under international auspices."

The United States also was asked to review its policy of "containment of communism," and communist nations supporting "wars of liberation" were asked to modify their policies.

North and South Viet Nam were called upon to develop greater flexibility in initiating and responding to negotiation proposals.

Both the South Vietnamese government and the National Liberation Front (Viet Cong) should be accorded a place in negotiations.

Missionaries To Tell Of Philippine Work

Mrs. Howard Houston, on furlough from work as an American Baptist missionary in the Philippines, will speak at 6 and 7 p.m. tomorrow at the First Baptist Church of Mill Valley.

The Houstons had served in the Philippines since 1954 where Rev. Houston was field secretary for the mission at Iloilo City. Prior to their Philippine assignment, the Houstons were missionaries working in the Naga hills in northeast India.

Missionary To Show Slides Of Africa

Rev. Melvin A. Grams, who spent seven years as a missionary in West Africa, will speak, show slides on Africa and play recordings of a mission choir from Africa at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at Southern Marin Assembly of God, Mill Valley.

Reverend Grams, his wife and two doughters soon will return to the Transvaal in the Republic of South Africa to teach at a mission.

JAWBONE OPERATORS—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Chittick supervise activities at the Jawbone where college students can speak their minds. The Jawbone is a coffee house near Pennsylvania State University at State College, Pa. (AP Wirephoto)

Jawbone Encourages Students To Speak

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — They call the place the "Jawbone," maybe because it's an easy name to remember, or perhaps because "jawing" is its main purpose — to encourage students and other visitors to talk freely.

Actually it's a coffee house located in an outworn residence a block off the Pennsylvania State University campus. It was opened three years ago by the Penn State Lutheran Student Assn. Most of the people who go there don't know it is church-affiliated.

The men and women—mostly students and faculty—who frequent the Jawbone may be Protestant, Roman Catholic or Jewish. They may be Moslems or atheists. It makes no difference.

The aim of the student association is to provide a place for informal discourse. And informal it is.

The Jawbone occupies the first floor of the building.

The lighting is by candles stuck in bottles and by well-shaded electric fixtures.

A sizeable hamburger grill in one corner of the former parlor goes full tilt. A hood and small exhaust fan fight a losing battle with clouds of smoke from the grill.

Visitors sit around tables sipping coffee, tea or soft drinks and eating sandwiches and snacks, which are sold on a donation basis. The menu suggests the amount of contribution for various items and cautions: "Only your honesty shall keep us open!" There are seats for about 100 persons.

All the help are volunteers, except the man at the hamburger grill. The big nights are Friday and Saturday from 8 to midnight. This year Wednesday night sessions were added to encourage faculty members to attend.

There is no entertainment Wednesdays and the grill is closed. On weekends, some entertainment is scheduled, like folk-singing, poetry, satire, drama, readings or speakers. Entertainment is limited to two 20-minute periods so as not to cut down on the conversation.

Anyone is welcome to use the "open microphone" anytime to air his views. There also are displays of student art and sculpture, which can be purchased.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Chittick supervise the Jawbone, operating on the theory that what governs least governs best. Chittick has a year to go at the Lutheran School of Theology in Philadelphia and is serving his internship with the campus ministry staff.

Asked how the coffee house ties in with religion or a church program, Chittick said he felt the answer was that many young persons have found conventional church programs lack some things people need. The Jawbone is an attempt to supply part of that need through providing a place where they can speak out.

Evangelists

Church of the Nazarene, San Anselmo, will begin a six-week evangelistic drive tomorrow, during which time Rev. W. R. Wise will preach evangelistic messages during services to continue through Palm Sunday, April 3.

Presbyterian Denounces Merger Plan

NEW YORK—A recent proposal to merge four Protestant denominations, offered by Eugene Carson Blake before he was elected president of the World Council of Churches, has been denounced by a fellow Presbyterian who said the plan invited Christians to "form an enlarged country club for the protection of special interests."

Dr. Marcus Barth of the University of Chicago Divinity School, took issue with Dr. Blake's proposal for a union of Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians and the U. S. Church of Christ (which includes Congregationalists), reported an article in Redbook Magazine.

"The proposal," Dr. Barth said, "invites Christians in the U. S. to form a club or trust of the well-established, respectable, English-extraction denominations at the expense of union with the least of Christ's brethren, be they Christian or not. A union that does not embrace brethren of the left wing of the Reformation and by those churches whose existence is caused by, or reflects, the dreadful racial segregation of present-day America is not a worthy union."

Ecumenical "dialogue" is now going on among more than 30 churches or groups of churches.

Anti-Communist To Speak On Dead God Idea

Rev. Paul C. R. Peterson, formerly pastor of the First Congregational Church in San Rafael, will speak on "Is God Really Dead" at 7:45 p.m. Monday at the Civic Center.

Rev. Peterson is director of Awake America, a radio and pamphlet crusade against communism. He founded the organization in 1963 when he "became concerned about the menace of communism and the apparent indifference of the churches.

"I shared the same indifference for many years. When I graduated from UCLA I was a pacifist, a liberal and my sympathies were with socialism," Rev. Peterson said. Today he accepts the Bible "as the infallible word of God."

Marin Central Church of Mill Valley is sponsoring his talk.

Sermons Scheduled At Baptist School

Rev. C. Roy Angell will give a series of sermons at Golden Gate Baptist Seminary at Strawberry beginning at 9:50 a.m. Tuesday through Friday.

Rev. Angell formerly was pastor of Central Baptist Church of Miama, Fla. He has written five books on religious subjects.

Madonna And Child

ROME—What is probably the oldest painting in existence of the Madonna and Child is in the Priscilla catacomb in Rome.

Churches Aiming For Talk, Drama

A "Theater for Dialogue" is being formed by several Marin churches, its purpose being to present plays that will create a sense of dialogue between actors and audience.

The concept is to encourage discussion, after each performance, of values expressed in the plays, said Rev. James E. Symons, pastor of St. Andrews United Presbyterian Church, Marin City.

"This dialogue will serve as a stimulus for the personal expression of relationships in an age of impersonal communication," he added.

A general meeting will be held by the theater at 8 p.m. Monday at the Marin City church with auditions for two one-act plays, "The Public Eye" and "The Private Ear" by Peter Shaffer, to follow. Auditions will be held also at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the church.

Actors and technicians are needed, Reverend Symons said, explaining that the theater is not just for church members. Tom Leith of San Anselmo has been named production director. The theater has the backing of Rev. Karel Botermans, pastor of the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Marin, San Rafael, and Symons.

Further information may be obtained from Neill Whitman of 123 Terrace Avenue, Kentfield.

Missionary Family Prepares Trimaran For Sailing Seas

Missionary Joseph Conmack, 55, his wife, Irene, and their 6-year-old daughter, Esther, plan to weigh anchor next month for the South Seas to spread the Word of God, using their trimaran as a "floating church."

Conmack, a Seventh-Day Adventist, has his craft, Carol-Lee-Esther, tied up at Clipper Yacht Harbor in Sausalito, where he is busy loading gospel literature in plastic bags and food and water for the voyage.

Still needed, according to the missionary, is a "non-smoking, teetotaling, experienced navigator-sailor."

Conmack did much of the construction of the Carol-Lee-Esther himself in Stockton. The ship has 1,200 feet of sail and a Diesel engine. Mrs. Conmack, a former teacher, plans to tutor her daughter on the voyage, which is planned to last seven years.

Central Church Back In Mill Valley

Members of Marin Central Church will continue meeting at 2:30 p.m., Sunday, at Scout Hall, 177 East Blithedale Avenue, Mill Valley.

The congregation had planned to rent space Sunday afternoons at Lucas Valley Community Church but use of a room conflicted with preparation for the weekday nursery school, a Central Church member explained.

MINISTER'S IDEA FOR AVOIDING FLU

BURBANK (AP)—The Rev. L. A. Failing put this recipe for halting influenza in his weekly bulletin to members of the Lutheran Memorial church:

"Avoid crowds — Attend church."

Missionary Council To Conduct Service

The Women's Missionary Council will conduct the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at San Rafael Assembly of God Church.

The theme of the program, "Reach Out", will be presented by song, in pantomine and by speakers.

Cases Imperil Welfare Job

"The future of the church-related welfare agency well may be at stake in a series of court cases now in litigation," it is reported in a recent issue of "Together" magazine.

Local authorities in six states have initiated actions to cancel tax exemptions of privately operated homes for the aged.

"Focal point of the debate now going on is the legal definition of the word 'charity.'" Some tax officials argue that most homes are not truly charitable because residents pay for their services — and in some cases pay a large admitting fee.

Such a definition is too narrow, attorneys for the homes counter. "Church welfare leaders believe 'charity' encompasses a ministry to the whole person, regardless of his financial condition," the article says.

Rev. Howard W. Washburn, Methodist Board of Hospitals and Homes consultant on services to the aging, said that "taxing homes for the aged soon could lead to taxation of all privately operated welfare institutions, including hospitals and children's homes, the Methodist magazine reports.

Centennial

The hundredth anniversary of the Christian Science organization will be observed by church members this year. The centennial stems from events in 1866 when Mary Baker Eddy began her religious movement.

U.S. Pays Off First Victims Of H-Test

RONGELAP, Marshall Islands (UPI) —The United States government has run into some difficulty in closing a chapter of history it would like to forget.

A government mission paid nearly $1 million this week to 129 residents of this tiny island who were dusted with fallout from an H-bomb nearly 12 years ago.

U.S. Trust Territory Atty. Gen. Robert K. Shoecraft, who headed the mission, said yesterday there was only one person left to be paid.

He said the former resident of Rongelap is now living on remote Ebon Island, which can only be reached by boat. The payment will be made as soon as possible, Shoecraft said.

The H-bomb was exploded March 1, 1954 near Bikini, 100 miles away. Scientists miscalculated and the device was 50 per cent more powerful than expected.

The shot, set off on a tiny man-made island dredged up for the purpose, blasted millions of tons of water and pulverized coral miles into the air. The island vanished in the explosion.

The intensively radioactive dust contaminated a 7,000 square mile area and visited radiation sickness in varying degrees on 23 Japanese fishermen, the Marshall Islanders, and some U.S. servicemen. One Japanese died—the world's first victim of the hydrogen age.

Shoecraft and his party began to make payments Thursday to 124 persons or their heirs.

He said "there was little evidence of any desire to spend the principal and no person took more than $500 in cash."

WARDING OFF THE FLU

Fred Nunnally, Salinas High School freshman, yesterday tried out his own answer to the influenza outbreak that is sweeping California and elsewhere in the nation. Fred figures a regular, military-style gas mask is worth a try, with one out of four of his classmates absent with the bug. His classmate, Galen Jung, is stoically taking his chances without protection. (UPI Telephoto)

New Radar Due For Airline Use

NEW YORK (UPI) —The Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) yesterday outlined plans for the use starting this fall of the first radar system to pinpoint the altitude of planes.

Robert W. Martin, chief of the FAA's Air Traffic Division for the New York region, said the key feature of the system is the transponder, a special electronic device installed in planes to provide altitude figures for ground controllers.

Constant plane position reports, Martin said, are run through a computer and then appear on the face of a radarscope in the form of written letters and numbers. These figures identify the airplane, its track and altitude.

Retired Oil Executive, Wife Die In Air Crash

RED BLUFF (AP) — Ice formed on the wings of a troubled airplane yesterday and the craft crashed, killing a retired Pasadena oil executive and his wife.

William W. Valentine, 60, had radioed the Red Bluff control tower that his aircraft had a "partial power failure." The airplane turned and was on an approach to the airport when it crashed and burned fiercely in a wheat field.

The aircraft was three miles short of the airport. Valentine was thrown about 25 feet from the wreckage. His wife, Mary Stringfellow Valentine, was trapped in the flames.

Witnesses said the family's dog, a purebred McNab shepherd named George, jumped from the wreckage and circled the burning craft several times. He then ran away.

The Valentines, who have homes in Pasadena and Montague, a farm town near Yreka, flew frequently between the two points. Valentine had filed a flight plan at Montague indicating his destination was Long Beach.

Valentine, who had retired from the board of directors at Union Oil Co. in 1947, had 21 years flying experience and was licensed for instrument flight. The family's plane was an Aero Commander, a fairly large plane capable of seating six people.

Valentine radioed that the plane had lost one of its two engines. The airport said the plane apparently lost altitude and the wings iced up in humid air, causing the crash.

Valentine's son, William Jr., posted a reward for the lost dog, whose collar tag is stamped "Valentine."

Senator Demands Ethical Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate Ethics committee announced Friday it would consider charges against Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., that he carried out assignments for a registered agent of West Germany.

Dodd had asked the committee to examine allegations made against him by syndicated columnists Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson. He also wrote FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover asking the FBI to investigate the charges in his alleged relationship with Julius Klein, a public relations man and registered foreign agent.

Dodd said he asked for the two investigations "because I have absolutely nothing to conceal in this matter."

No date was set for the Senate hearings.

Japan To Try Cut-Rate Satellite

TOKYO (UPI) —Japan will launch an earth satellite March 26 in an attempt to become the fourth nation to enter the space race.

If the Japanese satellite is successfully put into space, it will be the most inexpensive ever launched.

Dr. Noboru Takagi, director of the Tokyo University Aeronautics and Space Research Institute, said the Japanese will try to put a globe-shaped titanium satellite about 1.4 feet in diameter in orbit along a course close to that of France's A1 satellite.

At a total expense of about $277,000, the satellite will cost only a tiny fraction of the millions the United States, Russia and France each spent to enter the space race.

Jail Escape Try A Bit Too Obvious

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Albert R. DeBold 23, of Weymouth, Mass., didn't get very far in his attempt to escape from the Hartford Jail.

DeBold was spotted right away yesterday as he started to drive off in a pink Cadillac owned by one of the guards.

Helen Bottel

Nationally syndicated columnist who offers mature advice on personal problems. Good-humored, never flippant . . . and obviously sincere.

ADVICE

with good humor
For adults • For teenagers

"Helen Help Us"

by
Helen Bottel

STARTS MON. FEB. 28 ★ I-J WOMEN'S PAGES

TWO COLUMNS IN ONE
- "Helen Help Us" 3 days per week for adults
- "Youth Asked For It" 3 days per week for teenagers

Every week day • On alternate days Helen Bottel deals with adult and teenage problems.

This new I-J feature is unlike any "advice" column you perhaps have ever read. It is good-humored but mature. It is never flippant. As a writer, Helen Bottel is both sensitive and realistic . . . and her concern for those whose problems she discusses is inherent in her evaluations and answers. Look for this interesting new feature starting February 28 . . . in the I-J.

Deals with adult problems . . . with the growing needs of young men and women

ATTENTION, PLEASE!
Do you want an organ in your home and the FUN it can give your ENTIRE family?
BUT
1. Don't want the inconvenience of going to a studio to learn to play?
2. Don't have the hours or time for private instruction in your home?
3. Cost of instruction too much for you or entire family when free lessons are over?

THEN WAIT NO LONGER
If any of these reasons are holding your musical enjoyment in check Pacific Organ & Piano's EXCLUSIVE new "FAMILY-FUN PROGRAM" is designed for you and all of your family. Children of all ages, mother & dad, grandmother & grandfather all CAN and WILL play the organ using Pacific's "FAMILY FUN PROGRAM."
Come in and see us now and find a lifetime of musical pleasure at your finger tips.

SMALL WONDER
a tight-running small home that is every bit as practical and charming as our little friend the Volkswagen (from whose advertisement weer—borrow our headline). Up in the hills on a view lot, just a few years old and in better than new condition. this is what a one bedroom home should be: just enough space to lighten your spirits and not so much that you become a slave to maintenance. Charming living room with raised hearth fireplace, view windows onto sunny deck; built-in kitchen, large paneled bedroom with beamed ceilings. Covered carport for your Volkswagen. Will also accommodate the Cadillac you buy with the money you save by buying this at a low $22,000!

Consider The Armadillo

who must carry his home on his back. Then consider this home so conveniently located and so well built that you can come and go and leave it right where it is, and so moderately priced that it'll never be a burden to you. Enough parables; down to the facts: 3-year-old California contemporary-styled 3-bedroom, 2-bath on a big lot in a quiet residential area. 2-car covered parking, big storage and laundry and workshop area, brick fireplace, hardwood floors, built-in kitchen, sliding glass to protective patio. An Armadillo would jump at this at $28,500, if he could!

INVESTORS ATTENTION!!

ONE GREAT AMERICAN SAID . . . The Renter who sings "Home Sweet Home" is kidding himself and serenading the landlord. Rent money once handed over is gone forever, but the money you put into Real Estate is still yours. It changes form . . . It becomes property instead of Gold and simply passes from your right pocket to your left.

Drake Celebrates Mar in Cage Championship

Independent-Journal Sports

THIRD SECTION Sat., Feb. 26, 1966 21

By RALPH CHATOIAN

"I said a year ago we would win it and we did," said a happy Carl "Red" Brown after his Drake High School basketball players had won themselves the Marin Athletic League championship.

The Pirates left no doubt of their championship class last night, rolling over the Marin Catholic Wildcats 60-32 in the Drake gym.

And Brown, the veteran coach of the Bucs, took the championship relatively in stride. He was not going to settle for anything less than the top. He had predicted a championship at the close of last season, and repeated his forecast before the 1965-66 season got underway.

The Wildcats made a game of it for the first quarter of last night's contest, leading the Pirates 13-10. Then Drake, realizing the game was for all the marbles, exploded in the second stanza for 21 points and walked off the court at intermission with a 31-19 lead.

The second half was a complete rout, the Pirates scoring 29 points to only 13 for the Wildcats, who made only 3 of 22 shots from the floor in the entire second half.

Five times the lead changed hands in the first quarter, the Pirates appearing tight and tensed. Then came the second period and Drake couldn't be stopped. Will Curley, Drake's fine guard who was elected team captain before the game, scored the basket that put Drake in front 14-13 early in the second quarter. It was a short jumper behind a screen set up by Jerry Sprout.

Then before the half ended, Sprout scored a couple of buckets of his own, Curley hit two more and big Bob Tobin three, a 20-footer, one underneath after a fine pass from Curley, and the third on a pretty little hook shot from five feet out.

One by one, Brown pulled his starters in the fourth quarter and as each one trotted to the bench, the screaming Drake students gave him a standing ovation. With still 3:46 left in the game, the last starter, Curley, was pulled from the court and the cheers for him were just a little louder. His cheers were well deserved, as he played quite a game as floor leader.

Curley and Tobin were the big point makers for Drake, big (6-5) Bob scoring 18 points and Will, 15. Tobin has just about every shot in the book, including a fall-away jumper which he hit in the third quarter. Curley made 5 of 12 shots from the floor and 5 of 6 from the free throw line. And his passing led to many more points.

Drake's other backcourt man, Bill Ingram, scored 8 points and made some good steals. He played a good floor game, in the face of four fouls against him as early as the third quarter.

Ches Bornia with 8 points and Pat Waltz with 7 led the Marin Catholic scoring. The cold Wildcats made only 11 of 45 shots from the floor (23 per cent) to Drake's 22 of 65 (34 per cent). From the free throw line, Drake made 16 of 28 (57 per cent) and Marin Catholic 10 of 26 (39 per cent).

Led by Tobin's 10, Drake controlled the rebounding, 32 to 23.

Drake completed the league slate with a 10-2 record, and was 20-4 over-all, including a 13-1 mark on its own court.

Brown, wanting his cagers to get a taste of some rough and tough competition before the Berkeley Tournament of Champions, has scheduled a scrimmage against College of Marin next Monday afternoon in Kentfield.

Marin Catholic	13	6	5	8	—32
Drake	10	21	10	19	—60

JIM MURRAY

The Greatest Cager Of All

Throughout history, whenever civilization as we know it was threatened, someone has come along to save it.

I mean, there was Horatius at the bridge. Washington was at Valley Forge. Wellington was at Waterloo. Grant took Richmond. Sergeant York took care of the Kaiser, and Churchill, Hitler.

The world of sports is no exception. Boxing almost perished with Jack Johnson, who had an unfortunate habit of beating up white people until along came Dempsey. Baseball had a dreadful scandal until there appeared Judge Landis and Babe Ruth. Football was almost outlawed until along came Knute Rockne.

BUT NOWHERE, at no time, did any individual do more to rescue a game from oblivion than William Felton Russell, a sixth-generation American, a highly proper Bostonian, and the best artisan the game of basketball has ever seen.

If it weren't for W. F. Russell, the game of basketball would right now be being slowly digested by Wilton Chamberlain, a public monument somewhere between Mt. Rushmore and the Empire State Building.

WILT CHAMBERLAIN'S exploits are all in the record book. Over 30 times he has scored 60 or more points a game. He scored 178 points in two games once.

He soars 7 feet 2 inches into the stratosphere. He weighs more than some small elephants. He is agile, supple, athletic. He would long since have turned the game of basketball into low comedy — if it weren't for Russell.

RUSSELL TURNS the game of defense into a high art. I have to think the greatest feat in all the history of sports is his holding Wilt Chamberlain to a paltry 14 points in one game this season. This is a turn of events not to be discredited. Chamberlain could score 14 points from a locked dressing room on an average night. To be kept away from the basket by a man 4 inches shorter and 70 pounds lighter has to rank with holding Babe Ruth to four straight pop-ups, flattening Dempsey in one round or getting three homers off Koufax.

RUSSELL IS a savior in the grand tradition of Ruth, Landis, Joan of Arc or that Dutch kid who put his finger in the dike. Without him, basketball would just be a playground game. Skins against the shirts or an exhibition series.

RUSSELL'S SKILLS are as recondite as a plumber's. They don't show in the record book. They show in the scorebook. His is the most extraordinary history of achievement in all of athletics. He has never—never—played on a losing team. Wherever Bill Russell showed up in sneakers and gym suit, his team was a winner. From McClymonds High, to San Francisco U., to the Boston Celts, the only time a team of his failed to win a national championship was when he was in the hospital.

THERE IS a belt manufacturer who annually takes it upon himself to identify the world's sports champion for the year. There is a national magazine which annually nominates a "sportsman-of-the-year."

NEITHER ONE of them has ever had a basketball player in the top 10. They run heavily to golfers and pitchers. They err. No one in the whole fabric of athletics dominates his event the way Bill Russell does. He is the most extraordinary athlete of his generation. If you don't think so, just ask Wilt Chamberlain, who knows what Napoleon felt like at Waterloo, Hitler at the bunker, and Dempsey at the Tunney fight.

10 Down, 2 To Go: Tars Clinch Title!

College of Marin's powerful basketball team clinched a tie for the Golden Valley Conference championship last night and can lock up sole ownership tonight.

When the Tars whipped Siskiyous 94-78 last night in Kentfield, it put them a step closer to becoming the first team to ever go through the Golden Valley Conference undefeated. They are now 10-0.

Santa Rosa J.C. defeated Yuba 86-63 last night to retain a slim mathematical chance of tying Marin for the title.

Tonight at 8 o'clock, Marin hosts Shasta and a triumph will clinch the championship. In a schedule change, the Tars wind up their regular season play next Wednesday in Napa. The game had originally been scheduled for next Friday, but Riemcke is expecting to be challenged for the right to go to the state tournament and wants a breather before that happens.

Marin led throughout the game last night but Siskiyous didn't give up easy. At halftime, Marin was in front 51-43.

With 13:10 left in the game, Siskiyou came up to three points from Marin, 59-56. With only 4:30 left, it was Marin 79 and Siskiyous 72. But a stout zone defense held off the Eagles and Marin ran off with the game.

Tar forward Rod Monti led all scorers with 25 points, but three other Mariners hit for double figures. Jim Halm had 19, Fred Arnold 18 and Don Hanson, a guard, chipped in with 14. Bob Corson, No. 3 scorer in the conference, led the Eagles with 21 points, and also pulled down 17 rebounds.

For Marin, Halm had 13 rebounds, Arnold 12 and Monti 11. Halm and Arnold, the Tars' 6-7 duo, fouled out in the fourth quarter but it was too late for the Eagles to do anything.

Marin made 34 of 73 shots from the field for 46 per cent, and Siskiyous went 28 of 73 for 38 per cent. From the free throw line the Eagles were fantastic, making 22 of 23, missing just one charity toss in the first half. Marin made 26 of 42 free throws.

Siskiyous scorers: Bill Newlun, 3-5-11; Bill Duchi, 4-0-8; Joe Dickson, 2-2-6; Jim Griffin, 1-5-7; Jerry Bates, 1-0-2; Joe Blevins, 6-2-14; Ron Quigley, 4-1-9; Bob Corson, 7-7-21. Totals: 28-22—78.

College of Marin scorers: Fred Arnold, 7-4-18; Rod Monti, 10-5-25; Jim Halm, 6-7-19; Lorry Galassi, 1-4-6; Don Hanson, 7-0-14; Bill Pandiani, 0-1-1; Rick Henika, 1-0-2; Larry Wolfe, 2-4-8; Bill Brody, 0-1-1. Totals: 34-26—94.

Two Mariners Win Wrestling Titles

Two College of Marin athletes won championships yesterday and two more earned runner-up honors in the Golden Valley Conference Wrestling Tournament held at Kentfield.

Marin sophomore Fred Fellows, a 225-pound football player from Mill Valley, captured the heavyweight title by winning all three of his matches and freshman Gary Arthur won the 152-pound championship by winning all four of his matches.

Both winners are graduates of Tamalpais High School.

Runners-up for Marin were freshman Brian Whitney in the 137-pound class and sophomore Ralph Terry in the 160-pound division. Whitney is a Novato High graduate and Terry a Tam alumnus, each winning two of three matches yesterday.

All four Marin grapplers thus became eligible to compete in the North Coast Section Junior College Championships at Chabot College in Hayward on March 5. There the winners and runners-up in each division will qualify for the state finals at Orange Coast College later next month.

In yesterday's team competition at the conference meet Sierra College captured the title with 86 points, followed in order by Yuba with 77, Marin 58, Santa Rosa 54, Shasta 43, and Napa 5.

Sixty-three individuals participated in the day-long event.

Tars Lose, Win In Tournament

College of Marin Tars split their two games in the Chabot College Invitational Baseball Tournament at Hayward yesterday, losing the opener 13-2 to Laney J.C. of Oakland and beating host Chabot 1-0 in a rain-abbreviated four-inning nightcap in which Tar pitcher Bill Clark had a no-hitter going.

Today's tournament finals were postponed until a later date due to wet grounds.

Friday's Sports In Brief By The Associated Press

GOLF

DURBAN, South Africa — Jack Nicklaus has pulled within two strokes of South Africa's Gary Player at the two-thirds mark of their six-round, 108-hole golfing tour of South Africa.

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Skee Riegel, making his first start in the $35,000 PGA Seniors golf tournament, fired a five-under-par 67 and took the first round lead.

MANILA — Celestino Tugot of the Philippines shot a 72-for a 36-hole total of 142 and led the Philippine Open by one stroke at the half way point.

TENNIS

TAMPA, Fla. — Top-Ranked Cliff Drysdale smashed his way into the semifinals of the Dixie International Tennis Tournament with a 6-0, 7-5 victory over Juan Gisbert of Spain.

GENERAL

CHICAGO — Multi-millionaire James D. Norris, business tycoon, co-owner of the Chicago Black Hawks hockey team, owner of the Spring Hill Farms racing stable, and promoter-owner of the now-defunct International Boxing Club, died early yesterday from a heart condition which had first developed a decade ago.

COLORADO GIRL NEARS WORLD SKATING TITLE

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — Brown-haired Peggy Fleming, 17, of Colorado Springs, Colo., made a firm bid today for the world title in figure skating, leaving behind last year's champion, Petra Burka of Canada.

At the end of the compulsory figures program counting 60 per cent toward victory, Miss Fleming had 1,233.0 points for first place among 20 women contestants.

Blushing with excitement, Miss Fleming said the most tiresome and difficult part of the program will come tomorrow in the free skating competition.

But free skating counts only 40 per cent toward the title and barring an unforseen complication, Miss Fleming should have no trouble winning the gold medal.

GOLDEN GATE MEET

Clarke Shatters Two-Mile Record

By JACK STEVENSON

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Australia's Ron Clarke, who flies thousands of miles to run a few, lived up to a prediction he wished he hadn't made and today owns his eighth world record.

Leading from wire to wire in the Golden Gate Invitational Meet at the Cow Palace last night, Clarke smashed the world two-mile indoor standard with a clocking of 8 minutes, 28.8 seconds.

"I was sorry I predicted a record because it put a great deal of pressure on me to do it," Clarke admitted. "When the time after three-quarters of a mile was almost 3:11, I didn't think I would make it."

"I never looked behind me the entire race. I thought it was Gerry Lindgren close on me."

It was, however, 20-year-old Tracy Smith from the Pasadena Athletic Assn., who dogged Clarke's heels as he broke Jim Beatty's 1953 world record of 8:30.8.

"I think," added Clarke, "that this will be my last two mile race indoors. I find it very hard to get across (the ocean)."

Clarke's best previous two mile indoors was 8:34.8 on these same Cow Palace boards a year ago.

He had to better that to beat the doggedly determined Smith, who ran 8:32.4, nearly 10 seconds faster than his previous best.

Lindgren, the Washington State freshman, expected to give the Aussie his toughest competition, finished third in 8:48.2 with Doug Brown of Montana fourth at 8:57.4.

A crowd of 9,300 roared encouragement to Clarke in his record try and he acknowledged the cheering when he said, "You all own part of this record."

Fractional times were 61.7 seconds for the first quarter mile; 2:05.6; 3:10.2; 4:13.8; 5:18.1; 6:42.6, and 7:27.7.

Clarke ran 1½ seconds behind Beatty's record pace after three quarters of a mile, but ahead of it after a mile and a quarter.

ANOTHER CARE PACKAGE FROM JAPAN

Giants Sign Ambidextrous Hurler

The San Francisco Giants, first American major league team ever to field a Japanese player, have sent a try-out contract to a 20-year-old Japanese hurler who pitches with either hand.

The ambidextrous wonder is Shozo Yoshinari, due to appear in the Giants' minor league training camp at Casa Grande, Ariz., by March 20.

The Giants signed three Japanese baseball players in 1964, but only one of them stuck — Masanori Murakami. The left-handed Murakami became their top southpaw reliever last season, but after an international contract dispute with the Nankai Hawks returned to Japan to pitch there this year.

"We have sent a Fresno contract to Yoshinari to sign," said Jack Schwarz, secretary of the Giants' minor league farm system. "He is paying his own way over."

Murakami also started for Fresno of the Class A California League. And scout Cappy Harada discovered both.

Schwarz added that there would be no repeat of the Murakami incident over Yoshinari.

"This time we have an iron-clad release from the Tokyo Giants," Schwarz declared. "Yoshinari clearly is a free agent."

Yoshinari, a 6-foot, 180-pounder, was signed to a bonus contract in 1964 by the Tokyo squad.

"I saw him pitch his Akita High School team to the Japanese National Championships, winning three games in three starts in the National tournament finals in 1964," Harada said.

"He pitched all three of those games right handed. I saw him again that same year, pitching left handed in an exhibition game for the Tokyo Giants."

Yoshinari has excellent control, keeps the ball low and throws good sliders and curves with either hand, Harada said, although the youngster does appear to get better breaking pitches right handed.

Seniors Vs. Faculty

Tonight's basketball game between the seniors and faculty of San Rafael High School will start at 8 o'clock.

Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for student body card holders.

San Rafael Jayvees Clout Novato, 51-35

Mike Donahoo scored 16 points—the margin of victory—in San Rafael's 51-35 win over Novato last night in their junior varsity basketball game, giving San Rafael a 9-3 final record against Marin opposition.

Illinois Expected To Cancel Clay-Terrell Title Go

Cassius Clay shown in various moods as he appeared at Illinois State Athletic Commission meeting yesterday. (UPI telephotos)

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO (AP) — Unbending Cassius Clay and the attorney general of Illinois today appeared to have killed Clay's scheduled heavyweight title match with Ernie Terrell here March 29 and probably chased it elsewhere.

Official cancellation of the bout was expected Monday when the Illinois Athletic Commission was scheduled to meet again.

A spokesman for Main Bouts, Inc., owning closed circuit television rights to the virtually-cancelled Chicago match, said three cities were receptive to taking over the bout.

The MBI spokesman, Bob Aaron, declined to identify the possible sites of a bout ahead of Clay's likely April induction into the Army, but a Pittsburgh promoter said he was offered the match by Clay interests.

In an incredible series of events yesterday, the scheduled Clay-Terrell bout in Chicago was blown skyhigh when:

1—Clay testily refused to apologize before the Illinois State Athletic Commission for his "unpatriotic remarks" in an outburst eight days ago when his Louisville, Ky., Draft Board reclassified him 1-A.

2—The three-member boxing commission hastily recessed until Monday after Clay's assertion that he didn't come from his Miami training camp to "make a showdown plea or apologize the way the press said I would."

3—Atty. Gen. William G. Clark minutes later declared the proposed fight was illegal anyway for violations of the Illinois boxing code.

Clay's performance at the somewhat weird commission meeting was typical of the unpredictable 24-year-old undefeated champion.

Instead of an expected contrite apology for his anti-draft blast in which he said that as a Black Muslim he wanted no part of the Viet Nam war, Clay in effect blamed the press for his adverse publicity.

"If I got any apologizing to do, I'll do it to government officials, the draft board and others," Clay blurted to the amazement of the commission which reportedly would have reaffirmed the fight if Clay was properly apologetic.

But equally strange was the fact the commission called the meeting to order some 40 minutes after the attorney general had told the group in closed session to inform the bout principals the fight was illegal.

Clark said the license of National Sports Promotions, Inc., carried the name of two individuals and under the Illinois Exhibition Act, a corporation must be represented by at least 50 persons.

Clark also added that both Clay and Terrell failed to meet compliance of the Illinois Boxing Act.

The later charge was not specified by Clark, but the attorney general pointed out that the Clay-Terrell contract violations came under a section barring licenses to fighters except to those of "good and stable moral character ... not likely to engage in acts detrimental to the public."

What would have happened if the commission re-affirmed the fight was not explained by the attorney general, who commented, "I'll stand on my opinion offered to the commission."

Immediately after the abrupt "recess" the commission was closeted with co-promoter Ben Bentley, his attorney, Frank (Spike) McAdams, and one of Clay's attorneys, Chauncey Eskridge.

Loud protestations were heard from Bentley behind closed doors, but he emerged from the session with the comment:

"Everything still is status quo, they (the commission) reached no decision.

Bentley reported he and his promoting partner, Irvin Schoenwald — who was confined to a hospital with a virus condition — already had 14,800 tickets printed for the proposed bout at the International Amphitheater and had advanced Terrell $5,000 for training expenses.

The commission meeting was lively if shortlived.

Chairman Joe Triner, 77, started out on the wrong foot, as far as Clay was concerned, by addressing him as "Cassius."

Clay retorted, as he did several times later, "the name is Muhammad Ali" — his Black Muslim appellation.

Clay's attorney, Edward Jacko, kept coaching the champ and prompted him to say: "I didn't intend to hurt anyone in Viet Nam or their children."

But generally, Clay insisted that his only mistake in his outburst last Friday was making it to the press.

"I came here because certain people advised me, and certain people would be hurt financially over what I said and you people — the commission — were put on the spot before your governor and other authorities."

Clay was scheduled to attend a Black Muslim convention here today and Sunday.

Runner-Up Tamites Cop Season Finale

A RED HOT FINISH BY S. R. BULLDOGS

San Rafael High School's Bulldogs, who started their Marin Athletic League basketball season on a losing note, last night ended it on a winning one, defeating the visiting Novato Hornets with surprising ease.

The final tally was 48-30.

That means the Bulldogs won four of their last five games, with the loss coming at the hands of Drake High's Pirates in a thriller 57-56—and the Pirates are the MCAL champs!

Though the San Rafael cagers had their troubles in the first half of MCAL play (they were dumped by the Hornets 68-44 in the first round) they were obviously an improved outfit in the second half of the schedule.

Last night, for example, Coach Diaz' cagers took command of the game in the first period and coasted to victory over the Novato quint, a team that was expected to be right in the thick of battle this year.

With Joe Cunningham and Jeff Allen leading the way, the San Rafael boys jumped out to a 13-8 lead at the end of the first period and led 27-15 at half.

Cunningham and Allen were the game's top scorers with 13 points each, and Allen's total included 6 of 8 attempts from the field. Bill Tetu chipped in with 7 points for the winners and snared 11 defensive rebounds, while Roger Widmer had 5 points and 6 assists. Allen also had 11 rebounds and Cunningham had 4 assists.

The Hornets mustered just 25 per cent from the field (13X52) while San Rafael registered 35 per cent from the floor (18X53). From the free throw line it was San Rafael 71 per cent (12X17) and 40 per cent for the visitors (4X10).

Al Parsons scored 10 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to pace the Hornet offense. Tom Owens and John Howard each had 6 points for the visitors.

Both teams wound up with 4-8 league records.

San Rafael	13	14	11	10—48
Novato	8	7	7	8—30

San Rafael scores: Jeff Allen, 6-1-13; John Farrar, 1-0-2; Chip Tyson, 1-2-4; Bill Tetu, 3-1-7; Dick Draney, 1-0-2; Roger Widmer, 1-3-5; Joe Cunningham, 4-5-13; Bob McLennan, 1-0-2. Totals: 18-12—48

Novato scorers: Tom Corder, 2-0-4; Tom Owens, 3-0-6; Al Parsons, 4-2-10; Ev Fritz, 2-0-4; John Howard, 2-2-6. Totals: 13-4—30

Indians In Win Over Terra Linda

Hoping that Marin Catholic would upset the Pirates of Sir Francis Drake High School, the Tamalpais Indians last night rallied to defeat the visiting Terra Linda basketballers, 57-52.

But Drake beat the Marin quint 60-32, so instead of a tie that would have resulted in a playoff for a berth in the Berkeley Tournament of Champions, the Indians of Tam had to settle for second place with a final 9-3 Marin Athletic League record—which really isn't too bad for a team that wasn't expected to finish much higher than fourth or fifth place at the start of the season.

Paced by Steve Woodward's 21 points, the Indians—who had taken a 2-point lead at the end of the first period, then fell behind at intermission 34-33—outscored the Trojans 17-11 in the third period, pulling 7 points ahead 50-43.

The Trojans, who were not about to call it quits, made a desperate drive in the final stanza but with Woodward ripping the hoop from long range and Honor Jackson dominating the boards, the Tam quint held on for the win.

"Woody's" 21 points were high for the game and Mike Biber chalked up 12 markers for the victors. Jackson had just 5 points but played a good all-round game while grabbing 8 rebounds.

The Tam cagers outrebounded the Trojans 22-21.

From the field it was 47 per cent for the winners and, after shooting a sizzling 62 per cent in the first half, the Trojans shot just 12 per cent in the second half to wind up with 37 per cent.

The Tam cagers committed 20 fouls and the Terra Linda quint capitalized by scoring 27 points from the charity line while shooting 74 per cent. The Indians shot 63 per cent from the free throw line.

Leading Terra Linda scorers were Glen Olden with 19 points and Fred Daniele with 17. Both boys played outstanding games for the Trojans.

The Trojans, who ended their season with a 4-8 MCAL record, clipped the Tam boys when the two teams met in the first round 56-54.

Tamalpais	15	18	17	7—57
Terra Linda	13	21	7	11—52

Tamalpais scorers: Mike Biber, 6-0-12; Steve Johnson, 3-1-7; Steve Woodward, 9-3-21; Russ Williams, 3-0-6; Ron Gilliam, 3-0-6; Honor Jackson, 1-3-5. Totals: 25-7—57.

Terra Linda scorers: Brian Perron, 1-6-8; John Ahern, 0-2-2; Craig Hill, 1-0-2; Steve Congdon, 2-0-4; Fred Daniele, 3-11-17; Glen Olden, 5-8-19. Totals: 12-27—52.

STANFORD, UCLA WIN, SLUG IT OUT TONIGHT

Oregon State carried the Pacific Athletic Conference basketball battle to fifth-place Washington State this afternoon, confident of retaining its already commanding 8-2 lead.

A four-way tie for second place dissolved last night — but perhaps not permanently — when UCLA and Stanford won their conference games. An idle Oregon squad slipped into third on a technicality and a defeated USC Trojan squad landed in fourth.

The standings were far from definitive, however: UCLA and Stanford, both 7-4 in conference play, slug it out tonight at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion; Oregon, 6-4, is considered a likely bet tonight against 2-8 Washington in Washington, and USC, 6-5, is unlikely to be embarrased by lackluster California, which reposes in the PAC cellar at 2-9.

The Bruins' Mike Lynn, Kenny Washington and Freddie Goss spurred UCLA to a 95-78 victory over the California Bears in Pauley last night.

Lynn scored 22 points, Goss 20 and Washington 18 in desperately fanning the Bruin hopes for a fourth consecutive league title.

The Bruins relaxed their zone press for a while in the first half and the Bears took a brief 26-25 lead with four minutes remaining. But UCLA clamped on the press again and roared back to a 40-31 halftime lead.

Bruin coach John Wooden, looking ahead to tonight's game against Stanford, said he planned "to play the same way we played up there, only do things better." Wooden, whose squad lost 74-69 in its last meeting with Stanford, observed optimistically that the Bruins' famed press always seems to work better at home than on the road.

Stanford's Indians stalled in the final minutes last night to hang onto an 82-71 victory over Southern California and their slim chance for the PAC title.

The Indians, tied 58-58 in the second half, rallied for nine straight points, to take a 76-58 lead with less than seven minutes left.

From there on they slowed down the game and kept USC on ice. Ray Kosanke, who scored 18 points, sparked the Indian victory by a strong defensive performance against Trojan John Block, who sank 25 points in the first half and then collected only three in the second, after Kosanke put him under wraps.

Barry's 42 Paces S.F. Past Cincy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The San Francisco Warriors play their season's concluding game with the Cincinnati Royals tonight in the National Basketball Assn. game at Civic Auditorium.

The Warriors have won five of the nine meetings so far this season with the third-place club in the eastern division. San Francisco took the edge last night in a 125-119 victory over the Royals.

Rookie Rick Barry hit six free throws in the last four minutes to finish with 42 points for the Warriors. Tom Meschery grabbed eight of his 15 rebounds in the concluding minutes to preserve the Warriors' slim four to six point lead.

Terra Linda Frosh Whip Tam, 49 To 25

Terra Linda's freshman basketball team ended its season yesterday with a 49-25 victory over Tamalpais' frosh. Mark Clark scored 12 points for Terra Linda and Pat Purcell added 11 more.

The Trojan Babes finished with a 9-3 record in the mythical Marin Athletic League standings. For the whole season, the Terra Linda frosh were 19-5.

This Is It: USF Vs. Pacific '5' Tonight

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tonight, as they say in the melodramas, is the showdown between those two deadlocked basketball foes who have been riding herd in the West Coast Athletic Conference — the University of San Francisco Dons and the University of the Pacific Tigers.

Both the Dons and Tigers hold 10-1 basketball records in the WCAC and have left other contenders by the side of the trail.

The game, 8 o'clock at USF, pits the likes of Pacific's rebounding genius Keith Swagerty and junior ace Bob Krulish against the balanced Dons, who have won 33 straight home triumphs.

USF ran its string to 33 with an 88-67 victory over St. Mary's last night as Erwin Mueller dunked in 17 points and all Don starters hit double figures.

UOP, meanwhile, ran over Santa Clara 73-68. The Broncos upset the Tigers in their last outing for UOP's only conference defeat. USF's only loss was to UOP at Stockton last Feb. 12 by an 88-78 count.

Swagerty hit 17 points and Krulish 24 for UOP.

Clarke Smashes Record; Grelle In 4:00.3 Mile

At that point, the surprising Smith ran only a few steps behind.

The Australian won the award as the meet's outstanding athlete for the second consecutive year. Still, there were several other outstanding performances.

Veteran miler Jim Grelle set a new meet and Cow Palace records with a mile time of 4:00.3.

So did triple jumper Art Walker with a 52-foot, 5¾-inch effort on his final attempt. Pole vaulter John Pennel cleared 16-5 on his first try at the height but then missed three at 17-¼, attempting to better his own indoor world record.

Little Wayne Hermen of San Jose State ran the 160-yard dash in 16.4 seconds, fastest ever for an event unique to the Cow Palace.

He also placed second in the 60 and ran on the San Jose mile relay team, which set meet and Cow Palace records with a time of 3:19.7.

TONIGHT AT 'PALACE'

Seals Face 'Must Win' Situation Vs. Totems

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The San Francisco Seals tonight battle the Seattle Totems, whose position they covet in the Western Hockey League standings.

The Seals, last in the WHL, are aiming for the Totems' fourth-place berth, which is the cutoff for making the post-season playoffs.

Tonight's game at the Cow Palace is regarded as a "must" game by Coach Charley Burns.

"Seattle, with their seven point lead in fourth," Burns says, "can win one game to our three or four and still stay ahead."

But the Seals are also troubled by injuries. Jack McCartan, with a pulled groin, plans to take the warmup practice, then say if he can play in regular action. Ron Schock, with a bruised instep, is even more doubtful.

Stan Gilbertson, a rookie, will start at left wing.

TELEVISION REVIEW

Teen-Age Conformity Surprises Watchers

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —You can bet what the main topic of conversation will be for the immediate future in Webster Groves, Mo.: That CBS-TV documentary about the town that was broadcast last night.

If the network's depiction of the well-to-do St. Louis suburb as a hotbed of conformity was even close to accurate—and if most of the youngsters are really as lacking in adventure as they indicated—there should be some soul-searching.

For all I know, the program may have been quite accurate, but I am personally hesitant to base my judgment of anything or anybody on a one-hour television summary. You cannot compress a town into an hour —only some aspects of it —for who knows what intrepid souls might have been overlooked? However, where the program most surely hit home, and gathered its undeniable strength, was in using this suburban setting for illustrating a nation-wide situation where some towns may unintentionally be denying the flowering of the inquisitive spirit that makes men and women whole.

The name of the documentary was "Sixteen in Webster Groves," and the idea was to examine the attitude of some 16-year-olds (those just old enough to drop out of school) toward "their parents, education, marriage and their futures." Rather than finding a rebellious lot of youngsters, the indications were that most of them fell into almost the extreme opposite category, middle-aged in their views well before their time, frequently depressingly.

Yet there was definite sympathy toward the youngsters and the pressures on them for exceptional grades and getting ahead. The most critical—and occasionally ridiculing — sorties in the hour were aimed, by implication, at some of the parents. A high police official, interviewed about the subject at hand, said: "These people have been regimented so much they just don't know what self reliance is."

There were some droll aspects to last night's hour. Most of the nation is concerned about kids who are raising the dickens (as most of the nation is each generation)—but good old CBS-TV is worried about those who aren't. I must confess that I also found little to be fearful of concerning the youngsters except for their lack of adventure—admittedly a serious shortcoming. But in a way I wasn't too upset that there are still some people who care deeply about a continuity of some old-fashioned formalities of life.

The trouble, CBS-TV indicated, is that these formalities are drawn so tightly at times that they amount to a form of suffocation. Don Marquis, the columnist, once wrote:

"My general advice to the young is always to rush in where angels fear to tread. Find a place where no angel has ever set his or her foot and camp there. The truly competent angel should not be afraid to go anywhere; but angels are not what they used to be. The very fact that angels fear to tread in a place shows that it needs pioneering; youth must do it, and make it safe for the angels; coax them in."

THE CHANNEL SWIM: Dean Martin's NBC-TV series was officially renewed for next season . . . The same network's "Daniel Boone" western also will be back . . . And so will another NBC-TV oater, "Laredo" . . . At CBS-TV, meanwhile, Garry Moore will return with a new one-hour variety series.

Sen. Robert Kennedy is interviewed on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" tomorrow, replacing the originally scheduled Rep. Melvin Laird . . . Actor Glenn Ford, a long-time television holdout, will be the narrator of ABC-TV's March 10 one-hour documentary about the Navy's unorthodox role in the Viet Nam war.

Nancy Sinatra appears tomorrow on CBS-TV's Ed Sullivan show to sing her hit song, nation's most popular records, "These Boots are Made for Walkin'," currently one of the . . . Singer-pianist Ike Cole presents a song tribute to his brother, the late Nat (King) Cole, on the same network's Red Skelton hour March 8.

New England Hit By Heavy Snow: Skiers Happy

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

A fresh, heavy snowfall smacked New England today, in the wake of a crippling blanket of wet, heavy snow that fell yesterday.

Fifteen inches of new snow fell at Greenville, Maine, in a 12-hour period, to bring the total snowfall to 50 inches.

Rumford, Maine, was covered by 40 inches of snow today, including 16 inches of new snow that fell during the night. Gale force winds whipped the snow into huge drifts and halted or delayed transportation.

Schools throughout the East were closed down and ski slope operators reported a booming weekend business.

More than 14 inches of snow fell at Bolton, Conn., yesterday. Twelve inches blanketed the Hudson Valley and Albany area in upstate New York. Four inches fell on New York City, seven inches on Boston.

The weather bureau said the snow would continue in Maine today. Clearing weather was predicted for the rest of the East, although snow flurries would be present from the eastern Great Lakes to the Appalachians and New England.

Woman Reports Batman Crime

CHICAGO (AP) — Zwot!

"His face was covered with a Batman mask and he was wearing bat gloves," Mary Green told police in describing a man who robbed her yesterday.

Mrs. Green, 45, said she was returning through an alley to her apartment from a neighborhood grocery when a man approached partly costumed like Batman on television.

She told police he put his hand over her mouth and grabbed her purse, which contained $3 and personal papers.

Bettini May Also Enter County Race

San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini may make it a three-way race for county supervisor in the first district.

Bettini said today he is "seriously considering" candidacy for the job now held by Byron W. Leydecker, chairman of the board.

Leydecker has said he will probably run again, and former San Rafael Mayor John F. McInnis, Leydecker's opponent in 1964, has told friends he will run again.

No candidate has yet filed or made formal announcements, however.

Bettini, in the insurance business, served on the San Rafael Board of Education for 10 years before being elected mayor last year.

NEW ADMIRAL — John H. Hoefer of Belvedere has been promoted from captain to rear admiral in the Naval Reserve, the Navy announced today. He and Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-San Francisco, were among 18 reserve officers promoted to rear admiral throughout the country. Hoefer is president of a San Francisco advertising firm. He was a Navy lieutenant commander during World War II, serving in Asia and the South Pacific, and now commands the Twelfth Naval District's public affairs company.

Fowl Cholera Sweeping State

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An outbreak of fowl cholera has killed some 60,000 birds from the Oregon border to the Salton Sea, the State Fish and Game Department reports.

The department said yesterday that the disease has hit ducks, geese and seagulls.

The disease, the report said, is different from the human form of Asiatic cholera.

The department suggested draining waterfowl areas to check the spread of the disease.

Milton S. Cohen, superintendent of the Larkspur School District, will speak on "Russia's Commitment to Education," describing his trip to the Soviet Union last spring, at 3:45 p.m. Monday at the Ross Grammar School. The talk will be sponsored by the Ross School District Teachers Assn.

Police Say Sailor Passed False Check

San Rafael police yesterday arrested Robert B. Lane, 24, of Treasure Island, on a charge of passing a false check for $428.40 Aug. 21 at Gem Auto Sales, 1530 Fourth Street, when he purchased a used car.

He was being held in restricted quarters at Treasure Island for being absent without leave. Bail was set at $550.

Installation Of Seat Belt May Mean Use Required In Lawsuit

VAN DELLEN

Wisconsin is one of 20 states that adopted legislation requiring installation of seat belts in cars sold in the state.

Dr. J.W. McRoberts of Sheboygan, Wis., assumes that since it is mandatory to install seat belts, it also must mean that all drivers and front-seat passengers are required to use them.

A WISCONSIN Circuit court jury recently decided that a person involved in an accident was casually negligent because she was not using the device at the time of the mishap. The woman sustained back injuries and the jury reduced the award she would have received by 10 per cent because of her negligence.

The trial judge stated that seat belts were installed for use and that the legislature intended that they be used in certain circumstances. What's good for the goose is still good for the gander.

PEOPLE SWALLOW the strangest things and medical journals have published many reports on unusual items that have been retrieved from the stomach and intestines.

We can expect this behavior in toddlers and in oldsters with dentures. Most adults who make the medical literature as swallowers of unusual articles have a subnormal mentality or are psychiatric cases attempting suicide.

The latest was reported in the Journal of the Indiana State Medical association. A 54-year-old man swallowed a large tablespoon that went as far as the upper part of the esophagus and no further.

X-RAYS REVEALED that the spoon handle was still in the lower throat. It was visible thru a laryngoscope and was removed with considerable difficulty.

He had attempted suicide 20 or more times. The victim was an old hand at swallowing objects including sponges and smaller spoons.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

HEREDITARY

Mrs. P. R. writes: We have Huntington's chorea in the family on the in-law side. Is there any known cure or way to help these unfortunate people?

REPLY

There is no cure, to my knowledge, except through eugenics. This family trait will exist as long as the family continues to propagate. Fortunately the disease does not appear in all the offspring but it occurs with enough regularity to realize the possibility.

DIETARY DILEMMA

E. R. writes: What can an underweight person eat that will not make his acne worse? I have been told to eat sweets and starchy foods but when I do, my complexion suffers.

REPLY

You should know what makes the acne worse. Eat fewer sweets and greasy foods and more bread, jam, macroni, and dairy products along with your regular diet. A glass of milk between meals often helps the weight problem.

MENOPAUSE AND VISION

R. B. writes: Can change of life or high blood pressure affect the eyesight? A woman of 58 who has both conditions finds she cannot see as well as before, even with glasses.

REPLY

High blood pressure, but not the menopause, may impair vision. Age itself is a possible factor, because, in other conditions which affect the older person, glasses may be of little value. Cataract is an example.

TONGUE CRACKS

Mrs. A. writes: Do cracks in the tongue mean a serious disease?

REPLY

Not necessarily. In geographic tongue, the organ is partitioned by deep furrows and it looks terrible but works in a normal fashion.

Punishment Suggested For De Gaulle Cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. George Smathers, D-Fla., wants to get even for French President Charles de Gaulle's plans to withdraw from NATO by placing some sort of restriction on U.S. tourist travel to France.

"If De Gaulle doesn't want our troops in France or any part of the NATO alliance, I don't think he should get the money Americans spend in Paris," Smathers said at a Senate Finance Committee hearing yesterday. "We could have some kind of tax on them or a passport restriction."

College Realty Deal Hurt By Proceedings' Secrecy

The unsuccessful attempt by College of Marin to negotiate for the former College Market property is evidence that "quiet" negotiation by lawyers claiming lawyer-client privilege is not always fruitful.

The advisability of having public agencies use the county's legal counsel as a real estate agent and negotiator should be seriously questioned.

In general, negotiations for real estate are best handled by real estate brokers, not by lawyers, as the current problem on the College Avenue property would indicate.

This is what apparently happened: Negotiations for the property were started by County Counsel Douglas Maloney on behalf of the College last April.

In July, the college board authorized Maloney to file a condemnation suit if necessary. Maloney continued to negotiate.

On or about Aug. 26, the owners sold the property for some $35,000 to the Catholic Archdiocese of San Francisco, and the papers went into escrow. On Aug. 31, Maloney filed a condemnation suit, but the property owners did not get a notice of the suit until Sept. 4, the day after the sale to the Catholic Archdiocese had been consummated.

In brief, then, while the college "negotiated" for about four months, the property was snapped up from under its nose by another purchaser. And this purchaser did not know of the college condemnation suit until after the purchase had been completed.

The Catholic Church bought the property for its Catholic student group, the Newman Club. Church spokesmen report that considerable money and material have gone into the property, and it may now be worth almost double what they paid for it.

Now, the college is in the position of having to negotiate with new owners. We have a case here where a public agency, which could have acquired or condemned the property last year, let it slip through its fingers and is now faced with buying from the new owner at perhaps double the price.

This is a far cry from exaggerated claims often made by public agencies that hush-hush negotiation for land will "save taxpayers money." In this case, the negotiations were conducted so quietly that the parties involved apparently did not know what was going on.

Real estate brokers are sometimes accused by lawyers of infringing into the field of law when they draw up deeds of trust and other legal documents.

In the current college property case, the reverse is true. We find a legal man serving as real estate agent, haggling for property—a field which is not exactly his forte.

In either case, the results usually prove unsatisfactory.

This experience shows that hush-hush negotiation is not always the "money saver" that proponents of secrecy would have you believe, and that lawyers should not be given free rein to act as real estate agents for public agencies.

Buzzing The Blue Jays

A well-known Mill Valley bird watcher, who prefers to be anonymous, has developed a technique of ridding his bird feeder of overly greedy Jays. He simply places a buzzer on the feeding tray and connects it to a push-button on his dining room table. When the Jays begin chasing away the other birds, he merely yawns and touches a finger to the button. The Jays panic and fall all over themselves in their rush to leave.

Jays are well-known tree-top bullies. Less aggressive birds have little chance in getting their share of the food when the Jays are about. But with his buzzer, our friend can drive away the Jays at will.

Indeed, he reports the Jays are now so cautious about approaching the feeder, he is losing some of his original glee. It's a good idea, nonetheless.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to considerate motorists who blink their car lights as a friendly warning to an oncoming driver who has forgotten to turn on his headlights.

BOUQUETS, during Engineers' Week (this week), to the professional engineers, for encouraging youth to enter the scientific field and helping America retain the lead in technological achievements.

BOUQUETS to county firemen, sheriff's deputies, and a national park ranger for plucking two men off rocks at Pierce Point before the tide closed in on them.

A BOUQUET to Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, for filling in admirably as president pro-tem of the State Senate during the illness of Sen. Hugh M. Burns.

A BOUQUET to David Scott Grifteath, 17, Tam High School senior, for winning a $600 scholarship at a banquet in San Francisco climaxing Engineer's Week.

BOUQUETS to Marin members of the Constitution Revision Commission, notably John A. Busterud of San Rafael, for their part in revising the bulky state Constitution.

BRICKBATS to the sloppy operation of some of our small special assessment districts, which are so confused they don't know who the legal directors are or when their terms expire.

A BRICKBAT to the persistent flu bug, which has forced schools and businesses to slow down to a crawl.

A BOUQUET to San Rafael city councilmen for ordering stiffer fines for another type of bug—the litterbug.

BOUQUETS to Marin teen-agers for conducting a special campaign today for the Heart Fund drive.

A BOUQUET to Gerald N. Hill, formerly of Marin, for being elected president of the California Democratic Council.

A BOUQUET to Dominican College of San Rafael for winning a distinguished service award (one of five in U.S.) from the American Assn. of Colleges for Teacher Education.

A BOUQUET to Novato Junior Women's Club for donating an electronic nebulizer to Novato Hospital.

SMALL ANTS DISTRACT BIG ONES

The best antidote to destructive fire ants seems to be an even smaller species of ant.

Throughout the southern U.S., fire ants ravage crops, snarl machinery, and inflict painful lumps on both people and animals.

Recently, scientists in Uruguay, the home of fire ants, discovered that they are relatively harmless when the tiny insects are around.

These little ants mysteriously influence their troublesome big brothers to feed them, raise their offspring and do all their work for them. This keeps the fire ants too busy to cause trouble.

Science deserves great credit for finding ways to free mankind from many scourges and pests. Still, such solutions have been there all the time—either intact or waiting to be put together.

It is part of the design of our heavenly Father that each person use his intelligence and determination to find ways of improving the physical and spiritual condition of all.

"For every creature of God is good."

Septuagenarian Tells How To Avoid Flu

Editor, Independent-Journal:

With so much "flu" going around, may I offer a remedy to combat that—"Brown's Yeast" of the Vitamin B family. It builds up resistance and vitality. I haven't had a cold in years—never think about them—and the flu once in 30 years.

Friday last was my birthday—77 years—and as a retired carpenter 43 years in Marin, I can do any work of my own and enjoy doing it (work on my own property). . . .

My reason for this is the yeast is so very inexpensive and the flu takes so much out of our system needlessly. The yeast is grown to dry for vitamin use, not for beer making.

Withdrawal Urged From Viet Nam War

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Our position in Viet Nam is untenable, immoral, illegal and shameful. For these reasons we must withdraw, and let the Vietnamese people decide their own destiny without the enlightenment that our napalm, guns, bombs and gas gives them.

It is of the utmost urgency to devise a plan to convert to a peace economy. The war has already escalated to a point where major dislocation to the economy will occur if the war machine is slowed down, and this situation can only get worse as our commitment to napalm diplomacy becomes complete.

Such a plan would require strong government control of our economy, which would understandably be resisted by most free-enterprise entrepreneurs. But consider the alternatives—a continuing war and arms build-up, which could only end in holocaust, or an economic collapse, with all the suffering that would entail, with ultimately another arms race and war to pull us out of it. A third alternative, that of our war industries voluntarily cutting back or diversifying to keep the economy going, seems totally unrealistic.

Camp Fire Girls Thank Mint Buyers

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On behalf of Golden Gate Council Camp Fire Girls, Marin section, I would like to thank all residents of Marin County for their fine reception of our Blue Bird, Camp Fire, Jr. High and Horizon Club girls in their mint selling for the past month. The cooperation and generosity of the people of Marin have made this year's sale the best yet. The added revenue, along with Crusade funds, will enable the girls to participate in a broader, more challenging program in the year ahead.

My sincere thanks to each and every one.

Praise For Frost's Bottleneck Solution

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Bouquets to Public Works Director Donald Frost, who pulled out of the hat a solution on the widening of Sir Francis Drake and a remedy for the parking problem by his Phase I of Alternate III plan which was adopted by the Board of Supervisors previously.

By this Phase I the property owners can still utilize all of their property and still maintain their existing parking which otherwise would have been cut off, thereby causing considerable loss in value . . . Also, by this Phase I, the potential killer curve at College Avenue and Sir Francis Drake will be eliminated . . .

The one problem that will arise from these parking lots is that thhey will be filled with students from thhe college. It is mandatory for the college authorities to progress with their own parking lots . . . and not use up public space as well as private space. The college has had too much to say in the development of Kentfield. They are like thhe tentacles of an octopus reaching out, grabbing for more. The authorities of the college have no regard for those property owners that support them . . .

Let us hope that the Board of Supervisors acts immediately on Mr. Frost's solution. There is a deadline to meet on the acquisition of these properties and by delaying any more, it could result in higher prices for the lands involved in Phase I and the problem continues to get worse.

Mill Valley Pond Drawbacks Claimed

Editor, Independent-Journal:

In reference to a proposal for 30-acre pond for flood control on Arroyo Corte Madera del Presidio (Feb. 9 I-J) . . .

The idea of a pond is commendable as a recreational feature, but its effect on flood control would be practically nil. The bulk of inflow . . . comes from the hills and this whole volume of water has to be safely carried through the City of Mill Valley before it reaches the pond at the mouth of the creek. Only a short lower reach of the creek (approximately downstream from La Goma Street) is under tidal influence. Therefore, even if the pool at the mouth is properly dimensioned, there cannot be any appreciable reduction in the construction cost of the channel . . .

A 30-acre pond contains 30 acre-feet of water per foot of depth. The standard project storm runoff is estimated at about 4,200 acre-feet, or 140 times the pool volume per foot depth.

. . . According to a rule (established by the American Waterworks Assn.), a pool equal to one-half of the flood volume would reduce the pool peak outflow by 35 per cent. To obtain that reduction, it would be necessary to have the 30-acre pool 70 feet deep, pumped dry before the storm. On the other hand, if a reasonable depth of pool is used, say 14 feet, then the capacity of the pool will be 10 per cent of the runoff, and the reduction in the peak outflow will be only about three per cent . . .

Construction of the project designed for a "flood of record" capacity is not a safe practice when protection by levees is involved. Such project creates a false sense of security and, when a flood of greater magnitude eventually occurs, the damages may become greater than they would be without a project.

U.S. Dollars Popular Abroad; Its Gold Is Even More So . . .

By JOSEPH R. COYNE
(James Marlowe is ill.)

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dollar is as good as gold, the government assures us. And Spain, Belgium, Austria and France are in a good position to prove it.

THEY TRADED MORE dollars for U.S. gold last year year than all other nations—more than $1.24 billion worth. This and other gold sales reduced U.S. stocks to about $13.8 billion at the start of the year, a net reduction of $1.66 billion during 1965.

But despite this further drain on U.S. gold—stocks stood at $24.6 billion in 1949—government officials are optimistic that the reduction in gold reserves can be halted. And the key to the question is the U.S. balance of payments.

Bring the balance of payments deficit into equlibrium—$250 billion either side of zero—and the drain on gold will eventually stop, is the reasoning.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler said most of the gold sales last year came during the first six months and a steady decline thereafter suggests "a healthy state of foreign condfidence in the dollar."

And Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor said the determination of Americans to end balance of payments deficit—the difference between U.S. spending abroad and foreign spending in this country—has renewed confidence in the dollar.

This is how the United States saw a $1.66-billion reduction in its gold stock last year:

Most was purchased by foreign countries with dollars but Fowler said $1.1 billion of this came during the first six months of the year and only $177 million between July and December.

France, in line with a policy announced one year ago, cashed in the most dollars for gold—$880 million. Following were Spain at $180 million, Austria at $101 million and Belgium at $83 million.

THE GOLD DRAIN began after World War II when U.S. dollars were sent overseas to help the recovery of war-torn countries.

Since the United States guarantees conversion of official dollar holdings for gold, every dollar which goes abroad represents a potential drain on gold stocks.

The only way to end the drain is to stop the net outflow of dollars by bringing equilibrium to the balance of payments.

The Johnson administration one year ago began a voluntary program among the nation's businessmen and bankers to stem private investment of U.S. dollars abroad. Connor and Fowler said this program was the major reason why last year's deficit was only $1.3 billion, less than half the deficits for the previous two years and the smallest since 1957 when the United States had a $520-million surplus.

Goal of the administration is equilibrium this year.

If this is done and the balance remains in equilibrium—Connor has already asked businessmen to come up with a long-range program to insure this—the drain on U.S. gold stocks will eventually cease, the Treasury feels.

BUT THE FLY in the ointment could be the Viet Nam war. The U.S. buildup there will send more dollars abroad to become potential drains on gold stocks.

Nation's Negro Is Helping Himself

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG JR.

In the past several years the press and airwaves have been full of civil rights news—telling the story of what is being done to help Negro citizens attain full equality. Much of this news has to do with demonstrations and with Federal laws and court decisions. Much has been done and much remains to be done in the fields of legislation and in rousing the nation to take action.

But the question has been raised: What is the Negro doing to help himself? It has been asked both by well-meaning friends of the Negro and by his enemies. The answer, I am happy to report, is a lot—an awful lot. He is pulling himself up by his bootstraps.

FIRST, the organizations of the Negro community have been extremely active. Negro churches, fraternal organizations, social clubs, fraternities and sororities have community service programs designed to stimulate and encourage youths and adults alike. They have scholarship programs and training and citizenship services, and have contributed many thousands of dollars to raise the health and educational levels of the community.

These efforts have been aided by individual Negroes who have climbed out of circumstances of crippling poverty to make a better life for themselves and their families. This rapidly growing middle-class has expanded at a truly amazing rate.

AS COMPANIES continue to open their doors to Negroes, we find more and more individual success stories of the kind I have written about in past columns — young Negro engineers, lawyers, scientists, managers and salesmen, who have helped contribute to our nation's store of wealth and knowledge.

Negroes, so long barred from the sources of capital needed to establish their own businesses, are now making great strides in that field. Negro-operated banks like Harlem's Carver Federal Savings and Loan Assn., and the Freedom National Bank are providing needed funds to help Negro businessmen. These businessmen are also taking advantage of federal loans.

Negro colleges, which are, by the way, integrating their student bodies at a rate which white schools should emulate, are active in conducting remedial programs to train young people in their areas.

WE AT THE Urban League are in a position to note the great sense of participation by the Negro community in programs like the Skills Bank, which refers qualified people to job openings. Other successful projects are the anti-poverty workshops; the secretarial training program, in which young women volunteer for training in the skills they need for jobs in industry; the many other job training projects we run; and the new leadership development program which seeks out and trains the heretofore untapped reservoir of leadership in the community.

The Negro poor, too, have shown that they do not want things to be done for them, but that they wish the opportunity to do things for themselves. The many anti-poverty programs around the country are continually being pressed by the Negro poor to let them decide what they need and to let them do these things for themselves. Anything which smacks of "welfare-ism" or a retention of the status quo, anything which denies them full participation in planning and executing these programs, runs into sturdy opposition. Self-reliance is the key word here.

There are many more ways in which the Negro has sought, successfully, to help himself. Impressive though this is, it takes on added significance when seen against the background of poverty and discrimination which has hindered his efforts.

A-Bomb Spending Down —There's A Stockpile

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second year in a row, the United States is spending less for producing nuclear weapons —but there's no cause for any adversary to enjoy it more.

Indeed, all available evidence suggests that a major reason for the spending retrenchment is that a huge stockpile of both A-weapons and H-weapons has been built up in recent years.

Production of new and improved nuclear bombs, missiles, land mines, depth charges, artillery shells and other arms goes on—although the Atomic Energy Commission has said there is "a reduction in the rate of increase."

Major plants and other facilities for the development, fabrication and testing of both nuclear and non-nuclear components of such weapons are spread over many states, extending from California to Florida and from Iowa to New Mexico.

Aside from investments in nuclear test sites in Nevada and the far Pacific area—the latter now on a stand-by basis —capital investment in this weapons production complex exceeds $1 billion.

For the year ended last June 30, the AEC spent $763 million on its weapons program, including costs of underground testing at the Nevada proving grounds. This represented a decrease of five per cent from the previous year.

In the current fiscal year — now half over—the AEC is operating with a weapons budget of $704.4 million.

The commission reports it "is maintaining the country's nuclear defense capability as well as its readiness to resume atmospheric testing in the event the limited test ban treaty is abrogated."

And where are the nation's completely fabricated weapons stored—other than those deployed with military units on land and sea and in the bays of ever-watchful bombers aloft?

The location of these storage vaults is one of the nation's closest-kept secrets. But it's common talk around Albuquerque, N. M.—the nerve center of America's far-flung nuclear weapons production complex—that one of the storage areas lies in Manzano Mountain, which overlooks the old southwest frontier town.

The location of the plants, laboratories and other facilities engaged in the actual development, fabrication and assembly of the weapons is NO secret—although, in most cases, the AEC describes only in general terms what goes on in such places.

Here's a run-down on weapons installations and their missions:

1. Raw Materials. Plutonium is produced at plants at Hanford, Wash., and Savannah River, Aiken, S. C. U-235 is produced in plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Paducah, Ky., and Portsmouth, Ohio.

2. The AEC's scientific laboratories at Los Alamos, N.M., and Livermore, where new weapons concepts are dreamed up for testing. These laboratories also fabricate the nuclear explosive components for later use in completed weapons. The Y-12 plant at Oak Ridge also fabricates U-235 into bomb components.

3. Amarillo, Tex.: Manufacture of conventional chemical explosives for use as "triggers" for nuclear explosives.

4. Mound Laboratory, Miamisburg, Ohio: Produces special explosives for detonators and other devices.

5. Pinellas Peninsula plant, near Clearwater, Fla.: Develops and produces complex miniaturized "neutron-generating devices" to provide the first nuclear "sparks" for a chain-reaction within a weapon.

Sandia Base, Albuquerque, N. Mex.: Nerve center for the development and rigorous slam-bang testing of various non-nuclear components. The latter range from switching and timing devices and automatic fuses to "safeing" devices to prevent premature explosion or unauthorized detonation of completed weapons.

Some of this non-nuclear, but really rough-house, testing is done in Coyote Canyon, near Sandia; some is done at Livermore; and still more at sites at White Sands Missile Range; Cape Kennedy, Fla., and Tonopah, Nev. The latter is northwest of the AEC's nuclear testing area.

7. Kansas City, Mo.: Production of complex electronic, electro-mechanical and mechanical devices.

8. Burlington, Iowa, and Amarillo, Tex.: Fabrication of chemical explosives and also "the assembly of the various items into weapons and weapons components" — presumably meaning the complete assembly of weapons.

9. Rocky Flats, Colo.: Fabrication and assembly of complete weapons.

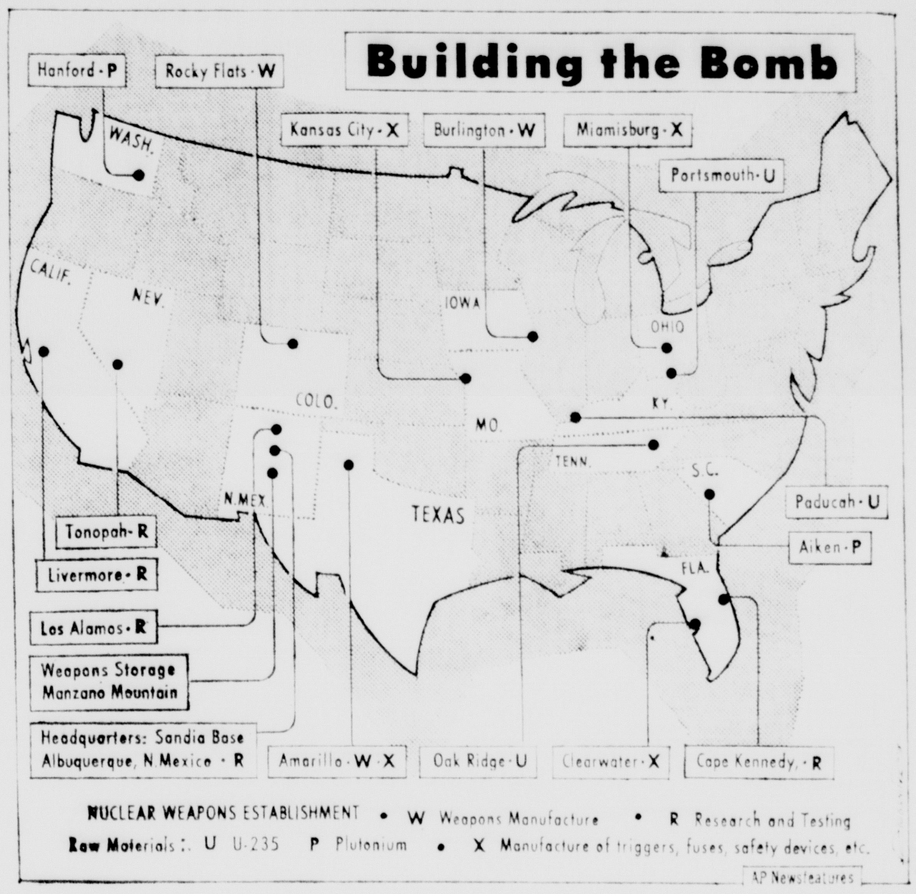
For some years, the nation's weaponeers had two other plants — one at San Antonio, Tex., the other at Clarksville, Tenn.—both engaged in weapons "modification," including the "retirement" of obsolete weapons.

But, as part of the retrenchment program, the Tennessee plant was closed in September. The San Antonio facility will be closed out by next July. Operations of the two plants will be consolidated with those at Burlington, Iowa, and Amarillo, Tex. Some 3,600 employees were dropped from the AEC payroll this year—2,000 of them at the Kansas City plant, the rest from Clarksville, Oak Ridge, San Antonio, Albuquerque and Rocky Flats.



NUCLEAR AGE DEFENSE

War Returns To A Cave

By DONALD ZLYSTRA
Advance News Service

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. —The Nation's defense control center, buried more than 1,200 feet deep in Cheyenne Mountain near Colorado Springs, is still powerless to defend the United States against its most potent threat — the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile (ICBM.).

Built at a cost of $142.4 million, this complex nerve center for U.S. defense in the nuclear age features the best detection devices and instantaneous communications man has yet devised. The facility is scheduled to be completely operational after July 1.

Its underground granite-encased facilities warn instantly of attack—by enemy ICBMS, by bomber aircraft, by missile-launching submarines, or by a weapons-carrying orbiting satellite.

Today the United States can reach out and destroy even satellite space vehicles—but not enemy ICBMS speeding toward North American targets.

The one weapon the United States has developed to defend against the long-range missile threat has not yet been approved for installation — the multi-billion-dollar Nike-X anti-missile system. The Nike-X system essentially centers on a missile to shoot down another missile.

Next to filling that major gap, U.S. and Canadian officers manning the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) here stress the urgent need for an improved interceptor airplane.

Here too, development is already well in hand but operational funds have not been requested by the Pentagon.

But even with these glaring retaliatory deficiencies, the nation's ability to obtain early warning of an attack—and instantly to deploy the considerable forces now available—has taken a giant step forward with virtual completion of the NORAD center in Cheyenne Mountain.

It's fitted with every conceivable gadget modern science can devise to keep its occupants alive and directing a fight against an enemy capable of raining scores of nuclear explosions on this mountain fortress.

Besides directing the continent's nuclear defense, the Cheyenne Mountain redoubt would in event of attack order this nation's retailiatory strikes.

Not only would the United States be able to launch this awesome counter-force within minutes of an attack. It would hold in reserve missiles at Air Force Strategic Air Command (SAC) launch sites, already-airborne nuclear bombers and Polaris submarines at sea—a second counter-punch, capable of destroying any major targets that survived the first U.S. retaliatory attack.

NORAD's mountain command post is designed specifically to:

1. Get SAC bomber forces and tactical fighter interceptor planes airborne immediately when the first warnings;

2. Launch immediately the first massive missile counter-strike; and

3. To survive as a command center to direct sucessive retaliatory strikes by U.S. forces.

So speedy is today's reaction time that the entire SAC fleet of B-52 and B-58 bombers can be airborne within 15 minutes of the launching of the first Soviet ICBM. U.S. ICBMS can begin their flight of 30 minutes or less to major Soviet targets within a minute or two of the first alarm.

Missiles not launched in the first would wait in their protected silos for NORAD's electronic commands, relayed instantly through SAC's command post at Offutt Air Force Base, Neb.

Warning of a nuclear attack against North Aemerica comes almost instantly to Cheyenne Mountain through a bewildering variety of sensor devices. Chief among these is SAC's ballistic Missile Early Warning System (BMEWS). Three massive radar sites—at Clear, Alaska; Thule, Greenland; and at Fylingdales Moors, Great Britain — detect ICBMS after launch and immediately begin tracking their flights.

A similar aircraft warning system, the Distant Early Warning Line (DEW Line) relays data on incoming enemy aircraft to NORAD, obtained through the Semi-Automatic Ground Environment (SAGE) system radars. Improved radars now have permitted major reduction of the number of sites in this complex.

Against the threat of planes and missiles approaching from south of the United States, NORAD depends on Navy's SPASUR system—a line of radar across southern United States. Other long-range radar warnings could come from installations on the island of Trinidad off South America and from a station at Diyarbakir in Turkey.

Precise visual tracking of satellites and other space vehicles is possible through a global net of Baker Nunn tracking cameras located at stations throughout the world.

Most of these sources feed their data promptly—many almost instantaneously—to the Cheyenne Mountain redoubt, where a battery of 13 major computers directs the messages to the right sub-centers and sorts and stores the data for immediate display to commanders.

More than 400 U.S. Air Force, Army, Navy and Canadian military personnel will man the Colorado Springs mountain control center on a peacetime alert basis daily. This number can be promptly increased to 900.

Food, sleeping accomodations and air and water for the entire complex are stored within the mountain, permitting entirely independent operation for 30 days.

Survival in this granite-clad center is a relative matter, its military commanders admit. Questioned closely, none of them wilul contend, for instance, that a super Soviet 50-megaton nuclear warhead directly on target could not knock out their control center.

But the entire massive investment in technology, dollars and men was made on the assumption that the possibility of such a Soviet feat is "remote."

Alternate control centers, distant from the Cheyenne Mountain facility in unrevealed locations, are maintained against this direct-hit possibility. For instance, SAC's hardened control site at Offutt could conduct the nuclear battle if Cheyenne Mountain were eliminated.

Hundreds May Woo State's Voters

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — A total of 899 persons have filed their declarations of intent to seek election to legislative offices this year.

This averaged out to more than seven would-be candidates for each of the 120 offices up for election. However, it was expected this number would dwindle sharply when the time comes for taking out actual nomination papers as many persons filed for more than one office and will have to make a decision before March 25.

Of the total, 538 were Democrats, 356 Republicans and five stated no party. Proving that politics is primarily a man's profession, only 53 women filed in the total.

While many of the "intentees" may not follow through and file for the offices, the Feb. 23 deadline did show definitely that 50 offices in the legisiature will not have incumbents seeking reelection next year. This included 22 senate districts, many of which are new ones created under reapportionment, and 28 in the assembly. Of that total, 23 assemblymen have declared intentions to run for the senate and others have announced retirements (three to accept appointment to judgeships).

The filings of intent also made it final that nine present senators will retire at the end of this year: Sens. Luther E. Gibson, D-Vallejo; John W. Holmdahl, D-Oakland; Hugh P. Donnelly, D-Turlock; Paul J. Lunardi, D-Vallejo; Frank S. Petersen, D-Ukiah; Carl L. Christensen, D-Eureka; Joseph A. Rattigan, D-Santa Rosa; Harold T. Sedgwick, R-Yuba City; and Robert D. Williams, D-Hanford.

The declarations found one legislator, Senator Walter W. Stiern, D-Bakersfield, with no opposition. Ten senators and 28 assemblymen face no opposition in their own party in the primary elections. In addition, two assemblymen running for the senate and five other senatorial candidates have no primary opposition. Fourteen candidates for the assembly, other than incumbents, are assured of their party's nomination without a contest.

The declarations, if all carried through for actual filing, would find senators opposing senators in five districts. These include Sens. Virgil O'Sullivan, D-Williams, Fred W. Marler, R-Redding; and Stan Pittman, R-Oroville in the 2nd district; Sens. Stephen P. Teale, D-West Point, and John C. Begovich, D-Jackson, in the 3rd; Sens. William Symons, Jr., R-Bishop, Howard Way, R-Exeter, and James A. Cobey, D-Merced, in the 15th; Sens. Donald L. Grunsky, R-Watsonville, Vernon L. Sturgeon, D-Paso Robles, and Fred S. Farr, D-Carmel, in the 17th; and Sens. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ventura, and Alvin C. Weingand, D-Santa Barbara, in the 24th.

Two senators face opposition from assemblymen, and three of the senate districts have two assemblymen opposing each other.

A second contest for statewide office among high-ranking Democrats took shape last week with the announcement of Thomas W. Braden, president of the state board of education, that he would oppose Lt. Gov. Glenn M. Anderson for his renomination to a third term. Braden, who indicated he had the backing of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York, launched his campaign with sharp criticism of Anderson for being a "do nothing" official and for having shirked his duty while acting governor during the Watts riots last summer.

Anderson later quoted from an editorial endorsing him, as printed in Braden's Oceanside Blade-Tribune in 1962, which praised him for most of the qualities which Braden now accuses him of lacking.

In the other contest, Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch is being challenged by William M. Bennett, member of the California Public Utilities Commission.

Governor Edmund G. Brown broadened the agenda for the special session of the legislature during the week by adding 14 more items for consideration. A number were seemingly technical or non-controversial. Major ones included; increasing number of courts and judges and salary of court attaches; increase membership of California youth authority, and creation of a national redwood road committee.

The California Democratic Council held a hectic convention in Bakersfield during the weekend, in which the group's controversial president, Simon Casady, resigned. A vote of confidence found Casady outvoted by a narrow margin. A number of Democrats did not seek CDC endorsement although Governor Brown appeared at the convention after the Casady ouster and received the group's support.

Brown, meanwhile, has charged the Republican candidates for governor tried to put together a back-room deal some time ago, agreeing that the one making the poorest showing in the opinion polls would drop out of the race. Brown charged this might be a violation of election laws and called for an investigation by a district attorney or the legislative elections committees. One of the GOP candidates, George Christopher, said there was no more violation than in Democratic circles when it was attempted to get such candidates as Pierre Salinger out of the election two years ago and to get Braden and Lloyd Hand out of the lieutenant governor's race this year.

A tightening of the state's laws on smog controls was called for in a special message to the legislature from Governor Brown. He asked that the state board of public health be required to set statewide standards for air pollution. When any county exceeded these standards, it would come under regulations requiring installation of both exhaust and crankcase devices on used cars. Brown asked that exhaust devices be required for installation as soon as one is certified. He called also for a mandatory annual statewide inspection of devices by licensed stations.

California was rocked by the most serious influenza epidemic since at least as far back as 1957. The department of public health said the disease had reached epidemic proportions in at least 18 counties. So far, the disease has resulted primarily in illness and absenteeism from work and schools, although there were reports of deaths from influenza-pneumonia ailments beginning to be filed.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Hot African winds blowing across the fetid swamps of Ghana carry with them yellow fever and malaria-laden insects which take their toll of human lives.

The winds of political change, sweeping across the "dark continent" take their toll of governments.

The latest of six African regimes toppled in the last four months by military coups was that of President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana.

Nkrumah, who ruled as the virtual dictator of Ghana, since its independence from Britain in 1957, was on his way to Peking when the pre-dawn coup occurred Thursday.

Ironically, the 56-year-old American educated Nkrumah was on a one-man peace mission to North Viet Nam when his government was overthrown by the military and the police.

Only brief fighting was reported between anti-government forces and Soviet trained troops guarding Nkrumah's fortress-like residence.

A National Liberation Council formed by the apparently successful insurgents immediately set up committees to help administer the affairs of state in the nation of 7.2 million persons.

Broadcasts from the capital city of Accra announced the suspension of the Constitution and Parliament and the abolition of the country's only political group—Nkrumah's Convention People's Party.

The broadcast said the action had been taken because of the "serious political and economic situation in the country." It declared that "the myth surrounding Kwame Nkrumah has been broken."

Around The World Around The Clock:

New York—In New York to accept a Freedom House award, President Lyndon B. Johnson restated this country's determination to pursue the war in Viet Nam at the same time seeking roads to peace. Johnson gave a point by point reply to the questions raised most frequently about administration policy in Viet Nam.

Singapore: Anti-Communist students rioted in Jakarta protesting a cabinet shakeup by President Sukarno. Five persons were reported to have been killed when Sukarno's palace guards fired into the rioters.

Paris: President de Gaulle announced he will pull France's armed forces out of NATO by 1969 but would still remain a member of the Atlantic Alliance.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Knowing Your Opponents Helps Decide On Finesse Strategy

One of the most ticklish problems in expert play is whether to finesse or play for the drop.

There are rules to guide you, but many exceptions to the rules.

Opening lead — ♠ 8.

West leads the eight of spades, and East plays the nine to drive out the king.

You run the five diamonds, discarding spades from the dummy.

East signals with the nine and eight of hearts, then throws a spade.

West throws two low hearts.

NOW, THE QUESTION

You next lead the king of clubs, and East drops the queen.

You lead the nine of clubs, and West plays low.

Should you let the nine of clubs ride for a finesse or should you go up with dummy's ace?

The best play depends on the opponents and how well you can judge them.

You consider how well they play and how larcenous they are.

NAIVE PLAY

A certain kind of East will always play the queen if he has the doubleton queen-jack.

If he drops the jack you know he does not have the queen.

If he drops the queen, you have to guess.

The average good West player will cover the nine with the jack if he started with J-8-7-6. This will give you three club tricks, but will stop you from getting all five clubs.

West's failure to cover means that East has the jack.

TRICKY KIND

A certain kind of larcenous West will flicker for the merest fraction of a second before playing a low club on your nine.

He hopes that his hesitation is just barely long enough to make you think that he has the jack but not long enough for you to complain about.

This is unethical, of course, but it will act as a boomerang if you know your customer and therefore realize that the slight hesitation really means that he doesn't hold the jack.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ J 7 3
♥ K Q
♦ A K J
♣ A 10 5 3 2

What do you say?

Answer: Bid one club.

You have balanced distribution and 18 points in high cards, but the hand is slightly too strong for an opening bid of 1 no trump.

In addition to the 18 points you have a 10 and a fairly good five-card suit. Treat it like a 19-point hand.

ALMANAC

TODAY IS Saturday, Feb. 26, the 57th day of 1966 with 308 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter; the morning star is Venus; the evening star is Jupiter.

French novelist and poet Victor Hugo was born on this day in 1802.

On this day in history:

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte, with a squadron of 1,200 men, left the island of Elba to begin his second conquest of France.

In 1870, New York's first subway line was opened to the public.

In 1919, Congress established Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona.

In 1935, Germany started the operation of its air force which was to become the dread "Luftwaffe" of World War II.

A Thought for the Day — Russian author Dostoyevsky said: "Tyrannny is a habit capable of being developed, and at last becomes a disease . . . the man and the citizen disappear forever in the tyrant."

TIME AND TIDE

Department of Commerce, United States Coast Geodetic Survey, Western District headquarters. Times and heights of tides at San Francisco (Golden Gate):

The column of heights gives the elevation in feet of each tide above or below the plane of Coast Survey chart soundings. The depths are always additive to the chart depths unless preceded by a minus sign (-), when the numbers are subtracted from the depth given in the chart. ONLY SEVEN OF THESE

Thomas R. Sheridan, executive director for the McCone Commission which investigated the Watts riot of last summer, looks at the towering 13-volume, 8,500-page stack made by a complete transcript of the commission's investigation. The six-foot product of three months of hearings was made "available" Wednesday, but only seven copies have been made—for obvious reasons. (UPI Telephoto)

Campus Vote For Offices Next Week

College of Marin students will go to the polls Monday and Tuesday to elect representative to seven class and student body offices. Five of the positions are uncontested.

The contested positions and the candidates seeking them are: Sophomore men's representative, John Larsen and William Perin of San Rafael; rally and assemblies commissioner, James Brewer of Fairfax, Bruce Ferry of San Rafael, and Steve Schilling of Mill Valley.

The student executive council Thursday placed the office of rallies and assemblies commissioner on the ballot after parliamentarian Jared Dreyfus reported that the grades of the elected commissioner, Steve Tobin, have fallen below the required level.

The uncontested offices and candidates are: sophomore women's representative, Jody Angel of San Anselmo; freshman men's representative, Dennis Gilardi of Larkspur; freshman women's representative, Jeri Stehlin of Belvedere; commissioner of spirit and athletics, Barbara Dillon of San Anselmo; college center commissioner, Donna Ryan of San Rafael.

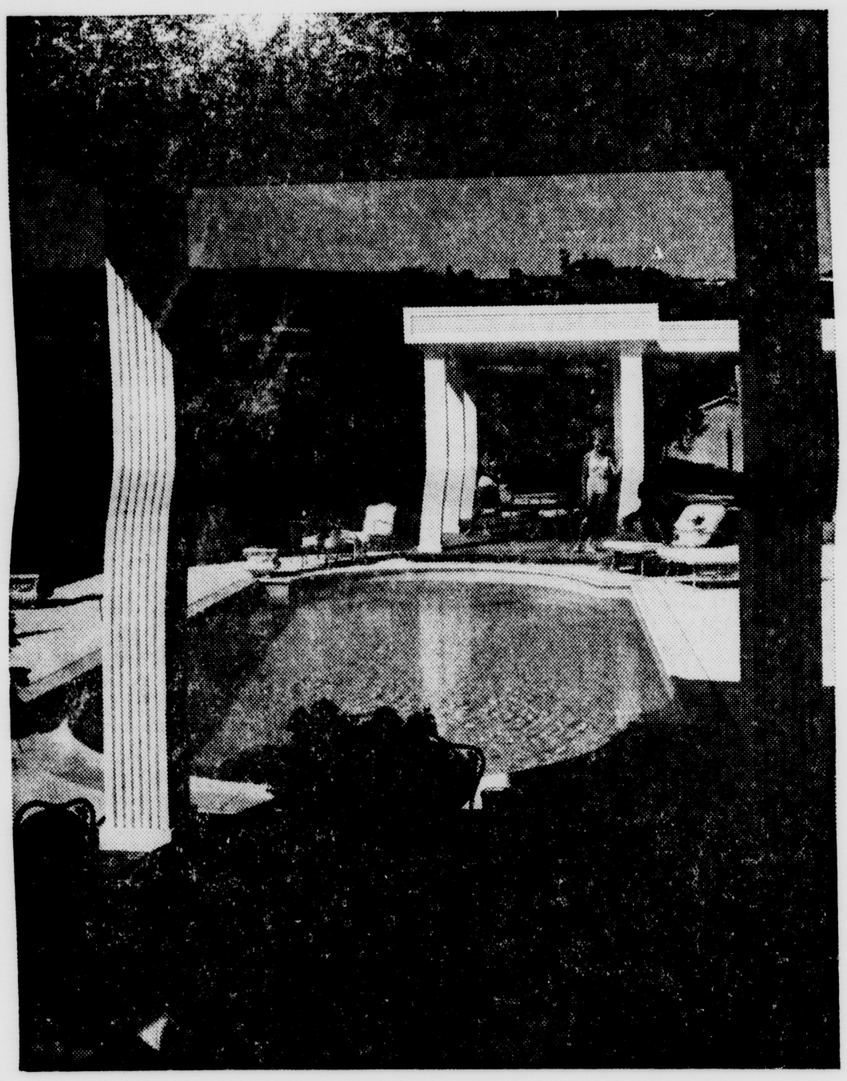
Camper Enthusiasts To Rally In Marin

More than 200 campers and their pickup camper trucks are expected at a rally organized by the Bay Area Camper Club tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the old California Highway Patrol office, 696 Francisco Boulevard West, San Rafael.

Club officials said they are seeking new members to form a local club and to take part in weekend outings with camper coaches.

Home On Leave

James Scagliola, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Scagliola of 121 Hilldale Drive, San Anselmo, has returned home on leave from the Army. He will leave March 1 for Viet Nam.



BULLETIN: FIRST 10 MONTHS OF 1965 IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA*

Anthony builds more pools than the next fifteen single pool builders combined!

Most buyers of pools pick Anthony because they have friends who are satisfied Anthony pool owners. Their reasons:

WHY ANTHONY?

DEPENDABLE ACCESSORIES. Anthony builds and services the complete line: filters, heaters, purifiers, cleaners, proved dependable by the world's largest pool-builder.

FUTURE BACK-UP. Warranties depend on financial strength. Anthony's current statement shows cash of $1,265,567.

COMPLETE POOL—EASY PAYMENTS. Low as $26.67 a month. 10-year terms. Makes it easy to give your family a pool.

*Per most recent building permits reported, Anthony also built more pools than all franchised pool builders combined!

month-end SPECIAL SALE

154,000 BTU HEATER WITH EVERY POOL*

You can get more for your money from Anthony right now. During the last two weeks of January (our off season) we'll include a 154,000 BTU heater with every pool we sell. Retail value is $395.00. No matter what is the list price of the pool you select, the heater will be included with your pool for the price of the pool alone.

*Installation not included. Applies to pool bids made this month.

How To Relax While Aboard Your Airliner

With Common Sense You Arrive At Your Destination Refreshed

The great trick of traveling wisely and well in the jet age involves knowing how to relax on an airplane. This ability determines whether you arrive at your destination feeling fresh and fit or foggy and fatigued.

While tranquilizers and sleeping pills are reported to be the rage with the jet set, there are all sorts of tips which beat barbiturates in helping travelers to fly in comfort and arrive rested.

A GOOD MANY of these tips are a matter of just plain common sense. Yet, many tourists, caught up in the excitement of preparing for a trip abroad, fail to follow these simple suggestions.

Avoid a build-up of tensions prior to departure. Finish business at the office and at home well in advance. Start at least 48 hours before take-off to slow the day's tempo, eat simply and retire early. Remember that packing and farewell parties at the last minute leave their mark on the nervous system.

Keep in mind that your metabolism has geared your periods of sleep and wakefulness to the day-and-night cycle. Jets, however, traverse many time zones, and turn night into day and vice versa. Therefore, if you store up rest, you will be able to cope with these time changes more easily.

WHEN FLYING from west to east, you may find that traveling in the daytime is more restful. London, for example, is six and a half hours from New York by Pan Am Clipper. The clock in London, however, is six hours ahead of the clock in New York. Thus, if you leave New York at 10 in the morning, you arrive in London at 10:30 p.m. (4:30 p.m. New York time), and still have plenty of time to unpack and have a good night's sleep.

Choose comfortable clothes for traveling, and save your Sunday best for later. Wear jersey, knits, worsteds and other materials which do not wrinkle easily. Wear outfits which allow you to twist and turn without restraint. Many people like to remove their jackets and ties and kick off their shoes. You may want to tuck your favorite slippers in your flight bag.

Keep your leg room free of bags and packages. Carry onto the plane only what will fit under your seat. Clutter discourages movement, and maintaining a static position for any length of time increases muscular strain, and thus brings on fatigue. If you have trouble finding a comfortable position for your head, you might pack an inflatable contour pillow to support your neck and prevent kinks.

REMEMBER sleep is not completely essential to rest. Cat-naps and comfortable relaxation, so doctors say, can give you 90 per cent as much rest as deep sleep. What is more, studies show that too-lengthy rests may actually increase fatigue. Body temperatures fall during sleep, and the longer you are immobile, the more energy you have to expend to warm your body up to peak performance temperature.

How you look often determines in your mind how you feel. Therefore, a grooming kit in your flight bag is a good idea. Stock it with cosmetics, tissues, cologne and whatever else you may need. The airlines furnish many of these personal items without charge, and all planes have outlets for electric razors. Spruce up before you arrive at your destination, and you'll look as fresh and fit as when you left home.

Think of your flight as a time to unwind—free from jangling telephones, traffic jams and household clatter. The jets are quiet and smooth-riding no matter where you sit.

DO NOT WORRY about being bored. Cocktails and a meal will occupy an hour or two of your time. Then, you might read, nap, write a letter, play cards or just sit back and watch the world go by.

As a final word, remember that the safety statistics about air travel are not twisted to appear better than they are. They're factual. And it is enormously safer to fly than to walk, drive or run around the block.

THIS PHOTO FROM American Airlines demonstrates just how much, with proper planning, the traveler can pack into two large suitcases plus the usual hand luggage. Here everything from party finery to sports equipment, including boots, iron and transistor radio, have been fitted comfortably into the luggage.

Bound For Europe? Why Not An Iceland Stopover?

Icelandic Airlines, which offers the lowest all-year fares of any scheduled airline from New York to Iceland and eight other European countries, will give passengers an option of extending two, three and four-day stopover tours of Iceland at no additional air fare, effective May 1.

Rates for the extended Icelandic stopover tours will be $34.50, $48 and $66.50.

The new tours will be in addition to the popular one-day stopover tour of Reykjavik, the island's picturesque capital, and its environs currently offered by the airline at the all-inclusive thrift season rate of $15.

From June 1 to Aug. 31, the rate for the one-day tour is $19.50.

NOWHERE in scenic Europe are the vistas more spectacular than in Norway's fjord country, viewed here from the very top of the famous Pulpit Rock in the Lyse Fjord near Stavenger.

BIG BEN and the House of Parliament in London are just one of many attractions in Britain for the tourist and camera. The island is a treasure house of historic, picturesque sights.

Europe Improves Its Facilities

The American tourist can claim considerable credit for improving travel facilities in Europe. And some Europeans are reaping the benefits too.

So says Siegfried Biedermann. He should know.

For the past 15 years Biedermann has supervised operations for Gateway Holidays, one of the leading U.S. operators of escorted motorcoach tours on the continent.

ON A VISIT to the United States, Biedermann said Americans have changed the face of travel in Europe during the past 10 years "by the simple process of going there."

"It is no secret that the American traveler likes his comforts away from home," he said. "If you want his business, you have to provide them for him."

What comforts did the 'Americans want, and what was done to meet his demands?

"FIRST OF ALL, the average tourist wanted to see the Europe of his dreams but he wanted to do so while spending his nights in hotels with such modern appointments as private bath and air-conditioning." Biedermann said. "In other words Americans want to savor the attractions of Old Europe with all the up-to-date comforts they find at home."

He said Americans not only want to sleep in air-conditioned comfort but also want to travel that way.

"Sometimes," he added with a smile, "I think they would like us to air-condition all of Europe. And sometimes I think we have."

BECAUSE OF THE Americans, he said air-conditioned sight-seeing motorcoaches are virtually a "must" these days. He noted Gateway Holidays ordered a fleet of new motorcoaches after two years of tests to determine the type of air-conditioning Americans liked best.

"Frankly, tour companies, including ours, may never have done this if it wasn't for the American traveler," Biedermann said.

Biedermann noted that the European also has benefited by the improvements resulting from the travel industry's efforts to keep the American traveler comfortable and satisfied.

"ICE WATER IS no longer lacking where Americans dine and dishes such as they enjoy in the United States have been adapted by European chefs with their own provincial touches," he said.

"It is no longer strange, either, to see-in Rome, Paris, Frankfurt or Vienna-traditional old European wine restaurants and American snack bars side by side. And many Europeans are enjoying the innovations."

But, he added "the sound of flamenco music remains as stirring as ever even if the bathroom fixtures are 20th century American and the Colosseum in Rome is as awesome as ever even when viewed from the comfort of an air-conditioned motorcoach."

ROTTERDAM, destroyed in World War II, has been rebuilt by the Dutch into one of the most modern cities in all Europe. Life moves at a brisk pace in the handsome city, but the traditional Dutch bike riders remain a part of the life of the Netherlands.

Touring Europe By Automobile

By TOM BUCHANAN
Tourist Manager,
Reynold C. Johnson Co.

Each year more and more American tourists tour Western Europe by car.

The advantages of traveling by car are many including freedom from bus and rail schedules, coupled with the advantage of being able to visit romantic and colorful places off the beaten path. Many places in both England and on the continent are miles away from rail and bus routes and you avoid the high cost of big cities and big hotels.

Should you take your own car, rent one over there, or buy a small European car?

Your operating costs will be higher than in the U.S. Gasoline prices vary from 40 cents to 80 cents per gallon, higher in some of the more popular touring areas. Oil prices are about the same as here. Labor charges will usually be lower than in the U.S. because of lower wages.

Figured on a cost-per-mile basis, two or three people driving a European car can travel more cheaply than by first class rail accommodations. In essence, the cost determining factors are your itinerary and whether you choose to buy, rent or take your own car.

Taking your own car: You should arrange for shipping your own car abroad at the same time you book your passage. This way you can take your car as excess baggage which is considerably cheaper than regular freight.

Advantages: The chief advantage of taking your own car is comfort. The average American car holds five or six easily while the average European car capacity is three or four passengers. Large American cars also have more luggage space.

Disadvantages: With gasoline prices so high, your own car which gets 10 to 20 miles to the gallon will be much more expensive to run than a small European make, most of which get about 30 to 40 miles to the gallon. You won't like the low grade fuel in Europe. It is hard on your high compression engine and cuts mileage still further.

American cars are over-sized for many European roads, particularly in rural sections and towns. Attempting to maneuver your car down these narrow streets is like trying to put 10 pounds of groceries in a five-pound sack. Unless you take to the big cities and have a popular make American car, you will have trouble finding parts in the event of a breakdown.

In some countries, American cars are not particularly popular. Europeans speak of the larger models as "The cars with the dollars sign grin." Appearing in an American car also labels you immediately as a tourist. In an European car you will escape many curious stares while touring.

Do not take your car abroad as capital, with the idea of selling it to pay part of your expenses. Most countries have laws prohibiting such transactions, and where it is permitted, the duties and restrictions are generally prohibitive.

Renting a car in Europe:

Advantages: If you are going to be in Europe for two or three weeks, it is less expensive to rent a car than to buy one, unless the European car of your choice is one which you would like to keep permanently for your use at home. There are numerous rental agencies throughout Europe with both European and American models to lease. Rental systems are similar to those in this country. You pay a daily base rate plus a per mile rate. The rental fee usually includes insurance, lubrication and membership in an automobile club with its attendant routing and emergency services. The lessee pays for gasoline and any tolls or transportation charges. Make your rental arrangements early in the spring. During the summer, the selection of models is limited.

Disadvantages: Renting for longer than a three- to four-week tour is expensive. You have nothing to show for your investment except a receipt. You have a tendency to watch the mileage and driving to keep it down destroys some of the advantages of auto travel. Renting ordinarily means you have to return the car to the point of origin unless you wish to pay an extra charge for pickup service.

Purchasing a small European car: The simplest and quickest method to buy a European car is to order it in the U.S.A. for delivery in Europe. By placing your order here through authorized sources, you are assured of delivery in Europe of the model and color of your choice at the place and time designated by you. Most registration, documents and insurance arrangements can be handled here prior to your departure.

Advantages: You can buy a car delivered overseas, use it to tour and have it returned home for less money than the same car would cost locally. If you wait to buy until you are in Europe, there may be a delay of three to four weeks depending on model and the demands of the season. In addition, no European authorized dealer has on his showroom floor the model of your choice equipped with American specifications which include safety glass, speedometer in miles per hour and sealed beam headlights. If on shipping your European car home you find you do not need it for use in this country, you can re-sell it here and regain a great deal of your original investment. This is particularly true in the case of Volkswagens, where the resale value in the U.S.A. is very high.

European cars are more maneuverable and economical to drive. Ownership relieves you of any worries about mileage and return of the car to the starting point. You will be less conspicuous in a foreign car. Also in addition, parts and service are readily available throughout Europe on all popular makes of European automobiles. For example: The Volkswagen organization has a dealer network in Europe of over 3,000 dealers.

Disadvantages: European cars can feel somewhat small to begin with and cannot comfortably accommodate five or six passengers. If you return some makes of European cars to this country, you will have problems with parts and service as they do not have a large American dealer network. Also the resale in the U.S. for some European makes is poor due to the lack of acceptance by the American public.

Licenses and other documents: A U.S. state driving permit is recognized by all European countries except Austria, Greece, Portugal, Spain and Turkey. If you intend driving in any of the aforementioned countries, it will be necessary to obtain an American international driving permit. This can be handled by your local automobile club.

It is no longer necessary for you to obtain a Carnet de Passage or Triptyque, unless you again intend driving in countries such as Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Rumania. Such countries require that a motorist obtain a temporary import card at the border.

In Greece and Turkey, a Carnet is required if you are touring in these countries for a period longer than four months. At the time you place your order in this country for delivery abroad, you pay for and obtain on delivery the necessary license plates and registration, depending on which country you take delivery in.

Insurance: Although it is no more dangerous to drive in Europe than in this country, adequate insurance is compulsory. If you are unlucky enough to have an accident, the language barrier and strange regulations can mean considerable delays. Liability insurance is compulsory in most European countries. The necessary insurance can in most instances be paid for here at the time you place your order.

Advantages of motoring through Europe: Americans who have motored through Europe always come back with a long list of advantages in favor of touring Europe by car: More comprehensive itinerary — no timetable worries — you can dress and live more informally —baggage is easy to handle and you eliminate an amazing number of tips—less need for reservations since you can stop in small towns, if one is filled it is easy to drive on to the next place—motels are now being constructed in most European countries—families can travel as cheaply as one—you will see more, do more, spend less and go further—offers you a pleasant and memorable journey.

For more information: The best sources of information in this country on auto travel in Europe are the imported motor car dealers, distributors and manufacturers, travel agents and auto clubs. These organizations can obtain your car documents, provide adequate insurance, rent, arrange purchase of your imported car or shipment of your American car, book passage by air or steamship, make hotel reservations and arrange for sightseeing.

Your best source for travel literature, road maps, guide books, etc. are the European government tourist offices located in most major American cities.

RED SQUARE IN Moscow is one of the photogenic locations in the Russian capital city, rapidly becoming a leading tourist center for westerners. Iron curtain countries generally have become more active in attracting and in serving American travelers, eager for the Yankee dollars.

Reds Woo The Yankee Dollar

In a way it seems ironic: Communist countries fighting for the American dollar. The Capitalist dollar.

But they are, and it shows clearly in the tourist business.

Just a few years ago it was nearly impossible for an American tourist to penetrate the Iron Curtain. Today, the Communists have virtually torn down the curtain. And they are using capitalist tools—advertising agencies, travel agencies, public relations.

The scramble for the tourist business is most un-Lenin-like. But it is paying off.

IT IS HARD to come by figures from the Communist side. But take some samples prepared by the State Department, based on passport applications. In 1960, it appears, some 22,000 Americans visited Czechoslovakia. By 1964 the figure was 80,000.

For the Soviet Union, it was 16,000 in 1960 and 30,000 in 1964.

Yugoslavia, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Bulgaria are enjoying similar tourist booms, varying only in percentage of increase.

Albania alone, among the Communist nations of Eastern Europe, remains a closed country. From a grand total of 85 Americans in 1960, Albania's trade shrank to 60 in 1964, although it did know a dizzying 160 American travelers in 1963.

As is most everything else in the Communist world, tourism is a state operation. Intourist handles it for the Soviet Union, Cedok for Czechoslovakia, Carpati for Romania and so on.

FOR THE American wishing to visit, all is simplicity. Obtain a passport, get a visa (all Communist countries now emphasize how easy that is) and hie off to your favorite travel agency. The Communists do business through American travel agencies, and they pay commissions too.

From then on, the changes begin. One does not simply ramble around Old Muscovy.

One plans an itinerary — chosen from the list offered by Intourist, or Cedok, or whatever state agency — and one pays for it before leaving home. Departures from these norms are liable to cause surprise, consternation, refusal.

Part of this is undoubtedly due to a pathological fear of espionage, gradually receding but nonetheless still strong.

Intourist often gives other reasons. It explains, somewhat sheepishly, that there are no accommodations in the out-of-the-way place you wish to visit. Or it says that the hotel are crowded in summer, why not come in winter?

BUT THERE IS no doubt of the Communists' sincerity in wishing to encourage tourism.

The Intourist office in New York offers a wall-high sheaf of color brochures that might put the Miami Chamber of Commerce on its mettle. Cedok's travel folders make Czechoslovakia well night irresistible. Romania and Bulgaria beckon from the pages of their tourist literature.

There is no glossing over the lack of plumbing, but this is made to seem unimportant, somehow, in exchange for the palaces of the czars, the castles of the vanished aristocracy, the glimpses of life in strange and fabled lands, the magnificent old churches in countries now officially atheist.

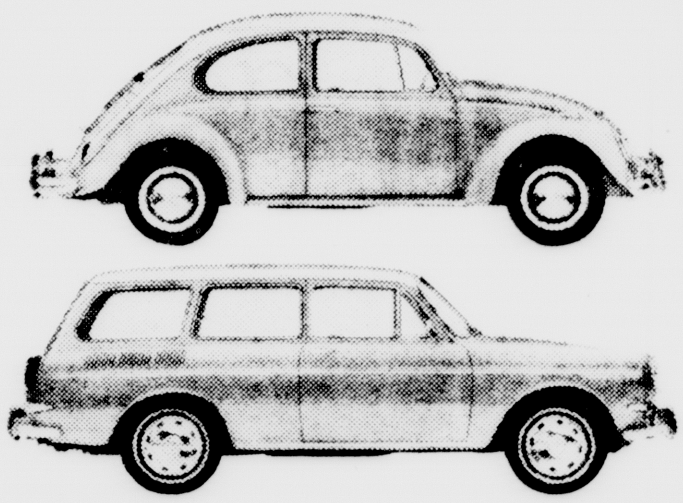
And the traveling is easy. You can enter from almost any place in Europe, by car, ship train or plane.

INTOURIST WILL even put you in the driver's seat, in limited circumstances, but the roads aren't much in East Europe, once off the main routes. If you're using your own car, bring your own spare parts.

Bring your own camera if you like, but be careful what you photograph. Don't take pictures from a plane, and remember that railway bridges, power stations and the like are sensitive. Film is hard to get; bring your own.

And when you leave the country, don't take any local currency with you. It's forbidden.

Pick up either Volkswagen in Europe.



If you have a driving ambition to see Europe, the cheapest way to do the driving is in your own VW. And picking it up in Europe is the cheapest way to buy one.

You can get a genuine beetle in any of 55 cities in 9 countries. And, if you want a little more room and a little more power, spend a little more money and get our Squareback Sedan. (It's just as genuine, but not so beetle-ish.)

We'll attend to the details of purchase, delivery, insurance and licensing. And if the car needs servicing after you ship it home, we'll attend to that, too.

If you think this is quite a lot, mail us the coupon and we'll show you how easy it is.

Tips On Tipping— Guidelines For American Abroad

In French it's "pourboire," in German "trinkgeld," in Spanish "propina," in Arabic "bakeesh" and in Chinese "cumshaw."

Translated into English, they all mean the same thing—tips. And who, when and how much to tip is a problem for the American traveling to new places at home and abroad, particularly for the first time.

NO ONE KNOWS for sure how the practice started. One version is that it began in 18th Century London when waiters set up bowls marked "To Insure Prompt Service" at coffee houses and pubs. The word tips comes from the first letter of each word, according to this story.

With few exceptions, such as Iceland, where it is frowned upon, and the Soviet Union; where it is forbidden, tipping has become virtually a fact of life around the world.

In many foreign countries, it long has been traditional for hotels, restaurants, night clubs, cafes, etc., to include a 10 to 20 per cent service charge on bills. But this has not solved the problem, particularly for the American unfamiliar with the custom, currency and language.

AMERICANS quickly learn bellboys, chambermaids, waiters, doormen and others still expect a little extra slipped into their palms. And then there are the porters, shoeshine men, and the restroom and cloakroom attendants.

There is no such thing as a perfect tipper. But a good rule-of-thumb is to tip as you would at home, keeping in mind the service charge and the difference in local conditions.

TIPPING CAB DRIVERS in America is practically a must. The minimum tip for short rides averages 20 cents in the big cities. For longer hauls, it averages about 20 per cent of the meter.

The American traveling by long-distance bus does not have to tip, even for handling of luggage. And never tip stewardesses or other crew members on plane flights. But skycaps at airports get 25 cents per bag and you can speed recovery of luggage from the racks with an additional gratuity.

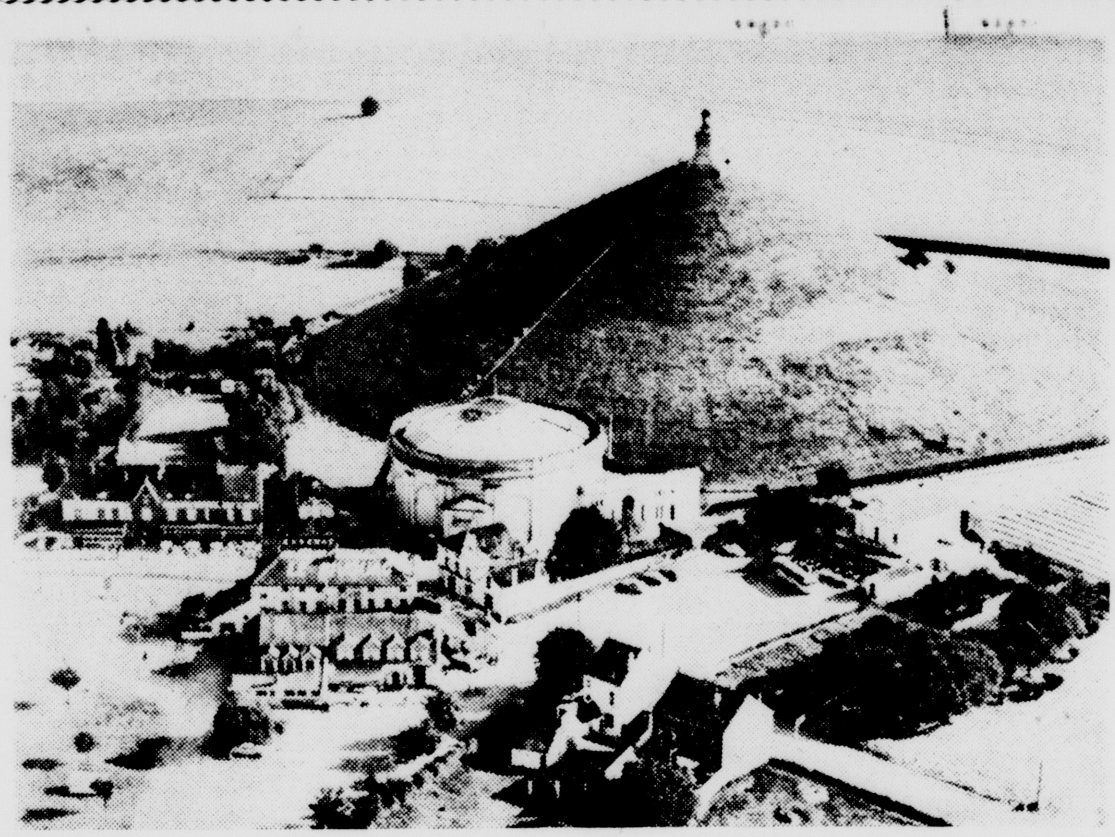
At railway stations, red caps are paid—not tipped—25 cents per bag, and remember that means every piece placed on his cart, including parcels, paper bags, etc. On long-distance train trips, the pullman porter rates $1 per person, or $1.50 per couple, per night.

THE DINING car waiter gets 15 per cent of the bill and the bartender in the club car expects 25 cents for one drink or 20 per cent of the total check for more.

On short cruises, figure on distributing about 10 per cent of the fare for tips. Waiters get $1 per day per person as do room stewards. The wine steward should be tipped $3 to $5, depending on his services, and the palms of the maitre d' and captain should be crossed with $3 to $5 each.

Slip $3 per person or $5 per couple to the deck steward who tucks you into the chair and brings drinks and snacks.

Tip bartenders, night room stewards and other help for services rendered just as you would ashore.



JUST SOUTH OF Brussels, the mound of Waterloo where Napoleon met his great defeat serves as a reminder to visitors of the history that was played here. A lion, commemorating the battle, sits atop the mound.

Don't Let Illness Ruin Trip— Be Sure To Take Your Shots

Once again an outbreak of typhoid in a tourist-popular foreign country stresses the wisdom, if not the necessity, for Americans to take precautionary health measures before heading overseas.

Probably nothing can ruin a vacation more than illness, particularly in some strange country. Yet the risk could have been reduced by including a visit to the family physician on the "must" list of preparations for the trip abroad.

THE LATEST outbreak occurred in the town of Conflans-St. Honorine on the outskirts of Paris last December. No Americans were involved then nor were any affected in the 1964 outbreak in Aberdeen, Scotland.

But there were some Americans stricken, though none fatally, in the epidemic at the famed resort of Zermatt in the Swiss Alps in 1963.

All three countries have high sanitary standards on a par with those in the United States and the outbreaks were quickly quelled. But they pointed up why immunization against infectious diseases are so important for the traveler.

INOCULATION against typhoid is not compulsory for the American tourist. However, the U. S. Public Health Service urges anti-typhoid shots for Americans traveling anywhere in the world, including some sections of the United States itself.

The service also recommends vaccinations against paratyphoid, tetanus, polio and diphtheria in addition to those which may be required by various countries included in the itinerary.

Americans do not have to be vaccinated against smallpox to leave the United States. But a vaccination against such disease is compulsory for returning citizens.

Each must have a certificate of vaccination or other proof of immunity for re-entry from foreign lands with the exception of Canada, the Canal Zone, the west coast of Lower California in Mexico and some Caribbean islands.

Advice On How To Stay Well

The California Medical Assn. warns that, though at home you can be fairly sure of sanitation which protects your health, this isn't always the case abroad.

The association offers these tips for travelers:

Food and water may be safe in better hotels and restaurants, but it's still a good idea to be selective about what you eat. Thoroughly cooked foods are safest.

Bottled water should be used for drinking and brushing teeth and it's a good idea to avoid the use of ice in drinks since it may have been made from contaminated water.

Immunization shots should be obtained well in advance of a trip. Smallpox immunization is necessary for any trip outside Canada and the U.S. possessions and shots for typhus, cholera and yellow fever are needed for travel to many parts of Asia, Africa, Eastern Europe and Central and South America.

If you take medicine regularly be sure to take an adequate supply.

The Tourists Aren't The 'Litterbugs'

Travelers Are Acquitted On Basis Of A Survey

American tourists long have been singled out as the main culprits in despoiling the nation's highways and byways with litter.

A recent survey, however, indicates they have been grossly maligned.

The survey was conducted by Keep America Beautiful (KAB), the national litter-prevention organization. It takes the major blame away from the tourists and places it on the shoulders of local residents.

KAB ASKED professional and voluntary litter fighters — an equal number of men and women in all 50 states — the question:

"Who produces the most litter? Local residents or tourists?"

Local residents were indicted by 78 per cent. Only 13 per cent cited tourists while 9 per cent had no opinion.

The consensus was summed up by one respondent: "Like auto accidents, most littering occurs within 25 miles of home."

THE KAB survey also partially exploded another popular belief that people litter more in the summer. About 50 per cent of the litter fighters polled said littering was worst in the summer months. About 22 per cent said litterbugs are equally active in all seasons.

A substantial number said there is more littering in the spring, fall or winter.

Law enforcement officers are on the alert for litterbugs the year around, the KAB warned. Anti-litter laws are becoming tougher.

KAB cited some examples of stiff penalties:

Littering can cost up to $1,000 in Georgia.

MISSOURI AND Ohio provide fines of up to $500.

Fines in Kentucky run up to $300. Here in California, judges frequently fine litterbugs up to $250 per offense.

The average maximum fine is $100, which may be levied in such states as Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Pennsylvania and Wyoming.

New York City has a $25 limit for littering, but it makes up in volume of convictions for the relative smallness of the fine. More than 60,000 litterbugs were fined a total of more than $200,000 last year.

Judges in California, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, New Jersey, South Dakota, Texas and other states recently have meted out a new kind of penalty—making the punishment fit the crime.

Flagrant litterbugs are sentenced to clean up stretches of highway and beaches of empty cans, paper and other debris discarded by equally thoughtless or careless visitors.

KAB, which conducts a continuing public educational program to combat littering throughout the United States, urges all motorists to carry litterbags in their cars as the best way to contribute to the campaign to keep America clean. Most states provide receptacles along highways where the bags can be emptied or deposited.

THE OLD SOUTH with its remnants of plantation life holds a fascination for many American tourists. The scene here is the Oak Valley Plantation, in Louisiana, one of several such estates that are open for public visits.

A QUIZ FOR TRAVELERS

Test your travel I.Q. with this quiz prepared by Pan American Airways. Then, score yourself.

Score 20, and you're a geographic genius. At 15, you are still a star pupil. A score of 10 is not bad, but anything under five means you ought to get around a little more.

1. Many modern countries tend to change not only their size but their names. Most people, for example, know that Siam is the old name for Thailand, but not so many people know that the Gold Coast is now called Ghana. The former names of 10 countries are listed in the lettered column; the names by which these nations are known today are listed in the numbered set. Match them up and score one point for each correct answer.

a. Madagascar
b. Egypt
c. Palestine
d. Nyasaland
e. Persia
f. North Borneo
g. Northern Rhodesia
h. Chosen
i. Dutch Guinea
j. Abyssinia

1. Iran
2. Surinam
3. Ethiopia
4. Zambia
5. United Arab Republic
6. Israel
7. Sabah
8. Malawi
9. Korea
10. Malagasy Republic

2. There are some hotels around the world which rate as landmarks in the city in which they are located. Take as an example the Waldorf in New York or Sacher's in Vienna. Then, match the hotels in the lettered column with the cities in the numbered column in which they are located. Score one point for each correct answer.

a. Mandarin Hotel
b. Tamanaco
c. Phoenicia Intercontental Hotel
d. Imperial Hotel
e. Raffles Hotel
f. Grande-Bretagne
g. George V Hotel
h. Copacabana Palace
i. Chateau Frontenac
j. Mamounia Hotel

1. Marrakech, Morocco
2. Montreal, Quebec
3. Hong Kong
4. Rio de Janeiro
5. Beirut
6. Tokyo
7. Singapore
8. Athens
9. Paris
10. Caracas

Answers to travel quiz:

a. Madagascar—Malagasy Republic; b. Egypt—United Arab Republic; c. Palestine—Israel; d. Nyasaland—Malawi; e. Persia—Iran; f. North Borneo — Sabah; g. Northern Rhodesia—Zambia; h. Chosen—Korea; i. Dutch Guinea — Surinam; j. Abyssinia—Ethiopia.

a. Mandarin Hotel — Hong Kong; b. Tamanaco — Caracas; c. Phoenicia Intercontinental—Beirut; d. Imperial Hotel — Tokyo; e. Raffles Hotel—Singapore; f. Grande-Bretagne — Athens; g. George V Hotel — Paris; h. Copacabana Palace—Rio de Janeiro; i. Chateau Frontenac — Montreal, Quebec; j. Mamounia Hotel—Marrakech, Morroco.

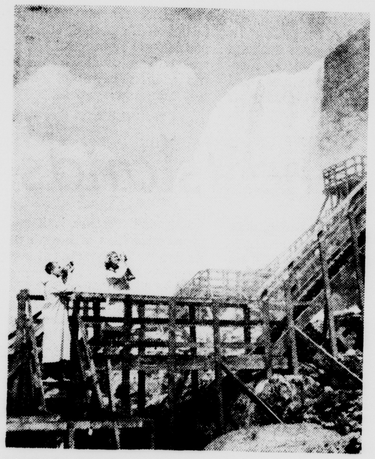
IT'S GREAT TO go abroad. But more and more Americans are discovering the scenic and recreation delights of their own country during their vacations. For instance, Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming offers grandeur that brings back many year after year. The camera is a necessary tool to capture something of the majesty of the falls.

Let's See The USA In 1966

And Be Sure To Take A Camera

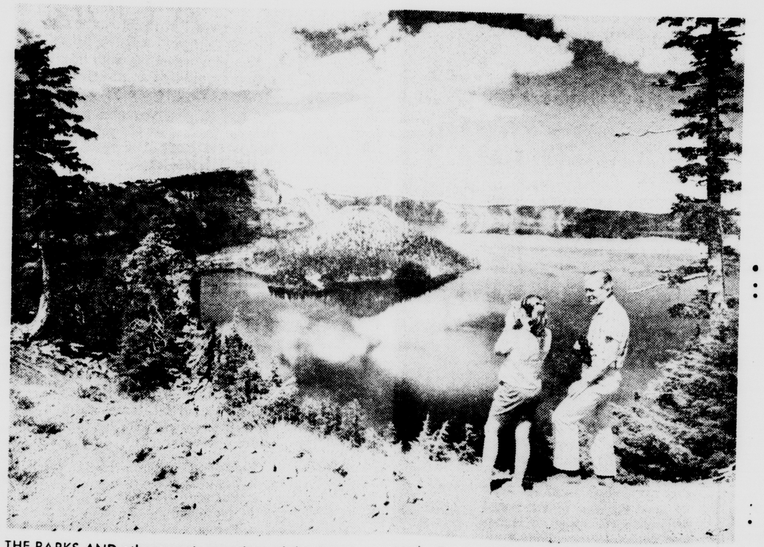
CALIFORNIA'S chief rival for floral gardens and for water sports is Florida, all the way across the country, with such attractions as pretty girls and Cypress Gardens seen here.



NIAGARA FALLS remains a traditional favorite with honeymooners and also enjoys continued popularity with the general American vacationing public.

IT IS EXCITING angles such as these in Utah's scenic Zion National Park that challenge the photographer in virtually every tourist. Both color and black and white film should be included in the camera gear, for some scenes demand one treatment, others a different approoch. And often you will want to use both on the same subject.

THE RUSTIC beauty of New England, always a favorite target for the American tourist traveling his homeland, is exemplified here by one of Massachusett's Old Mills. History is everywhere you turn in the U.S.'s northeastern corner.



THE PARKS AND other scenic wonders of the American West are the equal of the natural attractions of any area in the world. In our neighbor to the north, Oregon, the vistas of Crater Lake lure visitors who can't resist putting cameras into operation.

NOT ALL OF America's prime tourist attractions are to be found in the wide open spaces. The cities, too, offer their delights. For instance, New Orleans' French Quarter, where an outdoor art exhibit is under way here. Even San Francisco Bay Area residents admit that New Orleans approaches their own metropolis in cosmopolitan scenes.

'Roughing It' In Comfort

"This vacation, let's go somewhere and really rough it!"

Thousands of American families set out on vacation trips every year with that announced purpose.

Tired of the suburban soft life, they long to test themselves against the elemental challenges of the great outdoors. They want to sleep in the wind and weather, wash in the ice-cold streams, find their own food and build their own fires for cooking it.

AT LEAST that's what they say they want.

Actually, according to the National Park Service, the average family heading "back to nature" hopes to find there most of the same comforts it left at home.

"With our rising standard of living, more people then ever before have more money and more leisure time for travel and they tend to want and to expect more conveniences," said George G. Downes of the U.S. Park Service's San Francisco office. "We are attempting to phase out our primitive campsites as funds permit."

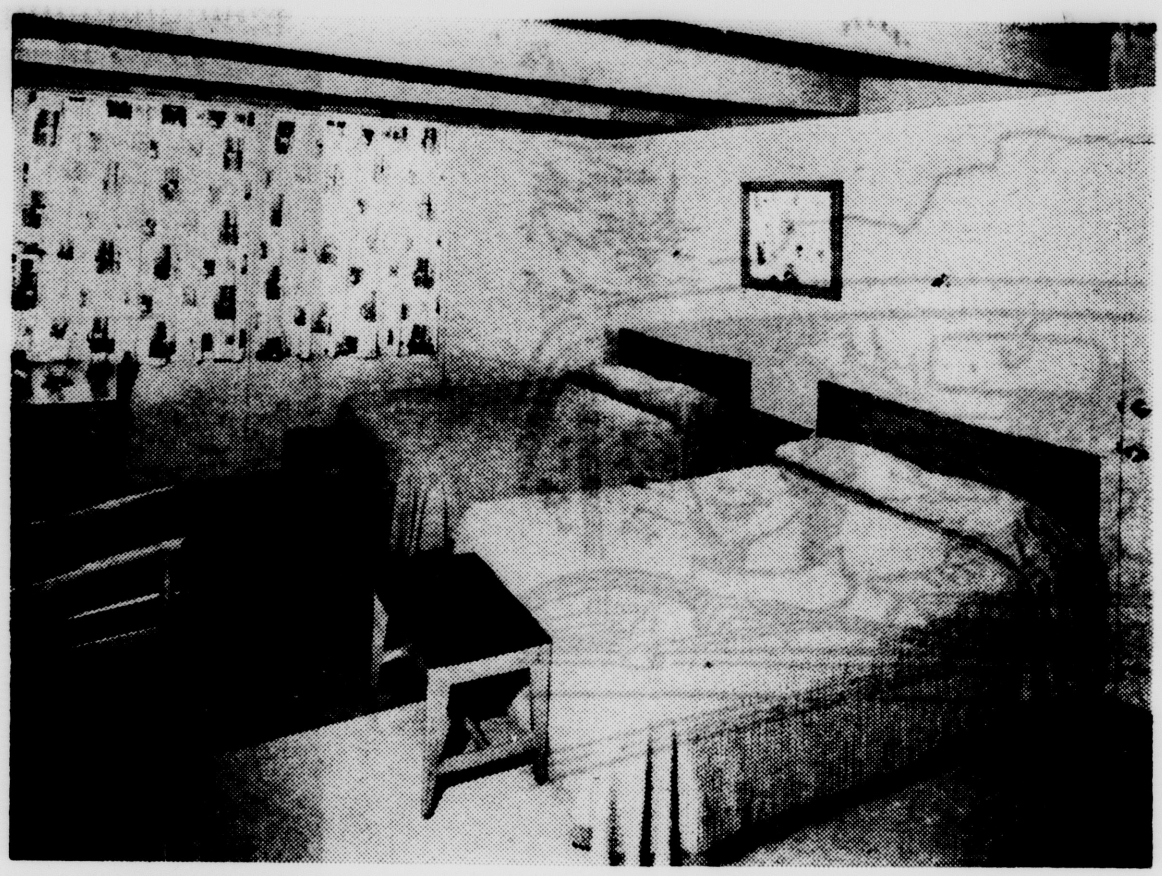
THE MODERN "pioneer" expects soft beds and warm covers, hot as well as cold running water, modern toilets, regulated heat, and good restaurants close by.

One indication of his hardiness was found in a recent survey in which campers entering parks were asked which items of "camping equipment" they brought with them. By far the most answered "camera," with "first aid kit" running second.

New conveniences greeting 1965 visitors to the oldest and most spectacular of the national parks, Yellowstone, gave another tipoff. While the park was closed between tour seasons, space heaters and water heaters were placed in the eight-plex cabins of its Canyon Village area.

HEATERS WERE provided for each room and Day & Night Manufacturing Co.'s 100-gallon commercial water heaters for each entire cabin. The park hopes to make similar additions in other areas as funds become available.

Further improvements of the national parks are being undertaken under the Congress-approved Mission 66 program. Scheduled for completion in 1966, this program includes building visitor centers, renovating existing facilities, and otherwise modernizing the parks "to assure the maximum protection of the scenic, scientific, and historic resources" and "to make them available for the use and enjoyment of present and future generations."



THIS COMFORTABLE ROOM is an interior unit of the Canyon Village tourist cabins in famed Yellowstone National Park. It is designed to make the "camper" as comfortable on vacation as he is at home. Primitive areas are gradually giving way to these kind of facilities.

They All Like To Surf In The Islands

Hand me my "gun", man, and let's hit the "heavies" off Waikiki.

The "soup" is fine for "hot doggin", but let's try for a "quasimoto" in one of the "big daddies" without a "wipe out".

That's surf talk, folks, and it's very much the "in" lingo among the beachniks in Hawaii.

Here, in this surfer's Valhalla, everyone who is really in the swim has a smattering of basic surf-ese. A "gun" for example, is a big wave surfboard which the pros prefer to the 20-pound fiberglas slabs used by beginners.

THE "HEAVIES" or "big daddies" are the giant breakers which have been known to tower up to 35 or 40 feet before crashing onto the beach. The "soup" is the foam from broken waves, ideal for novices, and "hot doggin" is stunt riding, usually in the foam. The "hot doggers" who try a bold stance as the board takes the waves are doing a "quasimoto."

If they don't make it, they do a "wipe out" or "take gas," or to put it bluntly, they get dunked.

A "ding" is a dent in the board and a "tube" is the hollow section in the wave. There are all sorts of terms, too, to describe ways to maneuver the board — spinners, standing islands, cut backs and so on.

SURFING ADDICTS not only talk their own language, but subscribe to surfing magazines, belong to surf clubs and sport surf togs. The surferettes in Hawaii wear bikinis, but Neoprene "wet suits" with booties and mittens are the fashion in cold waters up north. What is more, they go in for music-to-surf-by, and flock to surfing films such as "Going My Wave."

There was a time when surfing had its share of bad publicity, thanks to a cult of oddballs who threw tin cans at old ladies and staged beer brawls on the beaches. Today, however, surfing is as respectable a sport as skiing, and nowhere is it more respectable than in Hawaii with its fine surfing beaches at every turn.

When the surf is really rolling, dedicated surfers in Honolulu leave schools and offices, grab their boards and dash to Makaha Beach, 45 minutes from Waikiki on the west side of the island.

ANYONE WHO wants to try his luck at surfing in Hawaii might do well to take a few tips from champion Fred Hemmings, Jr. He offers this advice:

1. Know how to swim and relax in the water.
2. Let the local beach boy select a board suited to your height and weight. Boards rent for about $1 an hour.
3. Take a few lessons, and then go on to develop your own style.
4. Never surf alone or turn your back on the sea.
5. Do not let yourself become too tired.

SURFING LESSONS are readily available along the sands at Waikiki and at beaches throughout the Outer Islands. An hour's instruction at about $3.50 will show you how to get on from the side, and how to lie along the center line of the slab with the nose of the board about two inches out of the water. You paddle with hands slightly cupped and arms bent at the elbows. You steer with your arms as you would with the oars of a rowboat.

Do not use suntan lotion, incidentally, as it makes the board slippery. The best way, so they say, to turn around is to sit up near the end of the board and make your legs go in circles. When you're standing up, you can turn by placing a little more weight on one foot than the other.

FREE! 64-page book could save $200 on your European vacation.

This new book describes 20 first-class "Priceless" tours of Europe and Scandinavia. If you took any one on your own, you'd spend at least $200 more. (American Express advance planning makes this saving possible.) Example: A "Three-Week Whirl" in 11 countries from $956*, all inclusive.

*Your price from San Francisco. Based on new jet economy excursion air fares, effective April 1, subject to government approval.

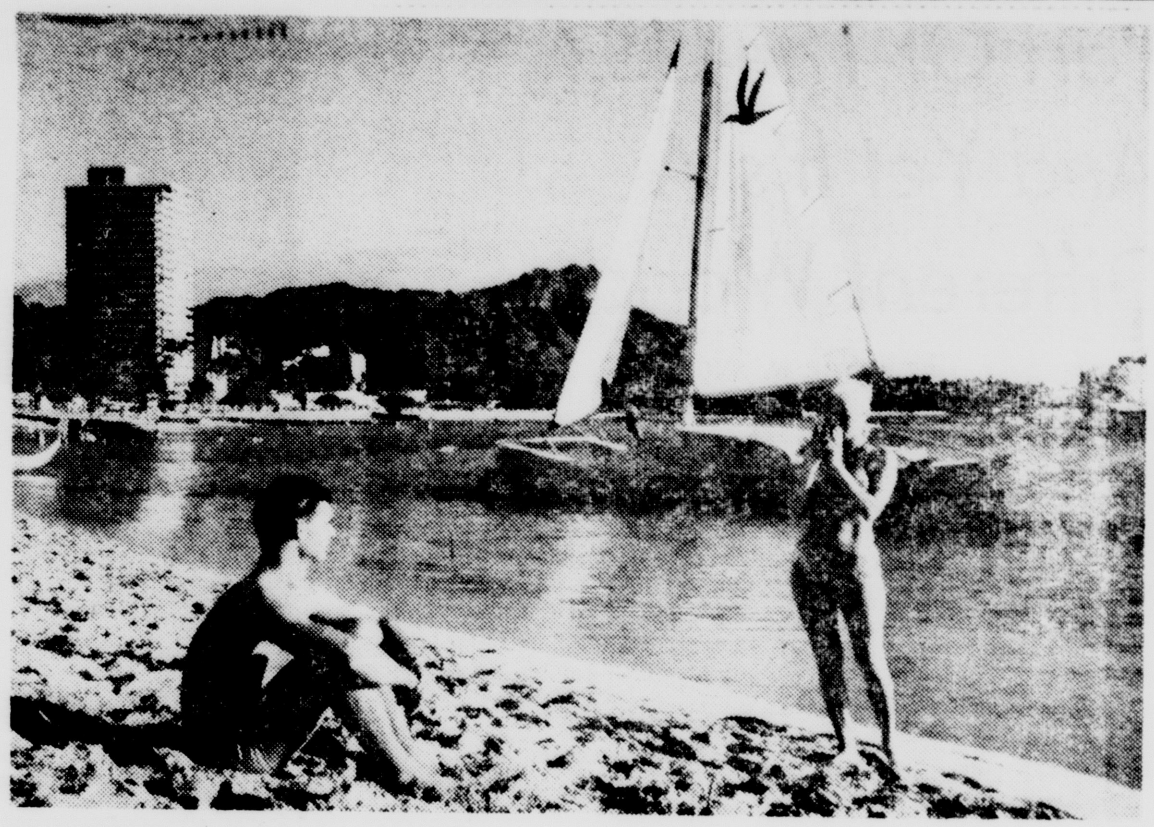
The Contrast Of Two Trips To The Islands

By WISHARD BROWN



IT'S ALWAYS vacation time in the islands. And, of course, one of the most popular spots is famed Waikiki Beach of Hawaii. However, there are other islands to be visited, beaches to be enjoyed and sights to be seen. The visitor thus returns time and time again to this American state in the Pacific.

Old Time Kamaaina's tell you that your first visit to the Hawaiian Islands should be made by ship.

After that, the Islands' magic hold on you will call you back and your return visits will want to be made as speedily as possible, so as to enjoy every moment to the fullest.

My first trip to the Islands was by ship during World War II, but instead of steaming through the Golden Gate with the colorful paper streamers spilling off the deck rails as you sail into the sunset, mine was as a guest of the government, departing from a South Pacific island which was being abandoned except for the cocoanut trees and a few French plantation owners.

OUR SHIP was an ancient Dutch steamer with a Tonkanese crew. The ship was covered with rust and the crew appeared to be rusty too. I'm sure the only things that held the hull of the ship together were the barnacles.

Already on board were additional guests — a battalion of infantry, the "Hawaiian Rifles" —now joined by our own infantry outfit of some 600 anxious GI's who were expecting this bucket of rust to return them to to the States.

By the time we got on board, bunk space was not obtainable, so 12 of our squad improvised by stretching two pup tents over a deck refrigerator. This shelter could hold us all—if we were lying in a straight, prone position.

The voyage lasted 12 days, being calculated by a carton of 24 tropical Hershey bars which I carried on board. Having one for breakfast and one for dinner, these bars lasted until the night before our arrival at Pearl Harbor.

THIS WAS not my idea of an ocean cruise. No comfortable deck chairs; instead, squatting on the deck, if you could find the space. No movies, no hi-fi, no cocktails, no hot meals, no showers, in fact, it was a "stinking" trip!!

All of these experiences were recalled as I made my most recent return visit to the islands aboard a Pan American Jet Clipper, departing from the San Francisco International Airport. From now on, flying is the only way for me.

The comforts are many and the trip so short. In just a few, short hours from takeoff to touchdown, you can enjoy a variety of pleasures designed to please all on board.

The "Theater-in-the-Air" allows you to select programs of your choice from comedy, mood music, pops, classical and special programing for the children—some nine different programs in all of varying length. Also, a full length movie, which you can enjoy without the TV commercials.

MY ONLY complaint was that the individual earphones could be more comfortable. My having an exceptionally large lower jaw complicated matters, for every time that I opened my mouth, the pressure exerted by my lower jaw would pop the earphones out of my ears.

The meals in flight were a gourmet's delight, being prepared by Maxim's of Paris. A large, colorful menu allowed you a variety of selection in choice of entrees, served with fine wines and cordials.

So enjoyable is the hospitality that you are tempted to keep yourself strapped in and never leave the aircraft, but as the Clipper doors open and you get the first feel of the gentle trade-winds, you are ready to begin your Hawaiian holiday.

IT HAS been said by many seasoned mainlanders that on your first trip you should see all of the Islands, if only briefly, and become acquainted with the differences and the delights of each island. This time I was anxious to visit Maui, as a place missed on previous visits.

I was not disappointed in the island, but my choice of hotels could have been better. Having never stayed in Maui, I selected the Sheraton-Maui. Unfortunately, the personnel was over-trained, commercial mainland style. But this is not typical of the majority of the Hawaiian resorts.

However, little time was spent there and I was completely fascinated by the village of Lahaina, years ago the whaling capital of the Mid-Pacific. This village is what you'd expect a South Seas community to look like—a large banyan tree in the center of town, covering a city-block area, alongside the fascinating little shops and the Pioneer Inn, with a side veranda and barroom, unchanged and unpainted in the past 80 years.

THE VILLAGE has a modern shopping center on its outskirts, but the central area has its own, unique charm.

A souvenir hunter would lose his mind in Charlie King's curio shop. Charlie is what you'd expect to find as a typical South Seas beachcomber. He allows you free run of the shop, even to the extent of going behind the counters and examining the merchandise. All types of South Seas and Hawaiian items are for sale at reasonable prices and one of the most popular is the Hawaiian helmet blowing shell which is blown by the natives at all of the resort area torch light ceremonies.

Dining out is fun in Lahaina and two favorites of mine were the Lahaina Broiler, an open-air dining room where the surf seems to creep up to your table, and Pineapple Hill, on a gentle knoll overlooking pineapple fields and the Maui coast towards the Islands of Molaki and Lanai.

THIS REMINDED me of one of the French plantations that I visited while in the New Hebrdies Islands in WW II.

Here, too, island delicacies can be found that are sometimes unobtainable elsewhere—turtle soup and turtle steak, for example.

Maui offers excellent swimming, although the surf is heavy compared to the beach at Waikiki.

The golfer would enjoy the Royal Kaanapalli which adjoins the Royal Lahaina and the Sheraton-Maui hotels. Even on a calm day, it can be a real test for the average golfer. Unfortunately, four days was the extent of our stay in Maui, returning to Honolulu via Pacific Air Charter, a comfortable six place airplane that picks you up almost at your hotel doorstep and whisks you back to Oahu. This service I found to be ideal for island-hopping, and it is not too well known by the mainlander.

AS A WHOLE, the beautiful islands of Hawaii offer something for everybody.

For those who like the whirl and excitement, there is Waikiki—Kauai for scenic granduer —Hawaii for the volcanic activity — and the colorful Kona coast and Maui are becoming more popular retreats for the island visitor. Those outer islands are fast enlarging their facilities for the thousands of new visitors expected each year, as Hawaii is truly a year-around vacation land. And from the standpoint of time, you can be in Hawaii in about the time it it takes you to drive to Lake Tahoe.

Part Of The USA, And Yet It's A Different World

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

Ten hours air time away lies a bit of the United States where the culture is a blend of Spain and Africa, where steel bands play calypso rhythms, and where old Spanish forts stand guard over ultra-modern hotels.

The 10 hours is actual flying time by Delta Air Lines jet from San Francisco Airport to San Juan, capital of Puerto Rico—including stops at Dallas and New Orleans.

Ten hours is enough to change worlds. Though Puerto Rico is United States territory — and may someday become the 51st state—it is in effect a foreign country, but one without the difficulties of vaccinations, passports, visas, and exchange of currencies.

THE LANGUAGE is Spanish (though the knowledgeable taxicab drivers all speak English quite well enough to communicate and are likely to prove gold mines of gladly given information).

The culture is something that evolved through the extermination of the native Borinqueno Indians by the Spanish conquerors who followed Columbus to the island, and their replacement by slaves imported from Africa. The beat of that steel band is likely to contain rhythms of both Spain and Africa—along with Tin Pan Alley. But the limbo, a "dance" that is equally characteristic, is pure West Indian (though perhaps with a deep, forgotten African past).

When one steps from that Delta jetliner, as I did, he finds the airport facilities convenient, with much less walking than was necessary at San Francisco's airport.

The airport is on Isla Verde, a promontory of the main island of 3,435-square-mile Puerto Rico.

SAN JUAN proper is on a separate island connected by several bridges.

Here, in the Plaza de Colon, is a statue of Christopher Columbus, who landed on Puerto Rico on his second voyage to the Americas, in 1493. His landing was not at San Juan, however, and the honor of being the first place where Columbus set foot on what is now United States soil is disputed between Aquadilla and Aguada. Columbus called the island San Juan Bautista.

San Juan was founded in 1511 by Juan Ponce de Leon, first Spanish governor of the island, and became the capital eight years later. It was from here that Ponce sailed in 1513 on the search for the "fountain of youth" that took him to Florida. There is a statue of him, too, in San Jose Square.

GUARDING THE "rich port" from which the whole island eventually took its name are Fort Brooke, with Morro Castle jutting into the ocean, at one end, and Fort San Cristobal, midway on the ocean side. These are of the Spanish vintage.

The municipal government for about 20 years has been encouraging restoration of the old Spanish buildings which cling to the hillsides below these forts —and which had become a filthy slum area with the passage of time. There, along the narrow old streets—some of which are composed entirely of steps running up the steep slopes—are intriguing houses, many with wood and wrought iron-ornamented, narrow balconies along their second floors.

This is a city older than any on the mainland of North America. But from atop what remains of the great city wall, or from the eminence of Fort Brooke above San Jose Plaza, where Puerto Rican crowds often demonstrate for independence, one can see the modernist lines of the new luxury hotels—and almost hear the band music and the click of dice and roulette wheels.

THOSE HOTELS and their gambling casinos are highly important to the economy of Puerto Rico.

In 1952, the newly created commonwealth, under its first (and so far, only) popularly elected president, Luis Munoz Marin, began "Operation Bootstrap" to try to lift itself from dependence on U.S. government subsidies.

To attract industry, it offers no property taxes for 10 to 17 years to any company locating on the island — plus freedom from U.S. corporate taxes.

It has been quite successful. However, though the factories put dollars into Puerto Rican pockets, their tax-free status does little to support the government. So it depends heavily on tourists and gambling.

ACCORDING TO Eduardo Rodriguez Perez, supervisor of activities for the Economic Development Administration, a half million tourists visited last year by air, and 100,000 by water.

Many of them left plenty of dollars at the seven gambling casinos in San Juan which are licensed by the government.

The rule is strict for a casino license: It can be only in a luxury hotel with more than 100 rooms, and the hotel must be operated by a legitimate company. One hotel was built and in operation when the government discovered it was owned by a man with close gangland connections. The casino license was at once revoked. Since the hostelry could not operate profitably without it, the owners sold out to the Conrad Hilton organization. It became the San Jeronimo Hilton, second of two Hilton hotels in San Juan (the other is the Caribe Hilton), both with gambling casinos.

BESIDES THE casinos, the government draws gambling revenue from two other sources: Horse races three days each week at El Comandante, which has pari-mutuel wagering, and a weekly government-operated lottery. The latter, however, is played mostly by the residents rather than the tourists.

The music in those swank hotels may be by jazz bands, perhaps with one or two steel drums to add a West Indian touch. But the tourist should be sure to visit some night club with a steel band.

The instruments of a steel band are nothing but oil drums, cut down to various sizes and with their metal heads bent to concave shape. On these, the musicians beat with fingers, palm and heel of the hand. The music is like nothing you have heard before, and you will never forget it.

AND IF YOU find the right place, you can see the limbo danced in San Juan — by a lithe native who will, with a filled highball glass balanced on his forehead, wiggle his way under a bamboo pole no more than a foot off the floor, while remaining on his feet. That, too, is never to be forgotten.

But San Juan, even with its old walled city, its forts, its luxury hotels and its limbo, is by no means all of Puerto Rico. As the Economic Development Administration points out, there are 3,000 miles of roads on the island — and every one of them goes some place that is interesting.

There are beautiful beaches, laved by the startlingly clear aquamarine waters where the Atlantic meets the Mediterranean. There are picturesque villages, sugar cane plantations. And some of the finest hotels are not in San Juan.

AND THERE IS the rain forest, El Yunque, about 25 miles southwest of San Juan on a mountain rising to 3,500 feet above sea level. Here the annual rainfall is over 180 inches, with rain nearly every day followed by sunshine. More than 300 species of tropical trees grow on El Yunque, and among them are more than 50 varieties of tree ferns, hundreds of orchids, numerous kinds of birds, and fascinating butterflies.

When you leave the island, a great trip home awaits you. The Delta jet leaves in the morning, and because of the difference in time, gets you home for supper. And its route lies directly over Watling Island, where Columbus first set foot in the New World, calling it San Salvador. It lies also directly over other islands of the Bahamas chain.

Puerto Rico is a year-around vacation spot, but "the season" ends in April, as the nights, usually around 70 degrees, get warmer during the summer.

THE TRAVELER flying into Puerto Rico has this view from the air as he approaches the capital city of San Juan. Morro Castle is in the foreground, at the tip of San Juan Antiguo, and behind it the city of San Juan where modern buildings sit next to old Spanish houses lining narrow streets. Still farther back is the main island of Puerto Rico.

THE ANCIENT WALLS of Morro Castle, built by the Spanish to guard Puerto Rico ("the rich port") juts over the clear blue water before the admiring gaze of these two visitors. Behind it lies San Juan where the 16th century meets 1966.

CANADIAN PUBS GET NEW LOOK

Here is heart-warming news for travelers of moderate means.

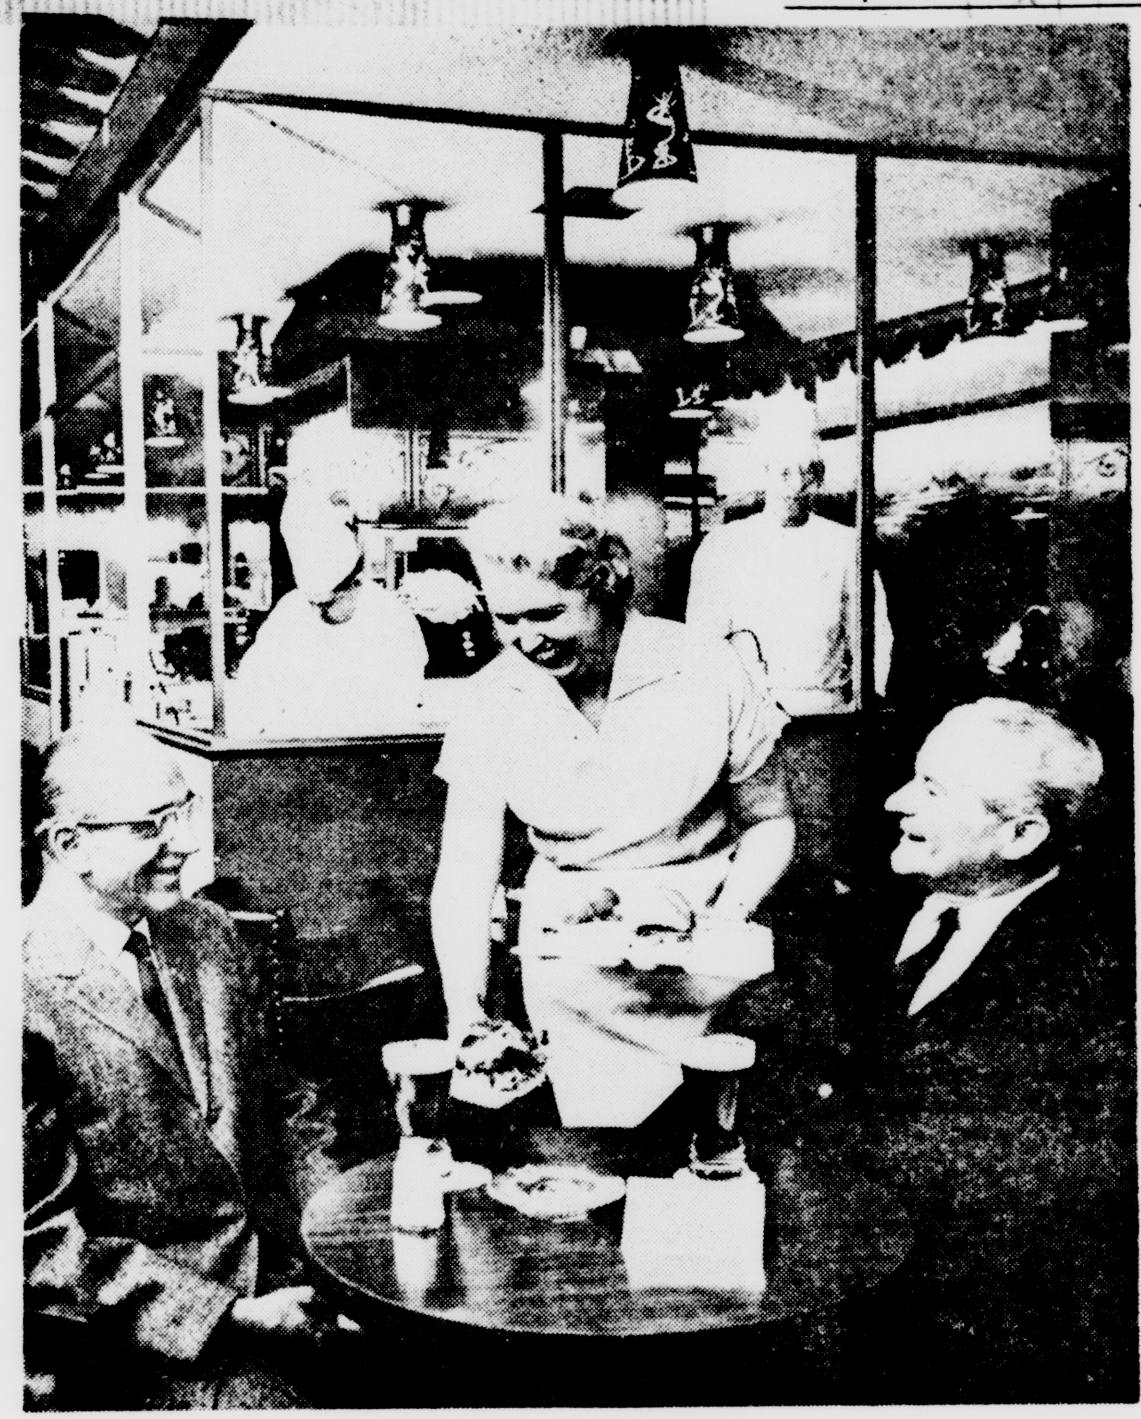
Any visitor who feels overwhelmed by the 50-million-dollar beauty treatment which Vancouver hoteliers have recently given their city should frequent some of the less ambitious of the bistros, in the quieter streets of British Columbia's great metropolitan seaport.

These are blossoming with a new, sometimes exotic, gaiety.

Simple taverns, once the haunt of solemnly dedicated beer drinkers, are sprouting white-clad chefs (who prepare baron of beef sandwiches, deep-fried prawns and innumerable snacks) and pert "Bunny Girls" who carry the food to the customers.

And that isn't all. The accent is on decor, with a capital "D."

Results are sometimes astonishing. On a quiet, seemly and inexpensive pub-crawl in Vancouver you can now move from a half-timbered Elizabethan inn to a Queen Anne mansion, from there to the Paris de Toulouse Lautrec, thence to an imitation gas-lit interior harking back to the New York of Lillian Russell and Diamond Jim Brady, and on to the dark blue velvet drapes and glittering chandeliers of an establishment which resembles a publican's dream of the St. Petersburg of the Romanoffs.



THE SIMPLE TAVERNS of Vancouver, Canada, are now sprouting white clad chefs and smiling maids who carry the food to the costumes. Decor is now, too.

Road To Guadalajara Beckons To Tourists

To drive down Mexico's west coast to Guadalajara, it is suggested you begin at Nogales, Ariz., and cross the border there.

Take the Mexican West Coast Highway straight down to Hermosille, which might be your first overnight spot. You also will pass by Guaymas which has two good hotels and, if it looks interesting to you, stay there.

THE ROUTE, which is hard to get away from, goes from Nogales to Guaymas to Hermosille, Los Mochis, Mazatlan, then turns up to Tepic and goes on to Guadalajara.

There are plenty of good accommodations that run from $5 to $6 per person along the way.

Gasoline (buy Gasolmex in the green pumps) runs about 32 cents U.S. per gallon and is the best grade. You will have no shortage of gas stations on this or any other route in Mexico. The filling stations are operated by the government-run petroleum industry so your U.S. credit cards are no good in Mexico for gasoline.

RESTAURANTS and hotels which honor international credit cards always have a sign in front listing them.

There is plenty of tourist literature available on Guadalajara and the surrounding areas. You might try the nearest Mexican consulate for this information. If they don't have all you want, go to the Mexican Government Tourist Office in Guadalajara and they will supply you with maps, data and everything you need.

U.S. oil companies put out good maps on Mexico.

A Salute From The Orient

"The Orient Salutes Marin," a 90-minute travel show on Hong Kong and the Orient, will be presented in Olney Hall at Marin College, Kentfield, at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Featuring Chinese classical and folk dances by Julie Leung and Vivian Yau, two air hostesses of Cathay Pacific Airways, the travel presentation will also include the prize-winning travel film on Hong Kong, "A Million Lights Shall Glow," as well as a narration accompanied by color slides on Hong Kong and the Orient.

Souvenirs of Hong Kong and the Orient will be drawn as door prizes at the end of the presentation.

Sponsored by the Hong Kong Tourist Assn., Canadian Pacific Air Lines, Cathay Pacific Airways and United Air Lines, the travel show is open to the public free of charge by invitation through the travel agents of Marin County. Invitations may also be obtained through the San Francisco offices of the sponsoring organizations.

Appropriately the narrations of the travel presentation are undertaken by two Marinites. The Orient will be narrated by Victor Eckland of San Anselmo, representing Cathay Pacific Airways, while Lorenzo Lo, of Mill Valley, information director for North America of the Hong Kong Tourist Assn., will narrate the presentation on Hong Kong.

"The Orient Salutes Marin" is part of a nation-wide travel presentation visiting 14 major cities of the United States. Already seen by audiences in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Dallas, the presentation will visit Denver, Kansas City, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., and Boston after the presentation in Marin.

Sights At Our Own Doorsteps

If your plans for that trip to Europe, that flight to Hawaii or on across the Pacific, that "see America" cross-country tour, or whatever your dream trip destination might be, must await another year, do not despair.

Marinites are fortunate in that right at their doorsteps are a bevy of top vacation attractions.

These sights attract visitors from throughout the world.

Yet many a Marinite has never seen them. Or has seen them all too rarely.

Some of them are pictured here in photographs furnished by the Redwood Empire Assn., an organization dedicated to the publicizing of Northern California's many tourist attractions.

If you haven't yet visited Mendocino's rugged coast, Mount Shasta's majestic slopes, Death Valley's desert floor, San Francisco's many cosmopolitan sights, the Luther Burbank home in Santa Rosa, the many state and national parks and monuments within our state, the Redwood Empire Assn. suggests you do so now.

THE LOVELY AND rugged coast of Mendocino County to our north is world famous for its beauty, and for the wildflowers that come down to the Pacific and contrast with the blue of the ocean.

Calendar Of Events For '66

There's no better proof that "all the world's a stage," as Shakespeare put it, than Pan Am's "Calendar of World Events for 1966."

Covering over 100 major countries from Afghanistan to Zambia, the calendar indicates that there is a spectacular show somewhere on this planet every single day of the year.

Since Festival USA is the theme of the United States Travel Service in 1966, the calendar features the top events in each of the 50 states in the Union. Notable among them are: The Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D.C., from April 12 to 17; the Kentucky Derby in Louisville from April 27 to May 7; Indianapolis 500 from May 24 to 30; the Jazz Festival in Newport, R.I., from July 1 to 4; the 35th Annual American Indian Exposition in Anadarko, Okla., from July 11 to 17; the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial in Gallup, N.M., from Aug. 11 to 14; the Lawn Tennis Championship in Forest Hills, N.Y., in September; Aloha Week in Hawaii from Oct. 16 to 22.

Events are listed under various geographic headings, that is, the Caribbean, the Middle East, Europe, Asia and the Far East, Africa, South America, Central America and the Pacific. The listing for each area reflects in many ways the culture, climate and customs of the people.

Plan Ahead For Your Auto Trip

A study of maps and routes for a vacation journey can save many frustrations and sometimes many miles of unnecessary driving, the California State Automobile Assn. advises.

A few minutes study of the routes for the proposed motor trip will familiarize the driver with the proper turns, road conditions, freeway interchanges or highway junctions which he will be facing during the outing.

FAILURE TO spend the time looking at routes and maps could cause late arrival at a planned destination, extra miles of driving or missing the more scenic or enjoyable route to the final destination.

A driver who is familiar with his routes and road conditions is a much more relaxed driver, and as a result is a safer driver on the road.

To achieve the most out of a trip, some pre-planning is necessary.

JACK LONDON State Park in the Valley of the Moon near Glen Ellen features the eerie remains of writer London's famed Wolf House, destroyed by fire in 1913.

INCLUDED IN the planning is where you plan to make stops, advanced accommodations reservations, distances for the entire trip, and preventive maintenance of the family car.

From the extra minutes spent in planning hours of pleasure, relaxation, rest, recreation, and protection will be gained, the California State Automobile Assn. predicts.

Custom Tailoring

The island of Trinidad with its Oriental community compares with Hong Kong when it comes to custom tailoring. A man's suit, made from the finest British tropical worsted, costs about $35. Clothing can be made overnight. but two or three fittings are advisable.

The Odyssey

VOL. 1 PUBLISHED BY REDWOOD TRAVEL ADVISORS, 1344 FOURTH ST., SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, PHONES 454-4932, 479-4044 No. 1

EDITORIAL

This is the first of a regular monthly appearance of the ODYSSEY. This edition was put together in a matter of hours to meet a deadline. We will try to keep you informed each month on what is new in transportation, hotels, tours, visa and health requirements and fare information.

Redwood Travel Advisors has provided a travel service for Marin County since 1948 Redwood's travel library is very extensive and provides up-to-the-minute information on all parts of the world.

No travel arrangement is too small or too large for Redwood Travel.

FREE VACATION TO EUROPE, HAWAII & MEXICO

Redwood will soon announce a plan where you might receive your vacation FREE. A series of tours with set departures will be made available through their five offices. Every 16th booking will establish a free arrangement, which will be given to one of the group. Book all your travel at a Redwood office.

YOUTH FARES 50% DISCOUNT

Most scheduled airlines have a youth fare program. If you are under 22, you can purchase an Identification Card for $3.00. By presenting this card at time of ticket purchase you pay only 50% of the fare. There are some hitches; no reservations can be made, you must stand by until all full fare passengers are boarded, also military standbys. We don't recommend standby unless time is unimportant. Applications for Identification Cards are available at Redwood at no cost. Youth fare is not valid to Honolulu and on certain holidays.

25 PER CENT SAVINGS ON AIR TICKETS

UNITED AIRLINES has filed a new tariff to take effect in late March for a 25% discount on round-trip tickets. This will provide a saving of $76.18 on a flight to New York. The fares will not be good from noon Friday to noon Saturday, and from noon Sunday to noon Monday. There will also be a period in June, July and August when this 25% discount will not be applicable. All other airlines have also filed for this same discount.

HAWAII AT STILL LOWER FARES

In December new jet planes carrying over 200 passengers, will be in service to Hawaii. The projected one-way fare is $85.00, and even as low as $50.00.

NOW FIVE OFFICES IN CALIFORNIA

Redwood Travel now has in operation five offices with a total staff of 26. The main office is located at 1344 Fourth Street, San Rafael. Branch offices are located at 710 Second Street in Davis; Redwood National Bank Building in Napa; and at 2777 Cleveland Avenue, Coddingtown, in Santa Rosa; also at 198 Northgate Shopping Center in Terra Linda. All offices are still directed from 1344 Fourth Street, San Rafael.

EUROPE FOR $7.00 A DAY

Yes, it is true and for a fully conducted tour—London to London, a total of 40 days, for only $270.00. You will visit Dover, Ostend, Arnhem, Cologne, Bonn, Frankfurt, Karlsruhe, Baden-Baden, Basle, Feldkirch, Worgle, Rosenheim, Carinthia, Styria, Udine, Mestre, Padua, Bologna, Pompeii, Viterbo, Acquapendente, Siena, Genoa, San Remo, Monaco, Beziers, Narbonne, Perpignan, Tarragona, Valberde, Castile, Burgos, Hendaye, Bordeaux, Angouleme, Tours, and Ypres.

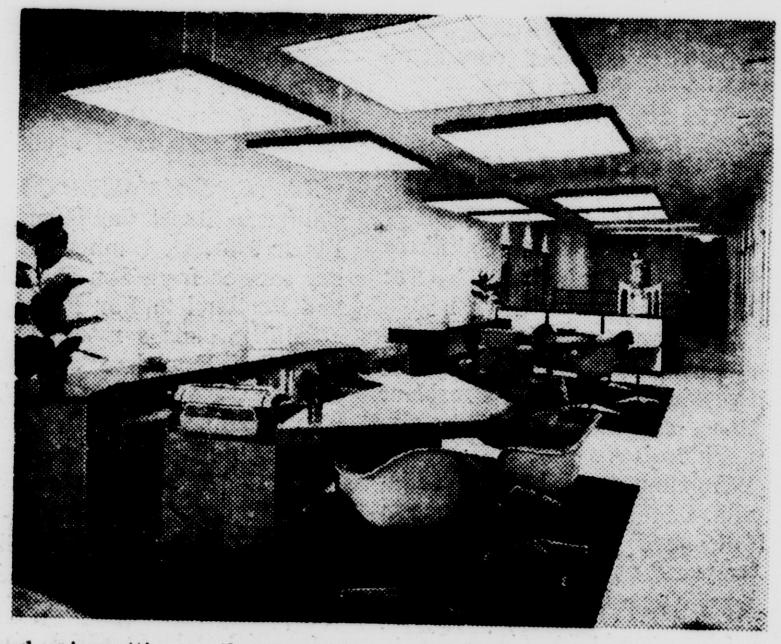
Departures will be on May 19th, June 2nd and 27th, July 14th, August 4th, September 15th.

Age limit 30 years.

YOUNG AMERICAN TOURS JULY 3—JULY 31, 1966

Young American Tours is offering a thrill-packed twenty-nine-day tour of New England and the Eastern Seaboard to high school students between the ages of 15 and 18. Far more than a mere scenic excursion, this tour emphasizes to the soon-to-be-college students the wonderful historic background of our country's greatness. Also, it will allow them to see and examine a number of our Eastern colleges and universities as they consider their future education.



This tour is one of many facets —educational, historical, scenic and fun-packed. It takes the student by train and chartered bus through nineteen of our fifty states and two Canadian provinces. Almost thirty colleges, universities and institutions of advanced learning will be seen or visited. The student will see some of North America's most beautiful scenery — the Sierra Nevada and Rocky Mountains, Great Lakes, Niagara Falls, St. Lawrence Seaway, rolling wooded hills and rock-bound coast of New England, Cape Cod, Statue of Liberty, Hudson River, Chesapeake Bay and many others. And he or she will re-live many of the events that formed the foundation of our country's heritage—the landing of the Pilgrims, Boston Tea Party, signing of the Declaration of Independence, Lexington and Concord, the Battle of Gettysburg, the founding of Jamestown, Washington, D.C., and its many historical events and many, many others.

In addition, he or she will be conducted through many of our leading institutions of learning and lore—Fort Dearborn, Williamsburg, the United Nations Building, our country's Capitol, the Smithsonian Institution, Library of Congress, Harvard University, the Naval and Coast Guard academies and numerous others.

Add to this the fun part of this tour—cruises along the Ottawa and Hudson Rivers, a Broadway stage show, Radio City Music Hall, and the camaraderie of a train and bus ride—and the student has all the ingredients of a never-to-be-forgotten experience.

TOTAL TOUR COST — $935.00 (includes all taxes) from San Francisco.

Call or write to Paul Hartman for attractive tour brochure.

GO ABROAD . . . TO CANADA BY SEA

What will undoubtedly appeal to many, not only because the opportunity of "getting away from it all" at the drop of a hat is a stimulant we all need at some time or other, but also because the low cost and high attractions are such that considerable interest is bound to be aroused anyway, is the choice of two short, but extremely fascinating, package tours we are now able to offer. They could be the jackpot for anyone who can ill-afford to be away for longer than a week, yet wants to go somewhere for a rest and and something that is different. Taking advantage of the round trip voyages SAN FRANCISCO/VANCOUVER/SAN FRANCISCO scheduled for those two likeable giants of the P &O-Orient Lines, S.S. "ORSOVA" (29,000 tons) sailing Wednesday, June 22nd, and S.S. "ORIANA" (42,000 tons), sailing Friday, September 2nd, a complete package has been put together in connection with each sailing, consisting of the round voyage and a full program of well planned sightseeing ashore during the day each ship will be at Vancouver, that beautiful city of British Columbia which has so much to offer and where Americans are always welcome. Included are visits to the world famous Stanley Park, Lost Lagoon, Shakeaspearean Gardens and the Queen Elizabeth Arboretum, to name but a few of the highly illuminating attractions provided, and you will be taken from the ship's side and returned, with a special Canadian Smorgasbord style dinner or lunch in between.

"ORSOVA" and "ORIANA" are very popular units of the P & O fleet. Stabilized and fully air-conditioned, and with a name for comfort and service, they offer what can only be described as the almost cruise-like conditions of life at sea in a well run ship. A fine invigorating trip must surely be anticipated in either; restful if you wish or with all the fun in the world if this is preferred. Either way, the fine healthy life on board will surely blow away the cobwebs and be of great benefit to mind and body.

And there can be no question of living out of the proverbial suitcase, with constant packing and unpacking, and wondering if there is going to be room for a souvenir or two or three to take home. Your baggage allowance is generous, and everything you take with you can be left on board in the cabin while enjoying yourself ashore in Vancouver . . . there is simply no problem.

Anyone interested is recommended to apply to us forthwith for one of our special brochures.

RACING FANS . . . ATTENTION!

Competition Press and Autoweek is sponsoring a fabulous 24-DAY RACING TOUR, with tickets and transportation provided to the INDIANAPOLIS 500 . . . NURBURGRING 1000km . . . BELGIAN GRAND PRIX . . . and 24 hours of LeMANS!

PRINCESS PATRICIA IS HOTEL IN ACAPULCO

PRINCESS PATRICIA may be the answer for your hotel accommodations in Acapulco, during this busy season, when most hotels are sold out. A few exciting cruise dates remain on PRINCESS "PAT'S" itinerary between now and Easter.

The "TOREADOR CRUISE" sails from Los Angeles on February 25th; "PINATA CRUISE" on March 11th; "VIAJE de la LUNA CRUISE" on March 25th; the "EASTER CRUISE" sails on APRIL 8th; and the "VAYA CON DIOS" cruise on April 22nd. The duration of the full cruise is 14 days—calling at PUERTO VALLARTA, MAZATLAN, ACAPULCO and MANZANILLO. Your ship is your hotel while in port.

You do not have 14 days to spare? Sail one way on the PRINCESS PATRICIA and return by air; you may even call a few days in Mexico City for a bull fight or a hop to the Pyramids.

PRINCESS PATRICIA returns to her INSIDE PASSAGE CRUISE at the end of the Mexico Spring season; offering enroute a unique three-country cruise. Sail from Los Angeles on Friday, April 22nd, to Mexico and return all the way to Victoria, Canada on May 3rd.

Again, if you only have a few days to spare, why not board ship on April 29th in San Francisco for three fun-filled days to Victoria?

For reservations and further details contact Connie Hofer at REDWOOD TRAVEL ADVISORS, 1344 Fourth Street, San Rafael. Tel: 454-4932.

PLAY GOLF?

A 22-day full escorted Golfing Tour of Europe will depart San Francisco on April 18, returning to San Francisco on May 9, 1966, and will visit some of the most famous golfing courses for those who would like to test their skill on the European scene.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

More bargains on the Nonesuch label:

SHOSHTAKOVICH: Sonata for Cello and Piano; R. STRAUSS: Sonata for Cello and Piano in F Major—Harvey Shapiro, cello/Jascha Zayde, piano — Nonsuch Stereo H-71050:

This is the first stereo performance of the Schumannesque cello sonata by Strauss, and the equal of the other stereo version of the Shostakovich piece.

The Russian composer's effort of 1934 was one of the last works he wrote before being leaned on by the party authorities and prevented from composing in an atmosphere of artistic freedom.

Both of these works exhibit the singing voice of the cello and are more Romantic in nature than most modern works.

MILITARY FANFARES, MARCHES & CHORUSES FROM THE TIME OF NAPOLEON—Brass and Percussion Ensembles of Gardiens de la Paix de Paris directed by Desire Dondeyne, Vocal Ensemble directed by Jean Rollin—Nonsuch Stereo H171075:

A curious and unusual collection of colorful band and choral music from the royally magnificent Napoleonic Empire.

Just as the soldiers' uniforms were ridiculously ornate, so is this music. Melodies are short and to the point, but there is much repetition, with ceremonial drums, cymbals, etc. Composers such as Gossec, Paisiello, and that indomitable fellow, Anon., will be recognized. Great in stereo!

LITURGICAL MUSIC FROM THE RUSSIAN CATHEDRAL—Soloists, The Johannes-Damascenus Choir of Essen directed by Karl Linke—Nonesuch Stereo H-71073:

This choral a cappella music of the Russian church is very little known in the outside world. It has as long and distinguished a tradition and reportory as Gregorian Chant in the Catholic Church.

The melodies are not actually plain chant, but very close to it. The music swells up and dies away in late-Romantic fashion, the harmonies frequently suggest sacred music of Mozart or Haydn, and the fantastic Russian bassos are often used in a doubled bass part a full octave below the already-subbasement level of the low voices.

This music must be heard to be believed—it makes Western unaccompanied church music sound pale indeed.

Although the lp is rechanneled from an original mono tape, the sound is full of depth and richness.

BAROQUE MUSIC FOR RECORDERS—Concentus Musicus of Denmark directed by I. K. and A. H. Mathiesen—Nonesuch Stereo H-71064:

Edward Tatnall Canby's liner notes are the first I've come across that begin by explaining that the recorders in question are not the sort you put reels of tape on and make your baby cry into, but instead the type of ancient wooden flute that one blows. This explanation should be little needed in Marin County, where the recorder is one of the most popular do-it-yourself instruments, and several amateur groups exist for those interested in ensemble performance.

This lp is one of the best collections of recorder music I have heard, and the performers are absolutely unbelieveable—almost no squeaks, gasps or intonation problems usually heard even with professionals. Perhaps the tape editor was the genius, I don't know.

There are some fascinating galliards, Polish and German dances from around 1600, sonatas (both in A Minor) by Loeillet and Handel, and a sonata for recorder, oboe, violin and continuo by Johann F. Fasch, a predecessor of Bach's whom the great master admired very much.

MARC-ANTOINE CHARPENTIER: Oratorio de Noel (Pastoral on the Birth of our Lord Jesus Christ)—Roger Blanchard Ensemble — Nonesuch Stereo H-71082:

This 17th century work for the Christmas season partakes of both the Italian and the French styles in music of the period. The characters of the angels, shepherds, etc. are both dramatic and sympolic. The music is much more colorful than the liturgical works of the Flemish or Dutch school of this period.

MARIN POETS' CORNER

APOLOGY

I lie in silence, tears full in my eyes,
And look at him despondently. I know
He will not speak. My sigh of counterfeit
Profundity falls on impassivity and dies.
Unhappiness becomes a ritual, and in this
I always offer tears to his inquiring quietness.
I wait for him to speak, to pierce
My discontent, to offer comfort through analysis.
He lingers; and silent, goads me so
That I, frantic, irate, burble forth
A practiced protest to his unresponsiveness
As if that were my problem. But I know
With shame, the unyielding silence we now share
Is just reproach to my self-righteous, inarticulate despair.

STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

Long after the sweetness of the discount purchase has wilted away, the bitterness of the poor service and wrong combination of items that were purchased remains. Ponder these words! Remember, that the purchase of a component home music system is a purchase intended to give many years of relaxation and enjoyment. Remember, also, that the average user is not a radio technician; therefore, he cannot select and interconnect and maintain the components without the aid of an expert.

Let's analyze the so called DISCOUNT STORE and the quality HI-FI STEREO SALON. In order for any store to exist, it must make a profit on what it sells to pay its employees and its expenses. The average discount house cannot afford to hire experienced radio journeymen knowledgeable audio consultants. To make a profit, the discount store has to hire low salaried clerks, with little or no experience in their products, and has to maintain a low operating overhead. What does this mean to you the consumer? Low operating overhead robs you of being able to shop in a well organized atmosphere where there are sufficient personnel to help you with your needs and to give you the individual attention that you deserve so that you can make the right selection. Instead, the consumer is left to drift through a barn-like structure and between counters heaped with merchandise. Select what you can with little or no help.

The purchase of Hi-Fi Stereo Components from the average discount house is even worse. The consumer gets a sealed carton containing the component. When the consumer arrives home, opens the carton and finds that the item does not function properly, he has no recourse with the discount house. Most of them do not have any service department and will not take returns, warranty repairs, or exchanges. The consumer is left to drive to the nearest factory warranty station, plunk down his unit, and wait from 3 weeks to 3 months to have his unit repaired.

Demonstration facilities, if any at all, are very meager and coupled with the inexpert knowledge of the salesman gives the consumer little chance for a very wise home music system.

Next week, the advantages of the Hi-Fi Stereo Salon.

Who Drives Best—The Men Or Women?

Tam District Instructors Dodge A Loaded Question

No one has really ever settled the question of whether men or women are the better drivers.

The five-man driver instruction team in the Tamalpais Union High School District, through their experience in drivo-trainer, classroom, and training cars, often consider the poser.

In two sessions per year at each of the district's schools—Tamalpais, Drake, and Redwood — the teachers prepare youngsters for the road.

THEY TEACH in the simulated conditions of the mobile drivo-trainer, where they can observe and measure by instrument; they teach in the conventional classrooms where they can discuss, lecture, and test; and they teach in the dual-controlled automobile where they can demonstrate and watch.

So who's the better driver, girl or boy?

Naturally, to a complex and tricky question like that, no one's going to give a direct and simple answer. It could be dangerous.

HEAD OF THE district team, which does a land rush business during the summer as well as during regular year and in adult sessions, is Morris T. Shepherd of San Anselmo, a veteran driver education teacher.

He says: "The mores and social concepts of boy-girl relationships become apparent when they get involved in driver training. Boys think they have to show their physical male superiority by being daring. They soon learn that physical ability is secondary to good judgment and healthy attitudes about driving.

"Girls, on the other hand, entertain a belief that chivalry still exists in driving. (It probably never did.) They soon find out that there is no double standard on the road. Men don't give women the right-of-way on the basis of sex, for example."

Shepherd says the female student also realizes, sometimes to her surprise, that she can be just as adept in the necessary physical skills. She realizes that she can compete, at least in the driving world.

'THAT NOT ONLY helps the girl, giving her confidence and eventual competence, it helps the boy get a more realistic view of himself. It tends to stabilize his ego," Shepherd adds.

Then he concludes: "In general, male and female students attain the same amount of physical skills, develop the same attitudes, and exert the same good judgment. Regardless of sex, the hope is to get them all in the category of safe and sane drivers when the course is completed."

Marin's Irish Don

Timoteo Murphy Was A Colorful And A Much Beloved Figure

By FLORENCE DONNELLY
Independent-Journal Historian

Don Timoteo Murphy, who received the vast land grant of Rancho Santa Margarita, Las Gallinas and San Pedro, was a giant of a man— physically, in his properties, and morally.

The grant, received from Gov. Manuel Micheltorena on Feb. 14, 1844, covered what is now the northeastern portion of San Rafael, and extended north to Ygnacio Pacheco's Rancho San Jose.

Don Timoteo was born in Wexford County, Ireland, in 1800. His father was in comfortable circumstances and gave the son a fairly good education. After leaving school, young Murphy was employed in a commercial house in Dublin, leaving that for a more lucrative position with Hartnell & Co., an English firm operating in Lima, Peru.

HE WORKED IN Lima two years, then was sent to Monterey in California, where Hartnell had its northern branch. This was in 1828.

Murphy, the "extranjero," as foreigners who came to California were called by the Spanish-speaking population, commanded instant attention. He was tall, six feet, two inches in height, and almost 300 pounds in weight. Young, erect, handsome, fair-skinned, he rode a horse as if he were molded in the saddle.

But it was not stature alone which commanded respect for the newcomer. He had learned to write and speak Spanish fluently while in Lima, was witty and generous, and became extremely popular with the Spanish-speaking population.

Jasper O'Farrell, the pioneer civil engineer who knew Murphy well, said that the Hartnell enterprises (packing and exporting beef and hides) in Monterey, failed.

"MURPHY, BEING, a good shot, started otter hunting on the Coast, a lucrative employment, as the skins were worth from $50 to $80 each," O'Farrell related. "He continued in this business until 1838, when he joined the partisans of Governor Alvarado against the appointee for that office, Don Carlos Antonio Carrillo. Alvarado, being successful, appointed Murphy administrator of the mission at San Rafael (San Rafael Arcangel), a position of responsibility and trust which he retained to the end of the Mexican regime."

In 1839, Don Timoteo became a naturalized citizen of Mexico. He had decided he wanted to live in Marin when he first visited his good friend, Capt. William A. Richardson, at his Rancho Saucelito.

When Murphy took over his duties at the mission, he found it in a deplorable condition: The buildings were badly in need of repair and the Indian population had dispersed since the decree of secularization.

IT IS SAID of Don Timoteo: "As administrator of the San Rafael mission he discharged his duties with rare humanity, business methods and absolute justice. Especially is this true of his treatment of the Indian neophytes. Alone among the various administrators, he made an earnest, sincere and almost successful effort for their betterment, spending many years of his life in this unselfish work.

"He secured for them a grant of land comprising upwards of 57,000 acres, which embraced the entire Nicasio Valley and the north shore of Tomales Bay —a section containing considerable arable land, great stretches of unsurpassed pasturage and inexhaustible fishing grounds.

"Don Timoteo learned the Indian tongue and, partly through his kindly nature and commanding presence, gained the respect and friendship of the natives. As Indian agent his authority was absolute, but he exercised it so lightly he was regarded only as a wise friend. He induced his Indian wards to settle in rancherias on the Nicasio grant, where their needs were best met, gave them cattle, agricultural tools and seeds, and encouraged them in the ways of civilized life."

DURING THE mission days some of the neophytes had become good mechanics and craftsmen. The younger Indians had acquired the rudiments of education. They imparted their knowledge to others.

Under the Mexican law the Indians could not sell their products directly to traders, but their agents were authorized to sell any surplus beyond the needs of the community. In many instances the Indians were the losers, but Don Timoteo worked for the best interest of his wards. With the proceeds from the sales he made for the Indians he bought tools, clothing and other necessities for them.

In February of 1844, Don Timoteo was granted five square leagues, which included a portion of San Rafael and land to the north, by Governor Micheltorena. The grant was known as San Pedro, Santa Margarita and Las Gallinas.

DON TIMOTEO built a large two-story hacienda on his property on the west side of C Street between Fourth and Fifth in San Rafael. In his spacious garden, vegetables were grown. At one side were the stables for the fine horses and sheds for the imported cattle.

He also had a kennel for his 50 greyhounds and Irish setters which he used for hunting.

The Irish don often rode one of his horses to visit the Indians at their rancherias in Nicasio to learn what supplies were needed. He also had a sort of walking delegate, a young Indian known as El Corporal, who reported to the don twice a week.

Under Don Timoteo's mild and wise administration the Indians led contented, carefree lives and showed marked evidence of advancement in the younger generation.

DON TIMOTEO always claimed that, "given a decade or more of fair treatment, the Indians will develop into a fine people."

Indians, friends from the other ranchos, strangers, all were welcomed to the hacienda. There they feasted and rested before they mounted their horses and rode to their destinations, sometimes to Sonoma or remote ranchos.

One of the more frequent visitors was Antonio Osio, who had the grant to Rancho Punta de Los Reyes Sobrante of 48,189 acres, a vast section of the Point Reyes Peninsula. Don Osio raised cattle and some sheep on the rich grazing land.

Frequently Don Timoteo rode over his vast empire to the shores of San Pablo Bay. Often he returned with a deer slung over the back of his horse. Wild game abounded in the hills and flocks of ducks and geese darkened the skies in their flight.

BUT SOON the land, too, was darkened by the arrival of John C. Fremont and his troops. Ostensible purpose of his visit was to make a geographical survey for the United States. However, from reliable sources, it became known that Fremont had secret orders to work out plans for the occupation of California. His men, including a bodyguard of Delaware Indians, and a ragtail army of hunters, scouts and farmers, carrying axes, were a fearsome sight.

It was in June of 1846 that Fremont and his "company" arrived in San Rafael and took over the mission as his headquarters. The second day after his arrival, he ordered the killing of three unarmed Californians, who were on their way to Sonoma. An account of this was given by Jasper O'Farrell, who was present when Fremont gave the order.

Fremont took 60 of Don Timoteo's fine horses and, as he had done at many ranchos in California, made no effort to recompense the owner.

UNTIL THE occupation of California by the United States, Don Timoteo was alcalde of the pueblo of San Rafael, agent for the Marin Indians, land commissioner and justice of the peace.

Although Don Timoteo and the other holders of land grants were worried by the invasion of Americans, he continued to hold open house at his hacienda and to welcome strangers.

Edwin Bryant, who wrote "What I Saw in California," and who was traveling from Yerba Buena (San Francisco) to Sonoma, said: "We put up at the house of Mr. Murphy, a scholastic Irish bachelor, and found a table spread with cold mutton and beef." Next day Bryant, his party and their horses, refreshed, left to continue their journey.

IN HIS BOOK, "Forgotten Pioneers," Judge Thomas F. Prendergast wrote: "The only recorded case in which the authority of the military in civil matters was disputed during the American territorial regime in California was that of Alcalde John H. Nash of Sonoma (irregularities in his acts). General Kearney appointed L. W. Boggs to succeed him in 1847. Nash denied the general's right to remove an alcalde. Nash was arrested and taken to Monterey . . .

"The high regard in which Don Timoteo was held is shown by his appointment with J. R. Snyder as commissioner to investigate the charges and report findings to the governor.

"Murphy was named on a committee of Americans in San Francisco in 1847 to protest to the President of the United States against the appointment of General Fremont as governor of California. When information was received from the East that an attempt would be made to induce the President to appoint Fremont governor, opposition was aroused and a public meeting was held in San Francisco."

THE CALIFORNIA Star, issue of June 19, 1848, noted: "The prominent men named were Nathan Spear, R. H. Sherman, Frank Ward, T. J. Farnham, Timothy Murphy, Jasper O'Farrell, Robert Semple, Thomas Leese, Leisdorff and Guerrero."

Although he could no longer aid the Indians in Marin, Don Timoteo's heart was touched by the plight of children who were left without parents, by the frequent epidemics which swept through the colony of argonauts. Don Timoteo was a bachelor and, not having children of his own, lavished his affection on those of others.

Always a man of action, Don Timoteo deeded to the Roman Catholic Church a large piece of property on Market Street (where the Sheraton-Palace Hotel now stands) in San Francisco. He stipulated that a school and orphanage should be built there.

Don Timoteo made several trips back to his native Ireland. Dissatisfied with local methods of cattle raising and agriculture, he brought back a shipload of animals, pedigreed horses, cattle, swine and Merino sheep, as well as good seed and the newest of farming implements.

THE IRISH DON was now a wealthy man, ruler of a vast empire. He continued to visit the Indians and, although he had no authority or legal responsibility to help them, he continued to do so.

Now in his middle years, he yearned to have some of his own relatives with him. His nephew, John Lucas, arrived from Ireland to visit with him in 1849, and Don Timoteo's younger brother, Matthew, and two of his children also came from the Emerald Isle to stay at the hacienda in San Rafael.

John Lucas was much like Don Timoteo, soft-spoken, kind and generous.

Matthew Murphy, on the other hand, had a hot temper, was impulsive and disliked taking orders. However, the family had a wonderful life together. All enjoyed the visits of friends at the hacienda and particularly the fiesta celebrating St. Raphael's Day in October.

THE FIESTA had been started by Don Timoteo, and hundreds of people came in small boats to San Rafael. The hacienda was filled with friends and gigantic feasts were prepared there. The vaqueros, riding spirited horses, performed great feats of horsemanship, galloping at high speed to pluck handkerchiefs from the ground.

The horses jumped high hurdles and the vaqueros would lasso wild cattle as the crowd applauded.

The vaqueros wore brilliantly colored blouses, dark pants and boots, often with spurs that came high above the ankle. The horses had bridles and saddles mounted in silver and gold.

John Lucas yearned to see the Irish lass, Maria Sweetman, to whom he was engaged. He returned to Ireland and brought his bride back with him in 1855.

WHEN HE arrived, both Don Timoteo and Matthew Murphy were dead. The great Irish don was stricken fatally ill in January of 1853. From what is said by those who cared for him tenderly, his Indian servants and his close friends, it is believed he was a victim of appendicitis.

Although he was racked with pain, Don Timoteo's mind was clear.

He said he wanted to make his will and to make a deed of about 317 acres of land on his Las Gallinas grant. The deed was written by Judge Al Birney and was made to Archbishop Joseph Alemany of the San Franciso diocese for the purpose of establishing a school or seminary of learning for orphans. The deed provided that if the land were not used for the designated purpose it would revert to Don Timoteo's heirs.

THEN THE will was drawn and read back to Don Timoteo. He left to his brother, Matthew, and John Lucas, the remainder of his vast estate. He made minor bequests, including money for four of his "faithful Indian servants." However, he provided that the money should be invested for them and clothing and other necessities bought with the proceeds.

He also instructed the executors of his will, James Black, Patrick Lambert and James Miller, to buy silver engraved loving cups for his godchildren, Augustina Black, Julia Miller, Catherine Merrell, Catherine Pacheco, Juan Reed and Toto Martin. There was no provision for a huge memorial for the great don. He did not need one.

He signed the deed and the will in the presence of witnesses Judge Barney and D. K. Richards, and then lapsed into a coma.

The giant don was dead on January 13, 1853. The deed was recorded on the day of Don Timoteo's death. The will was filed a short time later.

IT WAS A brisk March morning and Matthew Murphy was riding horseback on the trail he liked the most, to Punta de Quenta (San Quentin Point), which is now a main highway to the Richmond-San Rafael bridge. The convicts at the prison were working near the regular trail and it was closed.

As Matthew rode along, a guard shouted to him to halt. Whether the horseman heard the order or refused to heed it is not certain; but a shot rang out and JOHN LUCAS was the nephew of Don Timoteo Murphy, and, like his uncle, a popular and important figure in early Marin. He was an heir to much of the Murphy property in the county.

MRS. JOHN LUCAS was the Irish-born Maria Sweetman. Don Timoteo's nephew returned to Ireland from California to marry his sweetheart and bring her back to Marin.

Don Timoteo Murphy Left His Mark In Marin History

Matthew fell dying from the saddle.

This was indeed a sad homecoming for John Lucas and his bride. The adobe and the property in San Rafael had been sold. The adobe later served as the Marin County courthouse until the present structure, now facing destruction, was completed in 1873.

John Lucas and his wife wanted to have their first child born under their own roof, so they moved into a small house about where the Silveira ranch home is located on Highway 101 now. The eldest daughter, Alice, and several other children were born there.

THE HOME burned to the ground in January of 1863. The Lucas family lived in small houses until they moved into an imposing two-story white house in 1867. This was on the Santa Margarita Ranch of 2,340 acres. It extended from Puerto Suello Hill, covering what is now Los Ranchitos, Terra Linda and Lucas Valley.

The heirs of Matthew Murphy owned what was the McNear property, Peacock Gap and China Camp.

On the property which had been deeded to the Catholic Church for an orphanage and school, St. Vincent's was built. Both motherless girls and boys were reared there.

The late Miss Maria (Dotie) Lucas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lucas, told of her childhood and her girlhood days in the big house on the ranch, where friends stayed for weeks as houseguests and enjoyed the bountiful feasts.

DURING THE summers she and her friends (the girls riding side-saddle) would go to the summit of Mt. Tamalpais where they enjoyed a picnic lunch. On Sundays, the family went to mass in the chapel of St. Vincent's.

The girls were educated in convents, most of them at Notre Dame in San Jose. The boys were students at Santa Clara, and one of them completed his education at the university in Dublin.

Mrs. Ernest Langdale (Mary Cadogan), daughter of Mrs. Patrick Cadogan (Alice Lucas) and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lucas, who lives in San Rafael with her sister, Carmelita, recalls a later era.

She said: "Some of the happiest days of our lives were spent on the ranch."

THEY HAD the privilege of stopping the train, which had a right-of-way over the Lucas property, at the Lucas crossing, about where the Terra Linda interchange is located now, to ride to Tiburon and later to Sausalito to board the ferry for San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucas had a summer home at Bolinas where the children and grandchildren would gather each year. Sometimes they would ride in a buckboard, sometimes in a carriage. The women and girls wore linen dusters to protect their clothes and had veils tightly drawn over their hats.

The coachman would give the horses a strong brushing to cleanse the animals of dust and sweat before they were put into their stalls.

MRS. LANGDALE remembers her grandmother, Mrs. Lucas, as a delightful person, warm and gracious. Her hair was long and dark until the years brought gray to it.

John Lucas was kind and generous. He and his wife gave the property for Mt. Olivet Cemetery to the Catholic Church and that is where Mr. and Mrs. Lucas are buried. The body of Don Timoteo was first laid to rest in the churchyard at the San Rafael mission. Later the remains were interred in the family plot at Mt. Olivet.

With the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas (he died on March 7, 1897, and she in 1910), another era had gone.

The Lucas home ranch became the property of the M. T. Freitas family. Now the former Lucas home is gone to make way for St. Isabella's Church, rectory and school.

A Marin Profile—

No Thumb-Twiddling Ahead For Frank Beckmann At 78

By ROSS DAVIS

"I don't just want to sit and twiddle my thumbs," remarked a spry, goateed little man who appeared to be in his early 60s.

"Maybe I should at my age," he added, though not with much conviction, "but my way of life is profitable and enjoyable, and my health is good."

There's little evidence that Frank H. Beckmann, aged 78, of Marinwood, need be concerned with twiddling in the near future. Traveler, businessman, author, lecturer, photographer, speech instructor—he's been all, and apparently will continue as most of them.

THE FIRST LABEL comes with an impressive number of jaunts, the traveling to more than 100 countries and islands in the past 29 years. His businessman title was earned long before that, having entered the sales field with an Ohio company in 1913.

The "author" handle developed from the first two, with 16 books published in connection with his business experiences and three more on travels. Lecturing came also as a fusing of journeys and business training. Photography was a hobby that came naturally with the traveling.

Speech instruction, however, was more evolution than goal for Beckmann, and it is a topic that moves him quickly to his seat's edge with enthusiasm.

IT STARTED insignificantly enough, with the observation while he was an industrial engineer with the San Francisco firm he organized of Beckmann, Hollister and Co. in 1925 that there was a large need and desire by business people for speech training.

"We tried referring them to public speaking courses and correspondence studies," he said, "but apparently that was not what they wanted. They wanted the practical businessman's public speaking training."

Beckmann said his firm became intrigued with the demand, and since what was asked seemed neither awkward nor complicated, "we developed a copyrighted course, different from anything on the (speech-teaching) market, then or now."

THE COURSE, he said, was not advertised, yet over 15,000 people have taken it.

"Governor Brown was one of our outstanding students," Beckmann said. He added they were introduced by a friend when Brown was still San Francisco's district attorney, and who said of Brown: "One day this man is going to be governor of California and he needs your training."

Instruction started in a 14-member class composed of district attorney personnel, Beckmann said. Later, when Brown became governor, Beckmann drove for many weeks to Sacramento for additional instruction.

TRAVELING, for Beckmann, has been a lifetime project, with a "See America First" approach in his youth. In 1934, however, he indulged in a two-month trek to Mexico.

The pattern was established soon after. With a three-month trip to the Orient, including Manchuria, Beckmann was soon hooked. "You take a few trips," he acknowledged, "and you want to travel all your life."

The wanderings through the 100 countries have followed on at least a one-a-year program for the past 29 years. Beckmann said the motive was pleasure and information, rather than business, although the three travel books were a consequence.

HIS WIFE, Jeannette, whom he wed 19 years ago, fortunately also loves to travel. In October of 1959, the couple carried off a globe-trotting trip in the 80-day manner attributed to Jules Verne, but in modern airliners.

That trip, and others, understandably has filled their home and yard at 280 Adobestone Court with enough relics and souvenirs for a junior-grade museum. There are carvings from Haiti and Tahiti, llama-fur patches from Peru, and copper trays from India.

There is even a replica of a Torii Arch, honored in the Japanene Shinto religion, in their backyard. Not surprisingly, however, there is also space still available there, incentive enough for Beckmann to continue his refusal to twiddle his thumbs for years to come.

BECKMANN, born in Lapeer, Mich., in 1887, took his early schooling at Flint High School, in Michigan. Industrial training followed at the University of Wisconsin, with postgraduate work at Bradley Polytechnic Institute at Peoria, Ill.

He then attended Stout State College at Menominee, Wis., and taught industrial training for four years in a Garfield, Wash., High School.

This he followed with teaching at Everett, Wash., and next at Kansas State Normal College at Emporia. From 1911 to 1913, he was head of the industrial training department at Tamalpais High School in Marin County, prior to going to New York for sales training.

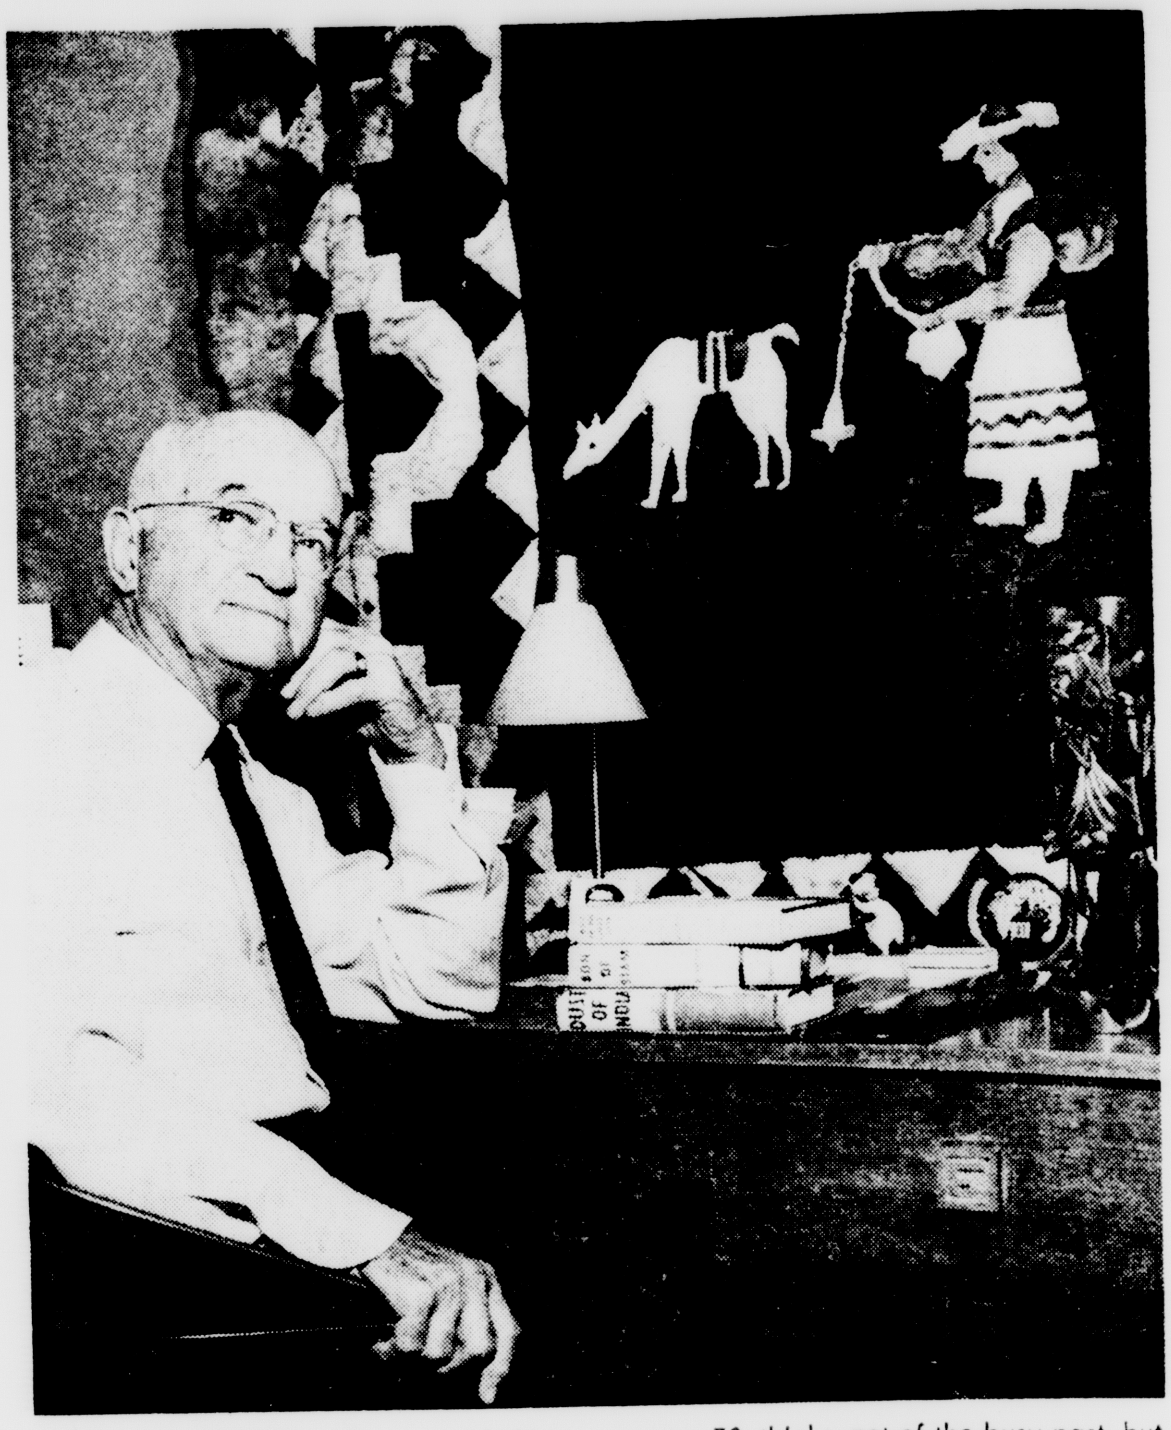
HIS ORGANIZATION of his San Francisco firm followed shortly thereafter, lasting until his business retirement 12 years ago.

Not the least of Beckmann's endeavors is being instrumental in organization of two breakfast clubs, the Golden Gate Breakfast Club, San Francisco, 17 years ago, which started with 12 men and now has its 160-member limit, and last December, the Marvelous Marin Breakfast Club.

The latter, Beckmann stated, began with inviting 12 men to The Kettle in San Rafael. To date, there are 92 members, all executive or professional men.

SO WHAT ABOUT his non-twiddling plans? More travel, mostly, said Beckmann, but also more lecturing across the country, and perhaps more forming of clubs.

Too, only last January he started a new public training course for 18 business and professional men in Marin County. "After you get to be my age, you don't want to feel useless," he said. And needn't.



IN HIS MARINWOOD home, surrounded by mementoes of his travels, writing, lecturing and business careers, Frank H. Beckmann, 78, thinks, not of the busy past, but of the still active years that lie ahead. (Independent-Journal photo)

"FLOCKED FABRIC HELP IN SELECTION GUIDES"

Here are some simple guides learned at the National Institute of Drycleaning to help you in selecting flocked fabrics.

"Examine the flocked fabric or design for splits or pin holes. If you find these: the flocking will eventually "give" and break apart.

The areas around the flocked design or between parts of it should not pucker or rippie.

Bend the fabric or design between the fingers. The fabric should be flexible. Stiff boardy fabrics or designs will crack with wear and cleaning.

Some fabrics are flocked on both sides; others on one side only. If the fabric is flocked on only one side, the fabric side should not show cracks, bubbles, hairlines, or feel hard.

Hold the fabric up to the light. The design should be sharp and distinct . . not muddy or indistinct.

The flock itself should feel soft, slightly cushiony. If the flock is too thin it feels stiff; if too thick, hairy.

Rub your fingers over the flocked area. If the flock feels gritty, it will eventually wear off with wear and cleaning.

Note if the flock clings to your fingers and clothes. If you see lint, the flock is shedding."

Consult your professional drycleaner on the care of your flocked fabrics.

WHEN law enforcement officers fire at the San Rafael pistol range, whether fulfilling their departmental qualifying requirements, or practicing for upcoming competitive shoots, they aim at special targets that are silhouettes of human beings. Marin Law Officers Keep Their Target Eyes Sharp

Pistol Shoots Serve Practical As Well As Recreation Purpose

By DON KEOWN

For the law enforcement officer, his gun is a tool that can protect the public and perhaps save his own life.

But it can also be a piece of sporting equipment as well as a weapon.

For the men who make up the pistol teams sponsored by police agencies across the country to compete against each other in the PPC (Practical Police Course) system devised by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, their guns are both these things.

One such group is the 12-member squad made up of officers from the San Rafael Police Department.

THEY'VE BEEN shooting on the range off Francisco Boulevard near the sanitation plant as a competition group now for nearly three years.

It all started back in 1963 when the Kensington Police Department asked to use the San Rafael range for its annual spring match.

"We decided that since the shoot was going to be held right here in our own city we ought to be represented," John Riordan recalls, "So four of us entered as a team, and we did surprisingly well, considering our lack of competitive experience. We finished 15th among 65 teams."

AND THAT, he adds, was the way the San Rafael Police Department Pistol Team all began.

An older group in the county is the crack Marin County Sheriff's Department squad, long among the top marksmen in California, and three years running state police pistol shooting champions.

"It's our ambition," says Riordan, "to catch up with them, and some day outshoot them. We feel we're gaining."

Also coming up fast is another younger team—the Novato Police Department sponsored marksmen.

SAN ANSELMO'S force has just begun fielding a team as well.

Competition among the law enforcement agency-sponsored teams is unlike that of civilian meets.

For one thing, the police officers fire at targets that are cardboard silhouettes of human beings.

The Practical Police Course competition calls for four-man teams, with each man firing 50 shots for a possible score of 250, as hits in the vital center area of the target earn five points, strikes elsewhere a lesser number.

THE SHOTS ARE fired from a distance ranging from seven yards (where the shooter must get off 10 rounds in 25 seconds) to 60 yards, and from 10 different stances including sitting and kneeling.

Theoretically a crack team could get 1,000 points.

"But I've never seen that," says Bart Stinson, who with Riordan, Jim Carlton and Dick Douglas made up the original foursome that first represented the San Rafael force back in 1963.

Before then, the San Rafael officers had used the Francisco

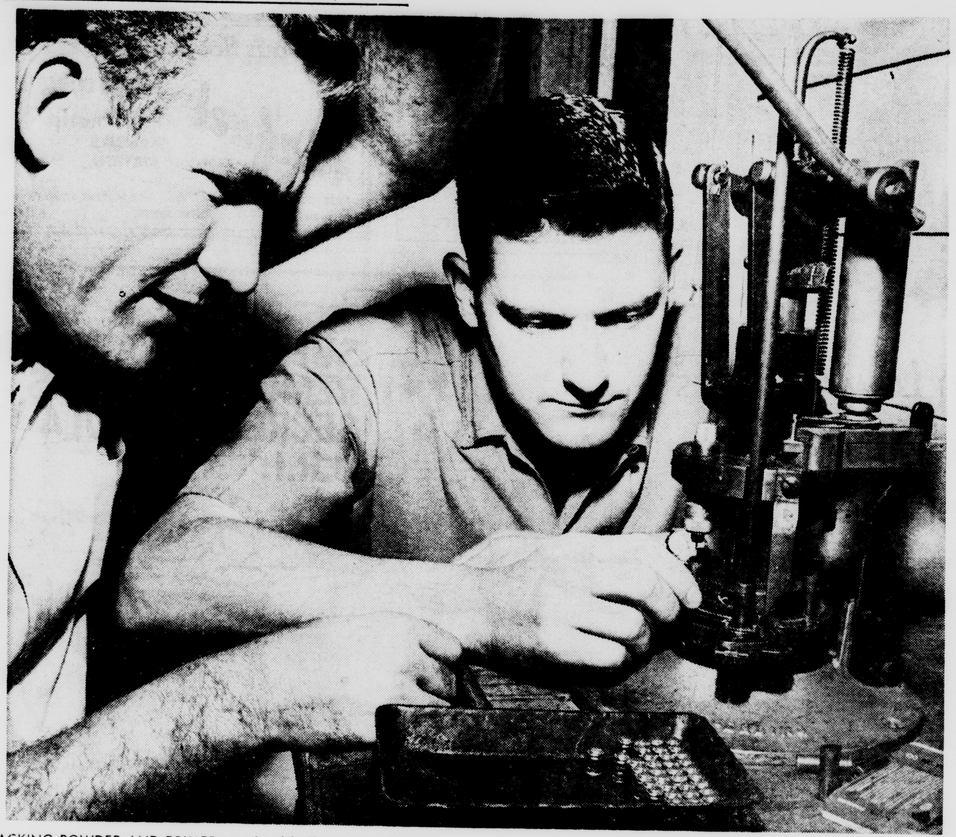
Police And Their Pistols

Officers' Weapons Can Serve For Recreation As Well As Duty



PACKING POWDER AND PRIMER into lead bullets that will go into the guns of the San Rafael Police Department's pistol squad, of which they are members, are Sgt. Jim Carlton, left, and Robert Larrison, with the help of a machine. The pistol team must provide its own ammunition for practice and competitive shooting. By setting up their own loading operation in the basement of a San Rafael house at 224 H Street occupied by some of the officers, the policemen make a substantial saving in the cost of their ammunition.

Boulevard range only to sharpen their skill with the gun and to meet the department's requirement for qualification shooting.

TEAM MEMBERS still must do the qualifying shooting set forth by department regulations, in addition to their practice for competitive events.

Other law enforcement officers from throughout the county, including Air Police from Hamilton Air Force Base, make use of the range to keep their shooting eyes sharpened.

The San Rafael police teams will compete in a half dozen matches or more during the year, always with other law enforcement sponsored opponents.

One of those meets—the H. O. Peters Memorial Winter Championship—is conducted on the Marin range. Held Feb. 5 and 6 this year, it represented a merger of what previously had been two separate matches hosted locally. It is named after the late master of the San Rafael range.

THAT RANGE, the officers say, is now one of the best in the state. City efforts and volunteer labor from the ranks of the police have resulted in extensive improvements, including an expansion from two to four lanes.

A bank with reflecting shield and sawdust eliminates any hazard from flying bullets.

Making up the "first team" for the San Rafael department in the local meet were Carlton (team captain), Douglas, Ken Homen and Riordan. Shooting on the second team were Stinson (captain), Phil Green, Bob Larrison and Gary Walker. Don Merkley, Bill Hool (captain), Joe Leonard and Terry Lucchesi made up the third combo.

The number of officers that can be accommodated on the squad is limited at present by the loading operation, Riordan says.

THAT LOADING operation has been set up in the tool-equipped basement of a house at 224 H Street, San Rafael, occupied by three of the officers.

The city provides its police with 50 rounds of ammunition per month with which to meet its qualification shooting requirements. But the officers must buy their own bullets for practice and for competition.

By loading their own ammunition, Riordan says, the men save substantially.

"When we were buying our ammunition, it cost us anywhere from $1.50 to $4.50 for a box of 50 rounds," he adds. "Now it costs about 50 cents a box."

THE MEN FIRE the same weapons they carry while on duty. For most of them, this is a Smith and Wesson K-38. Some of them, however, shoot Colts.

Big event of the year is the state competition which will be held in 1966 at Tracy in September.

There, in a field of 100, the San Rafael team annually finishes among the top 20.

BUT THE REAL goal of the San Rafael policemen is to outdo their friendly rivals, the Marin sheriff's deputies.

Another goal is to extend the membership of their squad to more of their fellow officers.

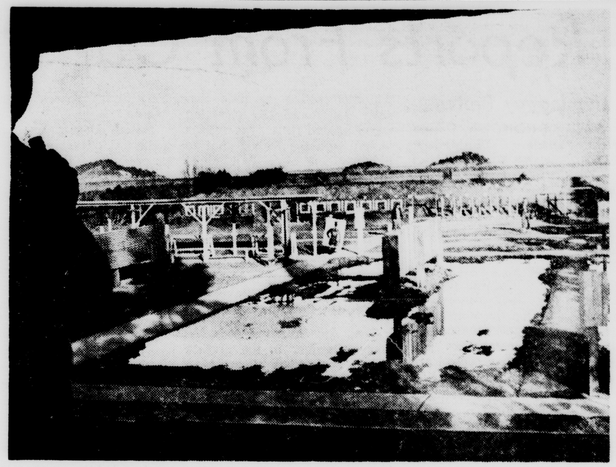
"We have plans for another loading operation, and that will permit us to add at least another team," says Stinson.

The competitive matches and the practice that precedes them —the men will spend six or seven hours each per week on the target range preparing for a shoot, along with another eight to 10 hours at work loading—must be done on the officers' own time during off-duty hours.

And even with the reduced cost brought about by the loading operation, the amount is considerable.

"BUT WE THINK it is worthwhile," declares Stinson. "The Practical Police Course procedure which we follow in our matches is just what the title indicates — highly practical, placing us under conditions we are most likely to encounter in the performance of our duties."

And, he feels, the officer who has spent those long hours on the pistol range will be most likely to react cooly and effectively when those conditions do arise.

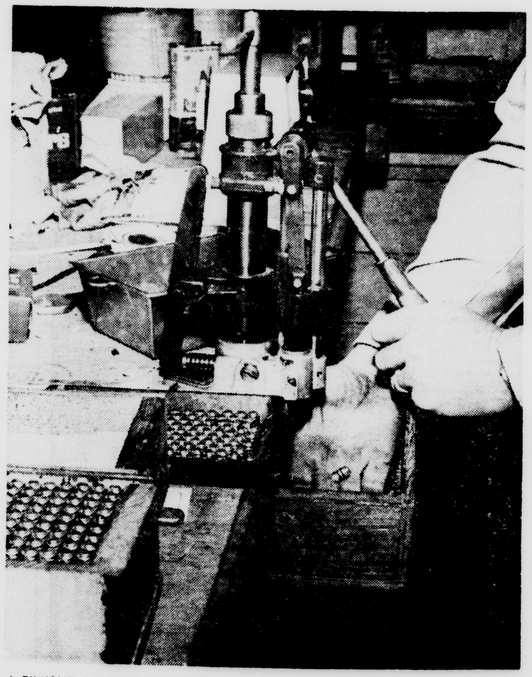


YOU ARE LOOKING from the "time shack" out over the pistol range where Marin County law officers sharpen their marksmanship. It is there that they also practice for competitive pistol meets with teams from other law enforcement agencies, and host meets. The range is located on Francisco Boulevard in San Rafael.

FROM BEHIND the barricade, Bart Stinson of the San Rafael Police Department pistol team gets off a round at the target. Stinson is one of the original quartet that first represented the San Rafael force in competitive shoots, and currently captains the No. 2 team.

FROM THE difficult sitting position, John Riordan fires at a silhouette target 60 yards away. In competition, the police marksmen fire from distances ranges from seven to 60 yards, and from 10 different stances, for a total of 50 shots per man.

THE MELTING POT and dies used for the making of the lead bullets are essential tools in the ammunition manufacturing and loading operation that the San Rafael Police Department pistol squad has set up in a San Rafael basement.



A FINISHED BULLET comes from the machine where it has been sized and greased, into the palm of the operator of the equipment. The police officers spend hours each week at work making ammunition in preparation for upcoming meets.

RIORDAN DEMONSTRATES the technique of rapid loading after firing, necessary to save precious fractions of a second when shooting on the timed course. The procedure set up by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the competition among law enforcement agency pistol teams is practical, the officer says, in that it closely approximates the situations the policeman may encounter in the line of duty.

Reports From Our Reviewers

Hemingway Protege

RAGE OF HONOR by Denne Bart Petitclerc, Doubleday, 264 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Larry Kramer Jr.

"Rage of Honor" deals with the frustrations of Mark Chamberlain, a giant among men, who is growing old.

The changes in his hometown where his family was once a cattle-raising first family all seems to be for the worst. Relentlessly, "business interests," the men who control them, and the men whom they control are constricting Mark's way of life, just as barbed wire changed the cattlemen's life.

Partly these changes are being wrought because of changing times, partly because today's men are lesser beings than those of yesterday. Finally, driven to despair by the death of his love and his friend and the loss of his home and his horses, Chamberlain takes revenge on his tormentors and escapes into death.

This is a first novel by a newspaperman who was also a protege of Hemingway. All of these facts are reflected in the book.

The journalistic style, the terse, punchy dialogue, and the galloping pace of the narrative all camouflage the romantic, pathetic theme of the story. Flashbacks are used very effectively.

Despite his youth (he's 35), the author captures the sense of frustration that older people often reflect as they consider the too rapidly changing world around them. The reader is left with the feeling that to live too long after your world has gone is not a blessing.

From The Shadows

ALLENBY OF ARABIA: Lawrence's General by Brian Gardner, Coward - McCann, 275 pages, $6.50. Reviewed by Alan P. Cunningham.

Gen. Sir Edmund Allenby, writes Gardner in the preface to this book, "has always been overshadowed by (T.E.) Lawrence; he is remembered, if at all, as a character in the cast of the Lawrence story. The perspective of history may well reverse the roles."

This, and the book's jacket—showing the general, complete with British mustache and stiff upper lip, while an Arab-clad Lawrence looks out from the background— may lead many who saw the 1962 Oscar-winning motion picture to read it.

Gardner liked the movie. But Lowell Thomas, who contributes a 26-page introduction, says "the portrayal of Lawrence was surely 90 per cent distorted, and the treatment of Allenby almost as far out of line." Thomas however, terms Gardner's book a splendid one.

And splendid it may well be to any reader who is interested enough in (a) military strategy, (b) British campaigns and (c) biographies written in a dry, very British style of understatement.

Based largely on Allenby's collected papers it is certainly a product of thorough, careful research.

It portrays in detail the battles which led to Allenby's taking of Jerusalem. Under him, the Holy Land was returned to Christian control for the first time in seven centuries, earning for him the accolade "deliverer of the Holy Land." from the New York Times upon his death in 1936.

Surely this book offers an opportunity to fill in some of the gaps on a phase of First World War history which may have totally escaped many Americans.

Its main drawback is simply that Gardner's dilligent research is wrapped in an often stuffy and seldom colorful style. One never really finds the human being behind the history, in spite of numerous passages from his letters.

As long as people must choose between lavishly produced action motion pictures and dry biographies to get their historical perspective, the Lawrences will continue to overshadow the Allenbys.

A Kind Of Laughter

THE BOOK OF NEGRO HUMOR edited by Langston Hughes, Dodd, Mead & Co., 265 pages, $5. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

Real interest in literature by the American Negro, as opposed to literature about him, is still comparatively new. Consequently, an editor must use a broad base in selecting from the dearth of material available.

This is what Hughes has done when he describes the contents of this book: "Humor is laughing at what you haven't got, when you ought to have it . . . Humor is when the joke is on you, but hits the other fellow first-before it boomerangs . . . Humor is what you wish in your secret heart were not funny, but it is, and you must laugh . . . Humor maintains its distance while at the same time keeping you company so long as you are capable of meeting it halfway."

Most of this book affords us the privilege of an unselfconscious view of the Southern Negro, with a lesser contribution of topical civil rights humor.

The format is an excellent way of presenting selections of unrefined literature because the pieces are amusing enough to entertain and short enough not to tax the reader's patience for lack of style.

THE DRY YEARS: Prohibition and Social Change in Washington, by Norman H. Clark, University of Washington Press, 254 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Books about the prohibition era commonly start with ratification of the 18th Amendment and end with its repeal; not so "The Dry Years" by Norman H. Clark.

Clark, who teaches history at Everett Junior College and University of Washington, has gone clear back to the days of the fur trade and Marcus Whitman to trace the history of the temperance and prohibition movements in the state of Washington.

The early chapters of his book are illuminative of the progress of the temperance movement in rural America, and the reasons for it. Most of "The Dry Years," however, concerns state and local political fights and figures in Washington, and is of scant interest outside the state. As a whole, the book—well researched and well written though it is—must be considered a local publication.

Fresh Perspective

CORPORAL GLASS'S ISLAND: The Story of Tristan de Cunha by Nancy Hosegood, Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 192 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer Jr.

Because we live in a society that tends to equate technological improvement with progress in human affairs, it is instructive to see our civilization through the eyes of an outsider.

"Corporal Glass's Island" is a popularized history of the island community of Tristan de Cunha, which for all practical purposes existed outside modern Western industrial society between 1816 and 1961.

Isolated in the South Atlantic, midway between Africa and South America, on an island 24 miles in circumference, the community was founded by a British soldier in 1816. He chose to stay on the island after his garrison had been transferred rather than expose his half-caste wife to the slurs which would accompany life in England.

Despite incredible hardships the community grew to include seven interrelated families, comprising 264 persons, by October, 1961. At that time the core volcano of the island began to erupt, forcing the evacuation of this polyglot, ingrown group to England.

In spite of kind treatment from the public, and government enticement to assimilate and adjust, two years later 249 members of the community had returned to their island. In their eyes, life on their tiny, barren, isolated isle was more purposeful and satisfying than what they perceived as the superficial, immoral and hurried pleasures of civilization.

The story of the development of the Tristan clan and their reaction to industrial England provides an opportunity "to see ourselves as others see us."

The narrative is fast-paced and gives the reader a fresh perspective on contemporary life.

DENNE BERT Petitclerc, reporter for San Francisco, Santa Rosa and Miami newspapers and war correspondent, has written a first novel, "Rage of Honor," telling the story of a lonely cattleman and his efforts to maintain his individuality and integrity.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE SPYMASTER by Philip Freund, Ives Washburn, 220 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Donald G. Davis.

It is no wonder in this day of the spy thriller that this quartet of short stories should be headed by one called "The Spymaster." That, one assumes, helps the sell.

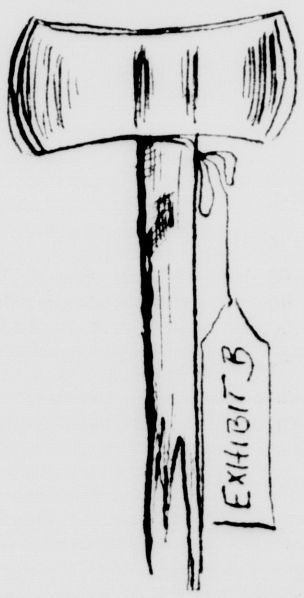
That doesn't mean the little book is a come-on. Freund is a storyteller-master and while "The Spymaster," set in the cold war divided Berlin, is outstanding, so are the other tales.

The writing of the title story is low-keyed, matching the cold surroundings of the background. Mainly it is a psychological tale, and Freund needs only 74 pages to complete a superb yarn.

Another longer story, "Black on Red," set in and around New York City, concerns the loss through deception of a valuable stamp belonging to a young couple. How the stamp is regained leads through a trail of blood and murder. This story perhaps could have been developed to a full-length mystery, but it stands as good reading.

Two short stories, "The Picture-Framer" and "The Process-Server," set in New York City, while provocative reading seem only to be sandwiched in to fill out the book size.

All in all, though, it's a neat package.



When you are planning to buy a new sofa or chair, it is not only important how the piece looks now, but also how it will look 5 years from now.

David Sarnoff: American Success Story

By DON KEOWN

DAVID SARNOFF by Eugene Lyons, Harper & Row, 372 pages, $6.95.

A MOTHER IN HISTORY by Jean Stafford, Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 121 pages, $3.95.

Eugene Lyons has a well-earned reputation for biographies that are substantial and meaningful.

His latest work, "David Sarnoff," does not injure that reputation, but it comes precariously close to doing so. The peril springs from Lyons' attitude toward his subject, which is more than the admiraton that Sarnoff surely deserves, but adulation so unrestrained that the reader must pause and wonder if he is receiving a truly balanced report.

Over all, however, Lyons rates commendation for an exhaustive yet selective job of research and for the kind of literate writing that has elevated his earlier work.

And if the author seems at times in awe of his subject, it must be admitted that David Sarnoff is, indeed, a remarkable person.

Sarnoff is the classic American success story. He is the poor immigrant boy (from Russia) of a minority group (Jewish) who came to America and grew up in a slum (New York's Hell's Kitchen). Still a child and with very little formal education, he became his family's breadwinner. Genius and perseverance combined to carry him to the very head of one of the country's great industrial complexes, to the role of pub figure, and to the status of spokesman for one vast section of the new technology.

Sarnoff, as Lyons makes clear, is the man most responsible for the direction that electronics has taken, and especially for first radio, then television.

He has demonstrated an uncanny ability for looking into the future and foreseeing the future courses of science, technology and finance. He has been considerably less acute in his social and political prognostications.

The Lyons biography impresses the reader with the caliber of an American who has rendered great service to his country and to humanity in both private enterprise and public capacities. It would have been even more impressive had Lyons adopted a less partisan tone. But the mettle of Sarnoff is such that the reader senses in him, if not quite the superhuman that Lyons pictures, nevertheless an extraordinary personage. And an honorable and well-meaning, if hardly warm, personality.

THERE IS an element of morbidity to the very idea of doing a book about Marguerite Oswald, mother of Lee Harvey Oswald.

Thus one reads novelist Jean Stafford's "A Mother in History" with a sense of embarrassment for both subject and author, and with a feeling of guilt for prying into something that is not healthy.

Miss Stafford (Mrs. A. J. Liebling) justifies the book — based upon three days of tape recorded interviews with the garrulous Mrs. Oswald—on the grounds that we need to know "the influences and accidents and loves and antipathies" that led up to the Dallas killings.

It soon becomes apparent that Mrs. Oswald is not the one to shed light upon her son's fateful course.

Miss Stafford does somewhat better in spotlighting in the mother characteristics that must have had their impact upon the son. Mrs. Oswald emerges as an unstable woman, lonely, pitiable, defensive, ridden by a persecution complex, starving for public attention (the book title is her own description of herself), almost totally divorced from reality.

But this wretched portrait has already been apparent in sickening clarity to those who read their newspapers.

Miss Stafford's interviews were worth perhaps another newspaper story, if we must have one, or just perhaps a magazine article (indeed, much of the material did appear first in McCall's), but hardly worth a book.

It would be a kindness to Mrs. Oswald and to society if she were forgotten now and left to whatever uneasy peace she can find.

For whatever it is worth, Mrs. Oswald at least at times accepts the theory that her son killed John F. Kennedy—but, she insists, he acted heroically and patriotically as part of some fantastic plot to rid the nation of a critically ill, about to become incapacitated President.

CHARLES BRAGIN of 1525 West Street, Brooklyn 4, N.Y., 11204, has published "Bibliography: Dime Novels 1860-1964," selling for $2.

Bragin, who claims to own the largest private collection of dime novels, has included a brief history of this particular piece of Americana, along with the listings that range from "The Black Highwaymen's Novels" to "Yale Murphy, the Great Shortstop." Nick Carter's and Buffalo Bill's exploits are covered, of course, along with "Jack Wright and His Electric Air Rocket."

Flowering Trees Will Give You A Big Color Show

Now that the flowering plums have announced the approach of spring with their pink and white blossoms, let us look at the panorama of color left to come!

The types and colors of the flowering fruit trees offer a wide selection. Here are the choices among the flowering peaches, which follow the plums in flower:

Earliest to bloom is the variety known as Early Double Red—really a deep rose pink. There was a time when it was accompanied by San Jose Pink, but this one was discarded because the foliage came with the flowers, destroying the effectiveness of the display.

NEXT WILL BE Helen Borchers, a magnificent double medium pink. Double White (or Iceberg) an absolutely pure white, a variegated pink and white form called Peppermint Stick, and last, Late Double Red. Some of these varieties produce a very small amount of white-fleshed fruits, inferior in quality and flavor. The trees are grown for their flowering quality, with no concern for the fruit.

Double Delight and Saturn are two other excellent peach varieties.

The flowering crabapples comprise varieties good in gardens large and small. Some, like Floribunda and Eleyi, will become fairly large trees. Others, like Arnold and Bechtel, can be kept to small trees for small gardens. The range of color is excellent; pure white through all the pink shades and reds to almost purple-red.

Flower forms may be single, double or halfway in between.

WHEN WE HAVE an early spring the flowering cherries will bloom right with the crabapples, but ordinarily, they are likely to come a little later. First to bloom is the variety Akebono, with showers of pale pink flowers. It is followed by the double pink Kwanzan and double white Mt. Fujii.

These are the three best-sellers.

Lesser known varieties include a creamy double yellow, Ukon; Whitcombi, a single pink that blooms with Blieriana flowering plum, and Autumnalis, an early semi-double pink.

The really spectacular flowering trees come last in the season. They are erroneously called "tulip" trees (a name belonging to an entirely different plant) and are properly known as the Deciduous Magnolias.

THE FLOWERS OF many kinds resemble those of large tulips, come in shades of pure white, light pink, pink and rose, pink and purple, and lavender pink. Some are very fragrant. All have rather large foliage, as you would expect in a magnolia.

Popular varieties include the Star Magnolias, with pink or white flowers, the Saucer Magnolias, which include the pink, lavender and purplish-pink shades and the Lily-flowered Magnolias with slender, tapering buds and blooms, purplish in hue.

Something should be said about pruning the flowering trees: If it is done at the wrong time, or the wrong part of the tree cut away, no blooms will appear. No pruning should be done until after the flowering season.

The peaches are cut back severely—to two or three buds and the past season's growth. Plums may be headed back lightly, but the others are never cut back, only thinned out to eliminate interfering branches.

THE DECIDUOUS Saucer Magnolia or Tulip Tree is an excellent choice when garden space is limited, for it puts on a big color show while not outgrowing its bounds. This is an ideal time for planting magnolias, both the deciduous and the evergreen varieties. (Photo courtesy of the California Assn. of Nurserymen).

Why Not Grow House Plants That Are Not So Common?

You don't have to grow the same old house plants that everyone else does.

Some of the less common ones are just as easy to grow—and occasionally easier. More important, they will hold a lot more interest for you and will make you the envy of your neighborhood.

For example, have you ever grown the King and Queen, Mother or Pick-a-Back fern?

Tiny little plants grow out on the top-side of the fronds. Potted up and kept slightly moist until rooted, they soon make new, little plants.

Another easy one is the Bird's-Nest fern with uncut, broad, flat, glossy leaves in rosettes from the ground.

Still easier is the Rabbit's Foot fern. Daintily cut leaves grow from hairy, rabbit's foot-like rhizomes that creep down over the sides of the pot.

All three require far less light than flowering plants, hence are excellent for north windows and not-too-well lighted apartments. Just see that they get enough water to keep them from shriveling and a little plant food occasionally to perk them up.

The last one especially takes a great deal of abuse. It can go without water for quite long spells and, if left outdoors accidentally, can stand a considerable amount of cold weather.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Bareroot planting time has just about run out. Choose among the new varieties of roses now. Set out birch trees in small groups this month while they are dormant and you'll be rewarded with fresh, lacy foliage as soon as the weather warms up, and a graceful landscape effect in every season. Put birches where they'll get plenty of water and some shade.
- Lawns will come to life any day now. A feeding at this time will get them off to a good start.
- Dormant pruning should be completed now—roses, fuchsias, deciduous fruit trees, grapes, berries. Cut fuchsias back at least one third to be sure of plenty of new growth to carry blooms.
- There is still time to plant a cover for bulb beds. Annual alyssum is quick and good at drawing attention from ripening foliage. Pansies and violas can be set out from flats. For a striking effect now and after the bulbs have faded, set blooming Marguerite plants among your daffodils.

Now Is The Time Of Year To Take Stock Of Garden

You can't find a better time of year to evaluate your garden, according to the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

This is the time when choice of variety reaches its peak. Nurseries have all of their stocks on hand for the "spring rush" and wise gardeners choose now.

In gardens small or large, young or old, there are bound to be a few "mistakes" - tall plants where shorter ones are needed, foliage plants where flowering plants would do a better job and plants in shade that should be in sun, and so on.

There may be vacant spots screaming for something growing to make a better garden picture. Whatever the problem, it is more easily rectified when the choice is greatest.

WE ARE IN the close of the bareroot season — meaning that such seasonal items as fruit trees, grape vines, berry plants, spring flowering shrubs, artichokes and rhubarb are in some supply—and lower priced. This advantage is due to the stock not requiring the additional expense of a container.

This is a beautiful time of the year to exploit your specialty, whether it be azaleas, camellias or rhododendrons, or all three. Most varieties of azaleas and camellias are already in bloom, a chance to "see before you buy".

Rhododendrons' flowering season is still a matter of a month or so away, but some of the newer varieties must be bought now — they will never last until the blooming season! Another advantage. You get the full cycle of bloom, not just the part remaining after you have purchased the plant.

ONE OF THE big problems every year is trying to find your favorite variety of dwarf fruit trees. There never seems to be enough to go around. Small gardens require more dwarf trees every year, and the supply just doesn't match the demand. Choose now while variety is at its peak.

Maybe you made a mental note last summer that you were going to plant shade trees "next winter." That is now!

Among the deciduous (leaf-dropping) varieties, the time to make a selection couldn't be better.

Investigate the advantages of the new patented varieties, such as the thornless honey locusts, some with golden-tipped foliage — all with desirable growing habits. Ask about the new red maples, all sports of the old-favorite Norway maple, with its generously large and handsomely formed foliage, brilliant flame-red in the new kinds.

YOU CAN CHANGE a drab garden into a spring paradise, simply by planting flowering trees that will bloom this spring. You'll find a wealth of variety from which to choose among the flowering groups of peaches, plums, crabapples and cherries.

Beauty of planting these trees now will be the enjoyment of their flowers this year, a preview of the really big splash of color you can anticipate with another year's growth.

A tip about planting: If the weather is wet, just heel in the plants to protect the roots until sunny days permit planting.

Always use a special planting mix incorporated with your own soil when planting in heavy or very light soils, or in soil just vacated by a plant you have recently removed. Don't use any fertilizer when planting — feed next month. Soak the soil immediately after planting — even if it's raining! And be sure to stake tall plants against harsh March winds.

Deeper Colors Liven Up The Homes Of 1966

Houses are more colorful in 1966.

Deeper colors in house exteriors are being accepted, and some builders even venture to paint exteriors in primary colors.

Think how it would liven up the terrain to find a cluster of houses just around a bend in vivid red, yellow, blue or brilliant intermediate colors, orange or green.

PRIMARY COLORS are moving indoors and what begins to look tasteful indoors will no doubt become socially acceptable outdoors.

There was a time when gray was the only alternate to white in house exteriors. But when charcoals and limes coated interior walls, the watered-down values of those and other hues began to go to house exteriors—slates, greens, pinks, yellows.

When a large development in the East color-coordinated its houses a couple of decades ago, it was considered a giant step that could only be tested in low-cost housing areas. But soon owners of expensive homes began to take color cues.

AND TIMID types put deep, vivid color on doors and shutters.

Now we are braver — automobiles are going high fashion and home interiors are taking pointers from our wardrobes where dramatic Pucci prints, shocking pinks and oranges provide exciting change of pace from basic black.

More home owners find the white pattern in houses drab. One may spot a vivid blue house with shutters here and there, and long time barn-red users have livened up the color to a depth red.

RED IS THE universally favorite color.

Ancients used bold colors — reds, greens, blues. But somewhere along the line vivid colors became associated with gaudiness. Christmas took over red and green combinations, Halloween garnered orange and Easter was a yellow-green combination.

Any use of these colors in the home seemed to create a holiday atmosphere.

Now that orange has become a big color indoors (often combined with pink) it is more pleasing to the eye. New floor tiles are in solid deep green, red, blue. Even wash basins are available in the primary colors, and new flocking techniques for walls is encouraging the use of these strong colors for their velvety richness.

THE JUST RIGHT red, green or blue can be a posh background for traditional or contemporary furnishings.

Just before his death a few years ago, famed portrait painter Rene Bouche was working in the primary color medium. One thing that these paintings illustrated was how beautiful primary color combinations could be when used by skilled hands.

As these colors are used in the home and become more pleasing to the eye their use will increase. The idea is to learn how to use them effectively.

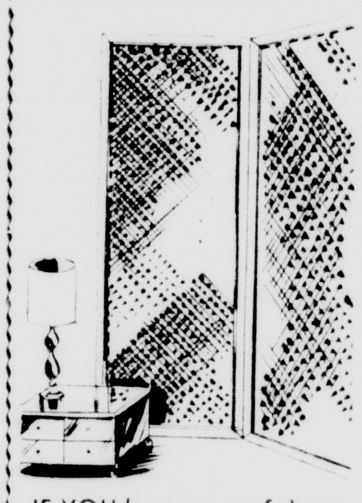
In a recent display of low-priced sisal rugs made in Ireland, a green rug with a red flame-like design was one of the more elegant patterns.

WHEN BUILDERS learn to color coordinate homes in these deep colors as effectively as interior designers are doing indoors, the effect will light up the landscape.

Some bright color combinations that have been spotted are:

Deep garnet (including shutters), vivid blue with white shutters; pumpkin with pale shutters; deep yellow with deep blue shutters.

The yellow color was put on an enormous 18th century white house in the East that was barely noticeable before. Now it has come into its own once again as it stands out in an area where white house have always dotted the landscape.



IF YOU have one of those dead corners in your living room, den or bedroom, perk it up with these pierced screens made of lattice molding set in a framework of one-by-fours. It is built floor to ceiling, as wide as needed, and nailed directly against the wall. Color makes the big difference. Some suggestions: gold screens against a scarlet wall, Avocado against turquoise, pink over orange. All materials are available at the lumberyard.

METTE HONNINGEN, as an aspiring ballerina, and Henning Kronstam perform with the internationally famous Royal Danish Ballet in "Ballerina," a two-part story on "Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color" Sunday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

The Best On TV This Weekend

Sports enthusiasts will have a TV-filled weekend, with many varied athletic programs to be seen, beginning with a professional basketball game between the San Francisco Warriors and the Cincinnati Royals led by Jerry Lucas and Oscar Robertson at 8:30 tonight on Channel 2.

Other sports specials and shows of interest this weekend:

SATURDAY: Bill Bradley, the spectacular basketball star and winner of the Sullivan Award as the top U.S. amateur athlete of 1965, will be seen in action playing for a Milan, Italy, team against Prague, Czechoslovakia, on "The Wide World of Sports" at 5 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

Two members of the Professional Golfers' Assn. Hall of Fame, Sam Snead and Jimmy Demaret, provide the action on "Shell's Wonderful World of Golf" at 5 p.m. on Channel 4.

Comedian Milton Berle hosts a surprise party for Jackie Gleason, as "The Jackie Gleason Show" departs from its usual format to feature an all-star cast on the occasion of the "Great One's" 50th birthday. Heading the program at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10 will be Bobby Darin, Connie Francis, Arthur Godfrey, Al Kelly, Erroll Garner and Frank Fontaine.

American-born Janet Flanner has become almost as much a part of France as her part-time pen-name, Genet. She has lived in Europe since 1921, authoring The New Yorker's regular feature, "Letter From Paris." "The Open Mind" will present Janet Flanner at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

Celebrating his 25th year in the world of entertainment, pianist Liberace returns as host of "The Hollywood Palace," introducing guests Marni Nixon, John Davidson and Bob Newhart on Channels 7 and 11 at 9:30 p.m.

Actor-author Charles Bickford will appear on "Book Beat" on Channel 9 at 7:30 p.m. to comment on his biography, "Bulls, Balls, Bicycles and Actors."

Bob Hope and Hedy Lamarr star in the comedy "My Favorite Spy" on "Saturday Night at the Movies" on Channels 3 and 4 at 9 p.m.

SUNDAY: The North American Gymnastics Championships in Montreal, Canada, and a close-up study of National Football League rookie Ken Willard of the San Francisco 49ers will be presented on "CBS Sports Spectacular" at 2:30 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10.

The settings are Southwest Texas and the remote regions of British Columbia as Robert Fuller hunts whitetail deer and bow and arrow expert Fred Bear stalks (as his name might suggest) grizzly on "The American Sportsman" at 4 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

Professional basketball action originates from the Civic Center in Baltimore as the Boston Celtics meet the Baltimore Bullets on "National Basketball Assn. Game of the Week" at 11 a.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

Marlin Perkins and Jim Fowler travel from drier areas of Africa to explore a luxuriant oasis filled with uncharted floating islands and unknown water courses in the desert country of Bechuanaland on "Wild Kingdom" at 5 p.m. on Channel 4.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. Barry Goldwater and Sen. J. William Fulbright, three of the nation's most influential spokesmen on the U.S. commitment in Viet Nam, will be interviewed on "Issues and Answers" at 1:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits and Frank D. O'Connor, president of the New York City Council, will discuss the need for dedicated young people in public service on "Look Up and Live" at 8:30 a.m. on Channels 5 and 10.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz will be the guest on "Meet the Press" at 1 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

Rep. Melvin R. Laird, chairman of the House Republican Conference, will be the guest on "Face the Nation" at 9:30 a.m. on Channel 5.

Lisa Hobbs, the San Francisco Examiner reporter who made an unprecedented visit to Red China in 1965, will answer reporters' questions about her observations on "Next Question" at 11:30 a.m. on Channel 5.

The distinguished author and humanitarian, Pearl S. Buck, will be interviewed on "Golden Gate Story" at 2:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

Melvyn Douglas will narrate

CARE AND SYMPATHY—As veterinarian Joseph Spinelli gives a shot to Blackie, the Tiburon peninsula's well-known sway-backed horse, Blackie's caretaker, Paul J. Bertalla of Mill Valley, holds the ailing horse's head. The animal, who is 40 years old, has nearly become a county landmark during the 28 years he has lived in a pasture close to Tiburon Boulevard. He became ill during the night. (Independent-Journal photo by Richard Smith)

Tiburon's Famed Horse Fights Illness

BULLETIN

Blackie, Tiburon's famed sway-backed horse, was to be humanely put to sleep by a veterinarian, after being found ill in his pasture this morning.

Blackie, Tiburon's horse with the remarkable swayed back, was taken ill today.

For nearly 30 years, he has stood in his own pasture near Tiburon Boulevard, sturdy as the cavalry horse he was. Today, he was lying on his side, covered by a quilt and under the care of a veterinarian.

Shortly after dawn, Blackie's caretaker, Paul Jo Bertalla, found him lying ill in the pasture.

Dr. Joseph Spinelli was called, as were officers of Marin County Humane Society. A small crowd quickly gathered.

Dr. Spinelli gave the 40-year-old horse several shots and ordered complete rest. Exactly what was wrong, he wouldn't say.

Blackie's right eye was

Alert Clerk Thwarts Stolen Check Attempt

An alert Corte Madera store clerk led to the arrest yesterday of a man suspected of trying to pass one of 1,100 blank payroll checks stolen 48 hours earlier from the Marin Country Day School, Corte Madera.

Taken into custody was 34-year-old Richard Paul Ledger of Washington, D.C., who was charged with possession of a forged document. He was booked in Marin County jail and was held today on $5,500 bail.

Corte Madera Police Insp. Harold Hockett, who made the arrest, said all merchants in the area had been alerted after the blank checks were stolen from the school office building at 5221 Paradise Drive.

The theft, believed to have taken place about Thursday, was reported yesterday. No sign of forced entry was found at the school building, Hockett said.

Reports started coming in yesterday of attempts to pass the checks in San Rafael. One check, for $168.85, was successfully passed at George's Recreation Parlor, 842 Fourth Street.

At 3:15 p.m., police said, Ledger walked into Littleman's store in the Corte Madera Shopping Center, picked up two bottles of vodka and a bottle of whisky and attempted to pass one of the payroll checks made out for $202.59, said Hockett.

Store clerk Martin Flynn remembered the police warning and told the suspect, "I have to go to the safe to get that kind of money."

He tipped the police. Suspicious because of the delay, the suspect fled the store, but two members of the staff kept him in sight until police arrived, said Hockett.

Hockett said police received an anonymous telephone call that they would find "a parcel of goodies" at a spot in Samuel P. Taylor State Park.

Accompanied by Police Officer Charles Rester, Hockett went to the spot and recovered 1,048 of the 1,100 stolen checks.

Immediately after the theft was discovered yesterday, the Wells Fargo Bank account on which the checks could be drawn was closed and a new one opened for the school.

Red Attacks Increasing In Viet Nam

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. Marines fought off a determined Viet Cong attack near Chu Lai today and U.S. artillery dueled with enemy mortar fire as the Communists continued to step up their offensive.

Today's attack by about 100 Red troops on a 50-man Marine unit marked the second time in two days that the Viet Cong struck at U.S. emplacements.

A force of 160 Leathernecks hurled back a Viet Cong attack last night at Phu Bai, killing three Communists, spokesmen said. Marine losses were reported light.

Today's target for the Viet Cong was Phu Loi, an artillery base area 15 miles north of Saigon. U.S. spokesmen said the Reds fired 16 mortar rounds, but casualties were light.

The Viet Cong were also active in the northern part of the Mekong Delta, attacking a government outpost yesterday 60 miles southwest of Saigon. A spokesman said the 60-man defense force suffered heavy casualties.

President Says 'Long Road' Ahead In War

Senate Stymied As Hawks Cannot Obtain Quorum

COMBINED AP & UPI

WASHINGTON—President Johnson said today he is pleased with reports of allied military progress in South Viet Nam but "a long and hard road" lies ahead.

But administration efforts to speed up and resolve the Senate's Viet Nam debate failed for lack of a quorum today.

After some 40 minutes of confusion, frustration, and roll calls, the Senate had to break off its Saturday session because only about a third of the 100 senators answered the roll. A majority is required.

'NOT EASY'

"It is not going to be easy, it is not going to be short, it is going to require sacrifices—I want everyone to know that," the President told a news conference.

But Johnson reiterated that "we are determined to do what needs to be done there." And he insisted anew that "our objectives are limited."

"We want to defeat aggression, we want to defeat social misery, we want to establish a stable, democratic government (in South Viet Nam), and we want a just peace."

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., tried to object to an adjournment motion, saying, "There are no holidays in Viet Nam."

ROLL CALL FAILS

But his demand for a roll call vote on this failed, and by voice vote the Senate adjourned until noon Monday.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., acting as majority leader, had called for a Saturday session and had sent telegrams to the senators that "if you have a speech to make, come make your speech."

But Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., who had just finished one four-hour address attacking administration Viet Nam policy and planned another for Monday, said he knew of no one who planned to speak today.

"If no one shows up, I'll be here," promised Long, "and if the spirit moves me I may make a speech." The Louisiana Democrat is a strong supporter of President Johnson's policies.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey all but sent his regrets yesterday in response to an invitation from Chairman J. W. Fulbright to discuss his Asian

Viet Nam Bullet Hits Marin Man

A 19-year-old Marine from San Rafael was under intensive treatment today at the Alameda Naval Air Station hospital for a head wound suffered when he was hit by a sniper's bullet in Viet Nam Sunday.

Lance Cpl. Randolph J. Pashilk Jr. of 253 Prospect Drive was wounded in a military operation near the village of Quang Ngai, according to a Department of Defense telegram sent to his parents.

His mother, Mrs. Randolph Pashilk, said her son was given treatment at a medical station in Da Nang, then flown to the West Coast via Manila.

He was wounded just two years to the day after he joined the Marines. He enlisted Feb. 20, 1964, and went to Viet Nam last July 7.

Pashilk attended St. Raphael's School and San Rafael High School and was once an Independent-Journal carrier. He has two brothers who are also in military service. Gerald Pashilk, 20, is stationed at the Army's Fort Devon, Mass., while David Pashilk, 22, is stationed at Beale Air Force Base near Sacramento.

Sanitation, Hospital Directors Not Sworn

None of the three members of the San Rafael Sanitation District board had, until yesterday, taken the oath of office.

And, as far as County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell knows, none of the current members of the Marin Hospital District board have been sworn in yet.

These disclosures came out as Mitchell continued his scrutiny of the county's more than 30 small special districts for technical irregularities.

Yesterday, on Mitchell's advice, San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini and Councilman Fred Jensen went to the county clerk's office and were sworn in as members of the sanitary district board.

Third member of the board, County Supervisor Thomas T. Storer, is in bed with pneumonia, but presumably will be sworn in next week.

Bettini explained that he assumed he was sworn in simultaneously as a board member when he took the oath to become mayor last year. On the advice of County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney, Mitchell advised Bettini yesterday to take the separate oath immediately.

As for the hospital district board, Mitchell said he was unable to find any record in the county clerk's office of the board members taking an oath.

"They may very well have taken the oath of office," said Mitchell, "and this may be on file at the hospital. But the county counsel has advised me to tell them this should also be on file in the clerk's office."

Mrs. Marion C. Ibach, president of the hospital board, expressed surprise and insisted that board members have all been sworn in by County Clerk George H. Gnoss.

Moscow Shows Dogs' Pictures From Orbit

MOSCOW (UPI) —Moscow television today showed the first pictures of Blackie and Breeze, the Soviet spacedogs, in orbit.

The pictures provided the first word that their capsule, Cosmos 110, carries a television camera.

A commentator called the flight of Cosmos 110 and its canine passengers, launched into earth orbit Tuesday, an "important experiment." Earlier, Tass described it as a prelude to a major manned space flight.

The Moscow television pictures showed a round capsule with the dogs inside. The picture was fuzzy and only one of the dogs could be seen clearly. It appeared to be a shepherd, but the breed could not be definitely determined. The Soviets have not said what kind of dogs they are.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. — The most powerful rocket ever launched by the United States a Saturn 1-B, hurled an unmanned Apollo moonship over a blazing re-entry course today and the craft was recovered after parachuting into the sea.

The spectacular launching was a successful beginning to a long series of Apollo shots whose goal is to land American astronauts on the moon in this decade.

If future launchings, including manned earth orbit trips, are as successful as today's maiden effort, the historic moon landing could be made as early as the first part of 1968.

The 11,000-pound cabin section of the spacecraft was retrieved from the sea at 2:13 p.m. (EST) after a blistering 40 minute flight that took it 310 miles into space and back to a parachute landing in the south Atlantic 5,300 miles southeast of Cape Kennedy. It landed within 20 miles of the intended bullseye.

FROGMEN HELP

Frogmen leaped from helicopters and secured the cabin section until the aircraft carrier Boxer came alongside to pick it up.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration hailed the shot as a tremendous success.

The 23-ton spacecraft, manned only by electronic brains for its initial trip into the heavens, was blasted into sunny Florida skies by a mighty, 1.6-million pound thrust Saturn 1B super rocket at 11:12 a.m. EST and splashed down in the Atlantic at about 11:46 a.m. EST.

EASY LANDING

Had astronauts been aboard, they apparently would have survived the flight in good shape.

Once the countdown reached within an instant of blastoff, only to have an automatic sensing device shut down the engines because it detected trouble in a fuel valve pressurization system.

The trouble was quickly remedied, and the countdown resumed. But again difficulty cropped up in the pressurization system. This time officials cancelled the shot, but reversed their decision minutes later and said the problem was not sufficiently serious.

Once the countdown was again resumed, it proceeded without hitch through the spectacular ignition that bathed the launch pad in a sea of flames.

Major objects of the test flight were to see how the Saturn 1B performed, and to

Flu Impact Continues To Be Felt

The influenza epidemic has not yet leveled off in the Bay Area, Dr. Lester Breslow, state director of public health, said yesterday.

Absentees from schools should continue to run high for the next few weeks, he added, although some counties elsewhere in the state may be through their worst periods.

All schools in Marin County, however, were scheduled to be open Monday, although some schools were reporting increases in absences. Others were showing improvements.

Breslow, in his report, added that the number of deaths in the state caused by respiratory diseases was at about the usual level for this time of year, so that none could be attributed to influenza specifically.

The health director also said influenza vaccine shots had proved their worth in several areas.

Closing schools, he said, does little to stop an epidemic, since nearly all children have been exposed by the time absences increase to the point where classes are suspended.

Bruce Cracks Down After Employees Receive Letter

A newsletter from the Marin County Employees Assn., given county employees with their paychecks early this month, has prompted a crack-down by County Administrator Alan Bruce.

Bruce proposed an administrative regulation which would require any pay check enclosure to be reviewed and approved by his office. County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, whose office distributes the pay checks, has protested Bruce's action.

The disagreement will be thrashed out before the county supervisors Tuesday.

The association newsletter said it was hoped that the association's new manager would be equal to or better than anyone working with personnel in the county. Bruce took this as a slap at the personnel department, which is part of his office.

Mitchell and Bruce Tuesday will also argue on another point, namely changing the date of pay checks to the last of the month, rather than the first of the month.

The change, approved by supervisors on Mitchell's recommendation last September, would mean that employees would be taxed in 1966 on 13 months of income, according to County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney.

Bruce has recommended that the September action be rescinded.

Administrator Suggests Dropping Civil Defense

Marin County Administrator Alan Bruce has recommended that the county civil defense office be abolished.

Bruce's recommendation, to go to county supervisors Tuesday, declares that the office as it now operates is nothing but a "paper" operation, yet is costing taxpayers about $4,000 a year.

He suggests the regular county work force could be put to work in a disaster, which is "precisely what would happen in any real emergency" under the present civil defense plan.

The chairman of the board of supervisors now serves as civil defense director. James V. Burdick, county veterans administrator, is deputy director.

Bruce says the cities of the county receive surplus equipment under the auspices of the county civil defense office, but they could continue to receive this benefit by setting up their own civil defense offices and doing their own paperwork.

Bruce said in his letter to the board that Burdick "feels that as presently constituted the office is no benefit to anyone and that the program should either be expanded or eliminated."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

LBJ To Cairo?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic (UAR) has invited President Johnson to visit Cairo, according to informed sources. The report came yesterday as the speaker of the UAR National Assembly, Anwar El-Sadat, ended four days of talks here with U.S. officials, including Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Korea Troops Due

SEOUL (UPI) — Negotiations on terms for the proposed dispatch of an additional 20,000 South Korean troops to Viet Nam have been concluded satisfactorily, Foreign Minister Lee Tong-Won said today. The additional division would raise to 43,000 the number of ROK troops in Viet Nam, second only to the United States among the Allies.

Nails Wreak Havoc

LYONS, France (UPI) — A stream of nails falling from a damaged box aboard a truck caused havoc over several miles of highway. Police reported more than 100 autos suffered blown tires before the nails were swept up.

Child Helps Viets

LONDON (UPI) — Fifty tins of dried milk will be delivered to the Vietnamese Embassy here today by seven-year-old Christopher Houston. Christopher got the milk for his birthday so he could "help the children in Viet Nam."

Quintuplets Born

EAST LONDON, South Africa (UPI) — Quintuplets were born to a South African native woman early today. Doctors said the three boys and two girls, born prematurely, were "doing fine." The mother is a middle-aged African housewife, Mrs. Nogesi Gquzulu.

Chinese Rite Set

MARYSVILLE (AP)—The Chinese community of Marysville, which dates back to Gold Rush days, is celebrating the annual commemoration of Bok Kai, the Chinese water god, this weekend. Traditional Chinese festivities such as the lions dance were scheduled today and tomorrow.

Florida Warmest

NEW YORK (UPI)—The lowest temperature reported this morning to the U.S. Weather Bureau, excluding Alaska and Hawaii, was 4 below zero at Hibbing, Minn. The highest reported yesterday was 77 degrees at Coral Gables, Fla.

Ghana Ties Pending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States expects to have favorable diplomatic relations with the new regime in Ghana, but is in no hurry to formally establish them. State Department Press Officer Robert J. McCloskey confirmed yesterday.

Idaho Approves

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Idaho became the 21st state today to ratify a proposed U.S. constitutional amendment on presidential succession and presidential inability. Ratification by 38 states is necessary for it to become law.

Lawmaker Balks

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Sen. Virgil O'Sullivan, D-Williams, says it "would be presumptuous" for lawmakers to act on constitutional revision this year when "an entirely new Legislature will be seated" in January.

Wilson Stumps Again

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson moved about the country today like a campaigner, strengthening the widely held belief that Britain will have a parliamentary general election March 31.

TO HONEYMOON IN TAHOE—Actor Brian Donlevy, 55, and Lillian Lugosi, 44, were married in civil ceremonies today in Indio. (UPI Telephoto)

Star Weds Ex-Mrs. Lugosi

INDIO (AP)—Actor Brian Donlevy, who gave his age as 55, was married yesterday to Lillian Lugosi, 44, who divorced horror-movie actor Bela Lugosi nine months before his death in 1956.

Donlevy has starred in such films as "Beau Geste" and "The Great McGinty."

The bride and groom said they plan a honeymoon in the Lake Tahoe vicinity and will live in Donlevy's home at Palm Desert.

The marriage was performed by Superior Judge Merrill Brown in his chambers at Indio.

The bride and groom said they have been mutual friends for about 12 years.

French Fire Silo Missile

PARIS (UPI)—France's three-stage nuclear punch moved closer to reality today with the first successful firing of an underground silo-based strategic missile.

The firing was reported by an air force spokesman yesterday. He said only that the 30-ton, two-stage solid fuel SSBS rocket was launched at the Biscarosse Proving Range in southwest France "less than two weeks ago."

The French nuclear deterrent program has three stages.

The first, a strike force of low-flying Mirage IV jet bombers capable of carrying nuclear bombs a distance of 1,500 miles, was activated last year.

The firing of the SSBS strategic missile cleared the decks for the start of the second stage—stationing 25-30 of them in underground silos in southern France, somewhat like the United States does in its western bases.

The third phase will be the "ultimate deterrent" —a fleet of some 20 nuclear armed submarines ranging the high seas at will, according to French plans.

Doctors Head Syrian Junta

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI)—Two civilian doctors moved into top government positions today as the new Socialist military junta strengthened its grip on revolt-torn Syria.

The revolutionary leaders of Wednesday's surprise, bloody left-wing coup, named bone surgeon Youssef Zayyen as premier-designate and physician Nureddin Atassi as president.

Zayyen

Both are former government officials who clashed with ousted President Amin Hafez.

Outside Syria, other Baath party Socialists continued to demand the release and reinstatement of the deposed government, but the new regime appeared to be in firm control.

Atassi

An indication of the junta's confidence came as it eased curfews and reopened air and seaports. A large number of tourists, including more than 100 Americans, who had been trapped in Syria since the revolt started, were allowed to leave.

The junta was under strong attack by Baghdad Radio and the Cairo press and other Arab states were reported cool to the new government.

Controversial Priest Ousted

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A controversial priest, suspended from the priesthood for his refusal to yield to James Francis Cardinal McIntyre's demand for "censorship" of his public statements, today faces a new life among narcotic addicts in Synanon House.

Refusing to assent to what he called "censorship," Father William H. Dubay was informed formally yesterday of his suspension for "irreverence and disobedience that has been cumulative and contumacious."

He is not excommunicated, however, and is allowed to receive the sacraments of the church.

Father Dubay, who has been critical of the cardinal occasionally since 1964 and once asked Pope Paul VI to oust Cardinal McIntyre for failure to act on racial issues, said he will move Monday into Synanon House—a privately operated home for the treatment of narcotics addicts in Santa Monica.

Draft Tests To Tell Students' Fate

Last Used In Korea Conflict

WASHINGTON (AP) — One million draft-eligible students are expected to take the Selective Service college qualification tests this spring. The exams will help draft boards determine whether the students may stay in school or be drafted.

Selective Service announced yesterday that the tests would be given on May 14, May 21 and June 3 at 1,200 locations throughout the continental United States, Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone.

Draft deferment tests were last used during the Korean war.

APRIL DEADLINE

College students and high school students graduating this year will be eligible — but they must apply to take the test by April 23. The test is optional.

Science Research Associates of Chicago will administer the exams which will be similar to general aptitude tests. About 50 per cent will relate to verbal and linguistic skills and the other 50 per cent to quantitative reasoning.

The three-hour test will cover four areas: reading comprehension: verbal relations; arithmetic reasoning; and data interpretation.

A Selective Service spokesman said the test has been so constructed that no special advantage will be given to any type of major course students are pursuing.

TO AID BOARDS

In announcing a return to the Korean war procedure, Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, said the tests will provide local boards with more data on students when they consider college deferment requests next autumn.

Under the new deferment procedures, local draft boards will seek information on class standing of students to be considered with the examinations in determining student deferments.

The use of class standings has been assailed by some college administrators as being unfair. Some said they may refuse to cooperate with draft boards.

Dr. John Weaver, vice president for instruction at Ohio State University, called the use of class ranking "a dangerous way to go about" deferment. He said a student low-ranked at a top school might stand far higher at one where standards are less demanding.

Dean John U. Monro of Harvard University said he would comply if students request that he withhold academic data from their draft boards.

About 1.8 million college students now hold deferments. At present draft boards grant such deferments on the basis of assurances from schools that students are enrolled full time and are doing satisfactory work.

Wolden Called Man Betrayed By Associates

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—San Francisco Assessor Russell Wolden was described yesterday by his attorney as a man betrayed by dishonest associates who accepted bribes while he tried to protect tax rolls.

Attorney James M. MacInnis, in his opening statements at Wolden's trial on bribery charges in San Francisco Superior Court, said the assessor needed financial help just to take trips.

"When Mr. Wolden went to Europe he was forced to do so as the guest of his friend, Adolph Schuman," the attorney said.

To complete the trip, the attorney went on, Wolden had to have a loan from Homer Goehler, a Portland, Ore., tax consultant free on $5,000 bail on bribery charges in San Diego.

MacInnis spoke in rebuttal to prosecution charges by Chief Asst. Dist. Atty. Francis Mayer who portrayed Wolden as a bribe-taker who accepted tens of thousands of dollars in illegal payments in return for reduced tax assessments.

Mayer attacked the assessor's dealings with Schuman, whose business tax was described as "practically static" despite large growth.

New Mexico Hamlet Turns Out For Last Tribute To Its Hero

LAS LUNAS, N.M. (AP) — All across New Mexico flags fly at half staff today. But the mourning is greatest in this rural community where a war hero has come home for the last time.

His name was Daniel Fernandez. Last week, the 21-year-old Army specialist fourth class deliberately threw himself over an exploding grenade in Viet Nam.

He died. But his buddies lived.

"Greater love than this no one has, that one lay down his life for his friends."

With that simple passage from the Gospel of St. John, the Rev. Francis Schuler will begin his sermon at a Requiem High Mass for Fernandez, held, not in a church, but in a school gymnasium so that more of the youth's friends might be able to attend.

After the Mass, the body will be taken to Santa Fe, about 90 miles north, for burial.

DANIEL FERNANDEZ
May receive medal

An eight-man rifle squad will fire a graveside salute and a bugler will sound Taps.

Lt. Gov. Mack Easley, acting in the absence of Gov. Jack M. Campbell, issued orders that flags in the state dip in tribute to the young hero today.

Representing the governor at the burial services will be Maj. Gen. John P. Jolly, the state's adjutant general.

Fernandez had been decorated with the Purple Heart and Air Medal for previous service as a helicopter door gunner in Viet Nam. He was sent home to recover from wounds but volunteered to return in January.

He had volunteered for the patrol action in which he lost his life, shielding comrades from the blast of the Viet Cong grenade.

For that action, his last, Daniel Fernandez has been recommended for his nation's highest military decoration, the Medal of Honor.

Downed Fliers Saved After Long Wait

DA NANG, South Viet Nam (UPI) —Two U.S. Marine flyers told today how they spent two hours in the South China Sea trying to draw the attention of passing helicopters, aircraft and ships—nearly in vain.

The two men, based at Da Nang, were flying in an F-4C phantom near Quang Tri Friday when the plane was hit by Communist ground fire.

"We had just made six bombing runs over the area when we got hit," said 1st Lt. Bob Pappas, 26, of E. St. Louis, Ill., pilot of the downed craft.

Pappas turned the plane toward the South China Sea.

"We were just heading out over the ocean when all our electric and hydraulic systems went out," he said.

First Lt. John R. Coleman, 25, of Bellmore, N.Y., the radar operator in the two-seat plane, ejected first.

Pappas stayed 30 seconds longer trying in vain to start the engines again. Then he also ejected.

Pappas and Coleman landed in the water, eight miles apart and 10 to 20 miles from shore.

Pappas said he tried everything possible to attract the attention of planes and ships searching for them. Apparently neither his radio nor that of his radar operator were working.

"I fired flares and smoke bombs to attract the attention of rescue helicopters and navy planes," he said. Both efforts failed.

Coleman, closer to shore, spotted a Navy ship and fired flares and emptied his pistol of all the tracer bullets. The destroyer-tender USS Falgout spotted him and pulled him out of the sea.

Coleman told the crew the direction the plane was traveling before he ejected and estimated how much farther out to sea Pappas might be.

The ship took the course and eight miles out the crew spotted Pappas and pulled him out. Both men were uninjured.

"It was a real inspiring sight when they pulled me aboard," said Pappas. "Everyone was waving at me and taking photos."

Meningitis Kills Soldier In Colorado

FT. CARSON, Colo. (UPI) — A 17-year-old Ft. Carson soldier has died of spinal meningitis, Army officials and Colorado health officials agreed today that it probably was an isolated case.

The victim was Pvt. Andrew T. Heningburg of Mobile, Ala. He died in the post hospital Thursday—a day after he was admitted complaining of breathing difficulty.

Authorities at Ft. Sill near Lawton, Okla., reported yesterday that William L. Brockner, 24, of Old Brookville, N.Y., a student in the officer candidate school, apparently had been stricken with meningitis. Brockner entered Reynolds Army Hospital Wednesday and his condition was last reported to be considerably improved.

Two cases of infectious meningitis also were reported yesterday in Opelika, Ala. Although neither case involved students at Auburn University, school officials suspended all strenuous activities by students as a precaution.

Driver Too Slow, Then Cross-Wise

SAN BRUNO (UPI)—Two deputy sheriffs said that they started trailing a car going only 8 miles an hour on the Bayshore Highway.

Suddenly, it started going slower and slower and moving east to west on the high-speed north to south highway. Finally, the car stopped and backed into the deputies' vehicle.

Driver Alfred Batteate Jr., 48 was arrested on suspicion of drunk driving.

U.S. Rejects Russ Note Over B-52

MOSCOW (UPI) —The United States has rejected official Kremlin allegations that the crash of a B-52 bomber over Spain violated the 1963 partial nuclear test ban treaty, it was learned today.

A communique delivered to the Soviet Foreign Ministry yesterday called the charges "without any foundation" and added that "no nuclear weapons test, no nuclear explosion of any kind and no radioactive pollution of the sea were involved in the unfortunate accident."

The Russian's charged Feb. 16 that the crash, in which an H-bomb was lost, violated the 1963 treaty. The American reply was delivered by Davis E. Boster, counselor for political affairs.

The reply declared that the flights of U.S. military aircraft were for the purpose of "reinforcing collective security against the threat posed by the huge nuclear forces of the Soviet Union including its many bomber aircraft.

"It is not surprising that the government of the U.S.S.R. is opposed to military security measures undertaken in defense against the threat of its armed power or that it should attempt to limit or reduce such defense."

Spectators Wonder If Two Defendants To Take Stand

MIAMI (UPI) —Why didn't Candy Mossler take the stand?

One facetious reason being advanced in courtroom circles here is that if she had, she would have outtalked everybody including the prosecutors and the quick-witted judge, George E. Schulz, at her murder trial.

The defense rested Friday at the end of the sixth week of the trial of Candy and her alleged incestuous lover, Melvin Lane Powers. He is her nephew.

The state alleges that the two murdered Candy's multimillionaire husband, Jacques Mossler, because he was interfering with their love affair.

Asked at the end of the court session yesterday why the defense didn't put the blonde former model in the witness chair, her chief attorney, Clyde Woody, said: "The trial isn't over yet."

It's not, and the prosecution is going to take all day Monday and perhaps part of Tuesday putting on rebuttal witnesses.

The defense intends to call witnesses to contradict these, if necessary—in court parlance, they are surrebuttal witnesses —but neither Candy nor Powers is expected to be one of them.

The trial is expected to go to the jury on Thursday.

Wedding Plans Curb Talk Dates

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson is putting aside most public activity for June and July so she can be free to plan her daughter Luci's Aug. 6 wedding.

The first lady's press secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter, said Mrs. Johnson has decided to limit her speaking engagements to one a month. She usually gets about 90 requests for talks each month.

The engagements Mrs. Johnson does not fill will be turned over to her newly created speakers' bureau, which supplies pinch hitters for her on beautification promotion.

Police Guard Black Muslim Convention

CHICAGO (UPI) —The Black Muslims convention opened in Chicago today under heavy police guard and amid speculation over the movement's most famous member, heavyweight boxing champion Cassius Clay.

More than 250 policemen surrounded the South Side Coliseum site for the two-day meeting, on foot and in patrol cars. Police Supt. Orlando W. Wilson feared there might be violence.

Speculation on Clay centered around whether he would appear to hear either of the two scheduled long speeches by Black Muslim leader Elijah Muhammad.

Clay—called Muhammad Ali by the Muslims—was in town for an appearance before the Illinois Boxing Commission yesterday when Illinois Atty. Gen. William G. Clark, declared in effect that Clay's fight with Ernie Terrell was cancelled because National Sports Promotions, Inc., had been illegally granted a license for the March 29 bout.

Fight promoter Ben Bentley earlier said Clay would not attend the convention.

Police said they would not enter the Coliseum itself unless trouble broke out. Security inside will be maintained by the black supremacy sect's elite guards, the "Fruit of Islam," who are trained in karate.

Indonesian Youth Defy Sukarno

SINGAPORE (UPI) —Barbed wire and machine gun emplacements ringed President Sukarno's palace today amid reports that troops were searching Jakarta for former Defense Minister Gen. A. H. Nasution.

Travelers reaching Singapore said student demonstrators against the government appeared to have public sympathy, and a Japanese correspondent reported from Jakarta that student leaders intend to defy Sukarno's authority.

The report said students vowed to resist Sukarno's order Friday night outlawing all demonstrations and banning the powerful Indonesian University Student Action Assn. (KAMI).

The order came after 10,000 students and others joined a massive funeral procession mourning the death of five students reported killed when palace guiardsmen opened fire on anti-Communist demonstrators Wednesday and Thursday.

The President also forbade all gatherings of more than five persons and doubled Jakarta curfew hours to keep the streets clear from 9 p.m. until dawn.

Tower Toppled

LAKE CHARLES, La. (UPI) — A hit and run helicopter knocked over a 300-foot radio tower and damaged the roof of the Louisiana State Police headquarters yesterday. The 'copter then sped away. State police said the pilot might not have realized what he had done.

WATER DISTRICT'S MOVING DAY

Dallas Schuster (left) and Charles Castro were among 100 employees of the Marin Municipal Water District who worked hard today to move tons of equipment and parts from the district's old corporation yard in San Rafael to a new one across the street from district offices in Corte Madera. The San Rafael property will be sold after its buildings are torn down. The move, which started last night, is scheduled to wind up tomorrow.

Novato Faces Dilemma Over Bridge By-Pass

The Novato City Council was placed on the horns of a dilemma last night in regard to its scheduled construction of a new bridge over Warner Creek.

City Public Works Director Lawrence A. Coleman told councilmen that it would cost the city between $12,000 and $17,000 to set up a temporary by-pass so traffic can continue on South Novato Boulevard.

On the other hand, warned Coleman, traffic will have to be detoured over Diablo Avenue and Center Road if no by-pass is constructed. This would add 1,000 feet to the route and would divert traffic away from two shopping centers for four months.

Contract for the project was awarded Wednesday to the Future Construction Co. of Dublin for $49,888. Half the money for the job will come from county urban thoroughfare funds and the other half from state gas tax funds, but Coleman pointed out last night that neither fund can be tapped for the bypass.

The council, partly because of light attendance at its special meeting last night, postponed action to another special session at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Coleman said he was also negotiating with the contractor on the cost of speeding up the job by working overtime during the week and on weekends. He said the cost of that change has not been determined, and admitted he was not sure where such extra money would come from.

The public works director said the bypass had been tentatively ruled out by the city staff in initial planning on the project. This was done, he said, because of its cost and the expected difficulty of getting an easement across private property for a temporary road and bridge.

Increased Police Patrol Before Tiburon's Council

The Tiburon City Council Monday will deliberate whether to expand police patrols in the city on weekends.

Councilmen will meet at 8 p.m. in the multi-purpose room of Del Mar School.

City Mgr. Lawrence D. Rose recommends that an additional policeman be put on to cover the "grossly accentuated tourist and entertainment" activities which take place in the city on weekends.

The city now contracts with Marin County for use of sheriff's deputies as the city's police force. One deputy now is on duty at all times, but if councilmen adopt Rose's recommendation, two men would patrol the city from Friday night through Sunday night.

Rose also recommended that Sheriff's Sgt. George Barnes, head of the Tiburon sub-station, be promoted by Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos to the rank of lieutenant.

If promoted, Barnes would receive $753 per month, an additional cost to the city of $42 per month.

The council also will consider a query from the State Department of Fish and Game on changing the name of Hospital Cove on Angel Island to "Ayala Cove," after explorer Don Juan de Ayala.

Councilmen have received several letters protesting such a change. One was from Richard M. Sims, judge of the District Court of Appeals in San Francisco and former Marin County Superior Court judge.

Rose will also recommend to the council that Tiburon Boulevard be widened from Main Street to Mar West Street, with installation of curbs, gutters and sidewalks. Such a project, Rose maintains, would help relieve downtown parking and would help storm drainage there.

Woman Motorist Suffers Cut Lip

Donna L. Stahl, 33, of 9 Charlotte Drive, San Rafael, was treated at San Rafael General Hospital yesterday for a cut lip after her car hit that of Michael J. Lowrie, parked in front of his home at 219 Canal Street at 2:51 p.m.

Mrs. Stahl, who was eastbound, was unable to tell what had caused the accident, according to San Rafael police.

YMCA To Hear Expert On Sex

Teen-age dating, sex attitudes and relationships with parents and friends will be discussed by young members of the Marin Young Men's Christian Assn., in San Rafael and Dr. Evelyn Duvall, author of the book "Sense and Non-sense About Sex," at a meeting March 9 at 7:30 p.m.

The discussion will be part of a day-long program at which Dr. Duvall will meet with YMCA professional staff, laymen and parents and explore the role of the association in its work with teen-agers.

Dr. Duvall has been a frequent resource leader for YMCA national and local programs on family life education. Many of her books have been published by the YMCA in New York.

Johnson today said, also, that in Honolulu recently, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in South Viet Nam, reported to him on "his plans and his evaluations and his hopes—and I was very pleased with what he had to say."

He said this in reply to a question about reports of more encouraging news on the military front in South Viet Nam.

But Johnson refrained from "public predictions of battle strategy or what might result" because that would not serve the national interest.

And he refused to say directly whether, with reference to his assertion Wednesday night in a New York speech that "the tide of battle has turned," he meant that the allies now were winning in South Viet Nam.

Johnson also said:

—Despite strong objections among some senators to his Viet Nam policies, he is "rather pleased that differences are as minimal as they are" between him and members of Congress on this and other issues.

—He would not rule out possible further tax increases as a result of the Viet Nam war. But he said "we don't want to put the brakes on too fast" to check inflation.

—He thinks Congress "will act wisely" on Sen. Wayne Morse's proposal to rescind the 1964 resolution which backed his military program in Viet Nam, and he thinks he "still could carry out" U.S. obligations there under his authority as commander-in-chief and under U.S. treaty commitments without the resolution.

Mitchell's investigation sped up after audits of several small districts disclosed that directors were not properly elected or were not properly sworn in.

County Administrator Alan Bruce has called for a meeting with Mitchell and Gnoss to decide who in the county government actually is responsible for making sure special districts follow the rules properly.

The meeting was originally set for Wednesday but has been postponed to an indefinite date.

Mitchell, meanwhile, said he has finished checking into all but about eight of the special districts.

Sheppard Set For Washington Trip To Court

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard and his second wife, Arianne, plan to leave tomorrow for Washington where the U.S. Supreme Court will hear his appeal from his 1954 murder conviction.

The Sheppards had been due in Washington last Wednesday for arguments originally scheduled Thursday, but cancelled the trip when Sheppard developed a fever of 104 degrees. The court did not get to the Sheppard case on the docket and rescheduled it for Monday. Sheppard reportedly was sufficiently recovered.

Sheppard was freed in July, 1964, from the Ohio Penitentiary where he had served nearly nine years for the July 4, 1954, slaying of his first wife, Marilyn. U.S. District Judge Carl Weinman of Dayton, Ohio, freed Sheppard on grounds he did not get a fair trial.

County Offices Filing To Open

Filing to run for county offices and others on the June 7 primary ballot will open Monday at the courthouse.

Candidates will have until the close of business March 25 to file their official papers with the county clerk's office.

In addition to 15 county offices, the ballot will contain 10 state offices, a congressional seat, three seats on the Marin Municipal Water District and five seats on each major political party's county central committee.

bruised where he had apparently tried unsuccessfully to get to his feet after falling to the ground sometime during the night, said a spokesman for the humane society.

Since he took the first bite of grass at his pasture in 1938, Blackie has become a celebrity and a landmark on the landscape of Marin.

The people of Tiburon and surrounding area rallied to his aid two years ago when his grazing ground was threatened by the bulldozers cutting the new Tiburon Boulevard. His pasture was saved.

Motorists stopped their cars today when they saw Blackie's condition. One woman, thinking Blackie had died, immediately put pen to paper and composed poetry to his memory.

Officers Ordered To Bring Sad News

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Defense Department has ordered the Army and Air Force to send officers to notify the next of kin of servicemen killed or missing in action in South Viet Nam whenever possible.

In a memorandum to the services yesterday, Deputy Defense Secretary Cyrus Vance noted that next of kin now "are being notified by telegram delivered by mail, messenger or taxicab." He said "such impersonal procedures" were not in keeping with the government's interest in the welfare of servicemen's families.

Marin City Blaze Blamed On Dryer

The fire that destroyed the home of Dr. Robert V. Welts Feb. 16 in the hills above Marin City was apparently started by by lint from a clothes dryer, according to a report submitted yesterday to the sheriff's office.

The report said lint had bypassed a trap and collected on a rubber hose near open wires, where a spark could have touched it off. The fire destroyed the house and contents at the end of Eureka Road. Loss was set at $53,500. The owner was away on vacation at the time.

WAR

air attacks over North Viet Nam were hampered by poor weather. An Air Force spokesman said all the bombing yesterday was by radar.

Air Force pilots flying F105 Thunderchief jets smashed at an ammunition depot and storage area five miles from the city of Vinh. Other Air Force targets included the Vinh Loc bridge and highway complex.

Navy Skyraiders and F4 Phantoms from the carrier Ranger hit a mountain pass yesterday 37 miles southwest of Vinh.

In the ground war, the Viet Cong attack on the U.S. Marine position began with a barrage of mortars and recoilless rifles. The main attack came at dawn when Viet Cong fighters managed to cut their way through the outer triple apron of wire.

As they clawed through the single inner wire strand the assault was halted by concentrated small arms fire and artillery support from the embattled Marines.

Fire In Oakland Home Kills Boy

OAKLAND (AP) — An infant burned to death but neighbors rescued five other children from a residence fire today.

The body of Michael C. Brown, 1, was found beside his bed when firemen brought the blaze under control.

Battalion Chief Lawrence Toellner said he was told that Felicia Bess, the adult living in the small frame house, had gone out about 2 p.m. Friday and had not returned. Police are trying to locate her.

Toellner said the rescued children admitted they had been playing with fire—lighting scraps of paper from the water heater pilot light.

San Quentin Inmate Still Not Recaptured

Patrick Shields, 34-year-old San Quentin Prison inmate serving a 14-year sentence for mayhem and assault with a deadly weapon, was still at large today, 48 hours after he walked away from the prison's minimum security ranch.

An Oklahoma-born Indian, Shields had served 11 years of his term when he disappeared before midnight Thursday.

Exiles In Lagos Jubilant Over Nkrumah Ouster

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — Ghanaian exiles today jubilantly celebrated the overthrow of President Kwame Nkrumah and promised to call for American and British help if he tried to regain control.

"Mark my words, he will try," said Oheneba K. Richardson, secretary general of the opposition Ghana United Party.

"America, Britain and Nigeria will be forced to give us backing if Nkrumah relies on the forces of communism to bring him back," Richardson said at a celebration party at his exile home here.

Reports from Accra said the new military junta under army Lt. Gen. Joseph Ankrah was rounding up Nkrumah's political supporters and jailing members of the now outlawed Convention Peoples party.

And it was a stunning climax to a day that early seemed to be turning into a disappointment. The launch, originally scheduled for 7:45 a.m. EST, was set back twice by trouble with a nitrogen gas system used to pressurize fuel valves on the rocket. Once a postponement actually was announced; then it was cancelled, and the countdown resumed to a perfect launch.

Collision On Go-Kart Injures Teen-Ager

Raymond R. Romanin, 14, lost control of his new go-kart at 4:25 p.m. yesterday in the driveway of his home at 2468 Vineyard Road, Novato. The cart carried him across the driveway and into the side of his parents' parked camper truck, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Romanin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Natale Romainin, was treated at Novato General Hospital for a scraped left leg and released.

Ulysses Grant, by profession, was a leather tanner.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Doctor-Patient Relationships

If a doctor is treating you, you want him to keep your private affairs in confidence even when he is called upon to testify in court. In this respect a doctor is somewhat like a minister or a lawyer.

California law says that without his patient's consent no physician can be made to testify in court. To claim this privilege, one must show the court that a physician-patient relationship exists, that is, the patient had consulted the doctor for treatment.

A court sometimes names a doctor to make a physical or mental examination for evidence, not treatment. In this case, no confidentiality exists.

In a personal injury case, say an automobile accident case, one can call upon the plaintiff to go to a doctor of the defendant's choice to check out his claims. Since this information is not for treatment but to get evidence, it is not confidential.

Recently the courts held that a doctor's records of his drug prescriptions were also privileged. No litigant (or even a state investigator in some cases) can go through the doctor's confidential records. However state investigators have access to some narcotics prescriptions which cannot be kept secret.

The privilege of confidence really belongs to the patient, not the doctor. Only he can claim or give up the privilege. After the patient's death the privilege is largely lost, but even so his family can still claim some protection under the privilege. And lawyers and the law make some exceptions. In a will contest, a doctor can testify as to his former patient's mental condition.

When the patient sues his doctor for the injuries arising out of his treatment, the law then presumes that he has waived his privilege of confidence. He cannot complain if the doctor testifies since he brought up the whole question himself when he brought suit.

Doctors who break professional confidences are subject to lawsuits. He may have breached his contract with his patient or have invaded his right to privacy. However the doctor may discuss your case with other doctors since to do so may serve your interest and be the duty of the doctor.

Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.

Noise Around The House Is Greater Than Some Offices

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's no place like home — for noise.

The din around the house is greater than that at most offices and factories, and often reaches the unbearable point on nerves and eardrums.

The kitchen is the noisiest room, and one expert on "unwanted sound" compared its noise to that in the cockpit of the old DC-3.

Modern appliances, with which no homemaker would be without, are the major cause of the whine, whirr, roar, slam and hum that make home sometimes sound like a boiler factory. And in most instances the vacuum cleaner is the noisiest of 'em all.

A REPORT on some of the noise hazards in today's households comes from the Institute of Life Insurance which found from a review of several studies that noise in the ordinary home is not only extraordinary, it can become downright dangerous."

Robert Waldron, who did the research and report for the institute, cited one study from the U.S. Department of Agriculture of noise in a number of Georgia farm homes during several different 24-hour periods.

The study, which had the advantage of avoiding big city background sounds, turned up the fact that the "quiet hour" after the kids are off to school and pop's off to work often is one of the noisiest.

AVERAGE NOISE levels during that morning period in one home reached more than 77 decibels, the measuring stick which scientists use on noise; in another, 80, still another, 81.

The study taped average noise levels in the 70 and 80 decibel range also from 7 to 8 a.m., noon to 2 p.m., and 5 to 9 p.m.

Waldron cited the comment from Dr. Lee E. Farr, of the University of Texas graduate school of biomedical sciences, that these noise levels commonly produce irritability and tiredness. Readings from zero to 60 are in the faint to moderate noise range, above that it's from loud to deafening.

Waldron said scientists generally agree that sustained levels from 95 to 100 are hazardous to the ears; from 100 to 120 can cause temporary deafness, and from 130 to 140 can cause permanent loss of hearing.

The slam of a door, a clap of thunder might register a high decibel but this is not sustained noise.

WITH TWO or more appliances going, however, the decibels go up significantly. One laboratory, testing a vent fan and dishwasher together, got an 88 decibel reading. With the garbage disposer going too, the level rose to 100.

Offices and factories generally rate quieter than home, Waldron said, because they are conscious of the better efficiency of workers in quiet surroundings. Offices, for instance, use sound-deadening ceilings, sound-absorbing wall-to-wall carpeting, draperies and upholstered furniture.

IN TURN, kitchens have any number of hard surfaces including a hard floor which help sound to bounce around.

Homemakers are now listening to an appliance before they buy, and in turn manufacturers are engineering in more soundproofing.

One other solution: Don't turn on all the noisemakers at once.

Mother Can Prepare Child For Encounter With Dentist

NEW YORK (UPI) — You expect your child to scream when he goes through a hall of horrors at an amusement park. The fright is part of the playful fun.

But you're hardly prepared for it when he screams during his first encounter with a dentist.

To a child not prepared, the experience can leave a lifetime fright imprint. The noise of the machines and the strange instruments put into his mouth make him dread going through such torture again.

The maker of a toothpaste in consultation with the dental profession, has offered these suggestions to make the first visit easier.

BEGIN A program of home dental care as soon as your child will accept it. Start with a soft toothbrush or cotton swab and a pleasant tasting toothpaste.

Explain the construction of teeth, their purpose and without too much fright, tell the ways teeth can be damaged. Your dentist might have a booklet that can help you with this chore.

Arrange for the child to meet the dentist non-professionally. Find out from other mothers when their children have appointments. Then, have your child accompany a friend who is a regular patient and does not resist going.

CALL AHEAD to the dentist's office. Let him know the situation. Perhaps he'll give your child a tour of the office and let him sit in the chair. On this first outing, mother should stay home. Let the child tell about his first visit.

Before the child's first examination, buy him a new toothbrush and tell him it is a present from the dentist.

Have a pre-arranged fun date with your child after the visit to the dentist. If he does react negatively, the prospect of a treat might calm him.

Guild Plans Fashion Show By Children

Plans are being made for the Blessed Sacrament Women's Guild, Santa Venetia, annual salad bowl luncheon to be held March 26 in the parish hall.

Highlight of the day will be a fashion show by the children of the parish, under the direction of Mrs. Raymond Gancel and Mrs. Walter Johnson.

Chairman is Mrs. Raymond Perkins, assisted by Mrs. Harold Curtis. Reservations chairmen are Mrs. George Bill and Mrs. W. B. Spellman, Hamilton Air Force Base.

Don Timoteo P-TA To Hold Festival

The Don Timoteo Parent-Teacher Assn. in Terra Linda will sponsor a science festival and book fair from March 8 through 11 from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., and 7 to 9 p.m. Materials and books will be on display in the school library.

The festival committee has invited students, parents and visitors. All areas of interest to children will be represented, including magnetism, nature, crafts, astronomy, seeds, maps and simple scientific equipment. The reading areas to be included are classics, fiction, biographies, adventure stories, mystery, nature and reference books.

The co-chairmen are Mrs. Harold Newman and Mrs. Louis Pagone.

The proceeds from the festival and book fair will be used to furnish educational materials to the school.

'Muddled Morals' Is Panel Topic

Gallinas School Parent-Teacher Assn. will have a panel discussion, "Our Muddled Morals" to be given Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the school.

Panel members will be the Rev. J. P. Sherman, the Rev. John O'Connor, and Bob Mc Innis, with M. O. Hill of the P-TA as the moderator.

During the evening an honorary life membership will be awarded by the P-TA.

Soft Draped Look Of Cowl Neckline Used In Lining

By EUNICE FARMER

I am making a blouse with a cowl neckline. This is made of lightweight silk and is an overblouse rather than a tuck-in blouse. I remember that you suggest underlining. How will this affect the soft cowl neckline?

Mrs. W.W.H.

Dear Mrs. W.W.H.

A garment with a cowl neckline usually is cut on the bias in order to achieve that soft draped look. You will cut the underlining exactly the same (bias). It will drape just as beautifully, in fact the extra weight of the two layers will give it more body and it should be even more attractive.

Is there any way to make a cardigan out of a slipover? I have found a beautiful silk print that matches an old sweater perfectly. I would like to make a jacket type sweater to go over a dress. I have seen these ready made.

Mrs. V.G.

Dear Mrs. V.G.

This isn't too difficult—and it is an excellent way to use your old sweaters. Often they are as good as new, but just don't go with anything.

1. Baste a piece of lightweight firm interfacing on the wrong side of the sweater from neck to lower edge at the center front.

2. Machine stitch two rows of stitching about ½ inch apart. I would suggest using a small stitch and it wouldn't be a bad idea to stitch each line twice. Be sure your sweater doesn't stretch out of shape. It may be necessary to place a piece of tissue paper over the sweater and stitch through the paper.

3. Carefully cut the sweater between the two rows of stitching. The interfacing will help keep the edges from becoming too limp. If you wish to change the length of the sweater, or the sleeve length, use the same procedure.

4. There are many ways of finishing the cut edges. You may bind the outer edges with a bias strip of your dress fabric. Finished braid or grosgrain ribbon is also used and is most attractive. Usually these jacket sweaters are lined. If you decide to line yours, remember to keep the lining slightly larger than the sweater so that it will "give." Use a very lightweight fabric for lining. Hope this gives many of you an idea for making something out of nothing.

Perhaps my catastrophe will help someone else. I cut a pattern just as directed, even though it seemed odd to me that the dart that came up at an angle from the side had a large piece cut out of it.

When I stitched the dart and tried the dress on, the dart was much too high for me. Since the dart was cut out, I couldn't do a thing about it. Why don't pattern companies try to avoid these "traps" we can instantly fall into?

Mrs. L.W.

Dear Mrs. L.W.

Unfortunately, these things happen to the beginner who doesn't realize the importance of measuring themselves before cutting. You must always measure from the shoulder to the tip of your bust and compare it with the same measurement on your patatern.

This is when you will decide whether the dart needs to be lowered. I would suggest that you avoid cutting the darts until after a fitting. The dart can be stitched and then the excess cut out after you are sure it's OK.

It's always a good idea to give yourself the benefit of the doubt when you are inexperienced.

"I just had to pass on this information about shortening 'stay-press' slacks. Instead of cutting off the trouser leg, just take a tuck under the cuff. In this way, you can let out the tuck when more length is needed without a mark showing."

This sure is easier than cutting the slacks and replacing the cuff. I asked a tailor about this and he thought it was a great idea—so, naturally, I am awarding this week's tailor trix pressing board to the lady who sent it, Mrs. R. M. Wippold, St. Louis, Mo.

Many of you will be making suits and coats in the near future. Sleeves seem to be the one detail that gives you the most trouble. You'll find my leaflet, "All About Sleeves," invaluable because of its easy-to-follow, step-by-step instructions. Send 10 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal and request this helpful leaflet.

Women Taking Part In Viet Nam Battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Remember the days when the WACs, those women soldiers, numbered in the tens of thousands during World War II? And the WAFs and the WAVES?

If you're slow to recall the exact names, they are: Women's Army Corps (WACs), Women's Air Force (WAFs) and — hardest of all — Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service (WAVES).

South Viet Nam has a relatively new counterpart, WAFCs, Women's Armed Forces Corps. Their strength is rising, and there's even a backlog of applicants.

"THEIR MAIN incentive," says a WAC who helped launch the WAFC training program in South Viet Nam last year, "is patriotism. They are quite articulate in stating their part in the Viet Nam struggle."

M. Sgt. Betty Adams told newsmen about the WAFCs at a Pentagon news conference. Basically the South Vietnamese corps' mission is like that of the U.S. women's services: Pulling together the country's volunteer womanpower trained in noncombat occupational skills.

SGT. ADAMS, 33, of Woodside, Long Island, N.Y., and Maj. Kathleen I. Wilkes of Cobbtown, Ga., went to Saigon in January 1965 to act as advisers to the new WAFC.

Sgt. Adams, overcoming a language barrier, helped launch the training center which opened near Saigon last March. Maj. Wilkes concentrated on policy decisions.

Most of the WAFC strength came in the form of Vietnamese women who had served in medical and welfare services of South Viet Nam's Women's Auxiliary Corps. Other members were recruited.

THE ENLISTMENT total last December: More than 1,000 with still others waiting to be processed.

"They are anxious to learn," Sgt. Adams said. "Their camaraderie and esprit de corps are apparent."

The Vietnamese women recruits are taught military law, first aid and map reading and undergo such field training as learning how to pitch a tent and set up a bivouac area. The pay is just under $20 a month, with a food and clothing allowance.

R. E. Coates Weds Karen Brodsgar

The First Presbyterian Church in San Rafael was the setting on Feb. 6 for the wedding of Karen Ann Brodsgar of San Rafael and Ronald Eugene Coates of Huntington, W. Va.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil J. Brodsgar of San Rafael.

Officiating at the 1:30 p.m. double ring ceremony was the Rev. Wesley A. Baker.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length gown of white peau de soie appliqued with white crystals and pearls.

Preceding the bride to the altar in a gown of aqua chiffon over taffeta was Marjorie Soldavini of San Anselmo as maid of honor, and Ronald McQueen of Los Angeles served the bridegroom as best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the San Rafael Elks Club.

The bride was graduated from the Terra Linda High School and is employed with the Pacific Telephone Co. in San Rafael.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Coates of Huntington. He was graduated from Barboursville High School in Huntington and attended the College of Marin. He is presently serving with the U.S. Air Force.

Following a wedding trip to Huntington, the newlyweds will reside in San Rafael.

Brown Pledges All-Out Third Term Campaign

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Brown told fellow Democrats today his quest for a third term will be "the greatest political campaign ever seen in this state."

"And in November we will take that campaign to victory at the polls," the governor said in remarks prepared for a meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee's executive committee.

Brown and Carmen Warschaw, Southern California Democratic chairman, attacked what they called "extremist infiltration" of the Republican Party, singling out the John Birch Society.

Mrs. Warschaw, in prepared remarks, said the volunteer California Republican Assembly, United Republicans of California and Young Republicans "are vying to see which can produce the most ridiculous brand of extremism."

"The Young Republicans booed George Christopher when he dared to attack the John Birch Society," Mrs. Warschaw said.

" . . . They gave Ronald Reagan a standing ovation, just to let everyone know where they stand."

Christopher, regarded as a moderate, and Reagan, a leader in Barry Goldwater's conservation campaign in 1964, are the leading candidates for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

Mrs. Warschaw also criticized the Democrats' own volunteer organization, the California Democratic Council. She referred to the organization's convention last week as "the spectacle in Bakersfield."

She said the CDC "has lost touch with our democratic officeholders and the grass roots Democrats who elect them."

She said the central committee, the official organization, can't count on volunteer groups to do the hard work of the campaign this year and must take the lead.

Brown said the campaign will be based on two principles:

What he called the "formidable" record of his administration and the Legislature's Democratic majorities over the past seven years.

"In the months ahead," he said, "we are going to see a lot of flak about the budget and taxes."

"If the Republicans want to cut back these programs, make them spell out exactly what they want to cut and by how much. Then the people will know what the alternatives are."

Reagan Hits State Budget As 'Sellout'

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Republican Ronald Reagan, in his most pointed attack yet on state issues, charged last night that Gov. Edmund G. Brown's $4.6 billion budget "is balanced on a pinpoint of time and on the edge of a cliff" and "represents a sellout of our future."

Reagan, GOP gubernatorial hopeful, told an invited audience estimated at 500 in the San Diego Hilton Inn that the budget for fiscal 1966-67 showed "sloppiness, incompetency and a tendency to sell out the future."

He appeared for the speech, which was televised live in San Diego and Los Angeles, despite a bout with the flu. He said his fever had reached 102 degrees and earlier in the day a doctor had ordered him to bed.

"We have a leadership gap in Sacramento," Reagan charged. "They've abdicated their responsibility and continually seek their answers in Washington."

"In the last eight years, the number of state employees has increased twice as fast as the population," he said. "The budget has increased four times as fast."

Actress Ida Lupino is a member of one of the oldest stage families in existence, the first in line being Georgius Lupino, who traveled from Italy to London in 1679 with a puppet show.

Convalescent Hospital Gets Use Permit

County Zoning Administrator Thomas E. Cordill has granted a use permit for an 82-bed convalescent hospital between Stetson and Maple avenues in Kentfield.

The development is planned by Joseph Pell and Robert Busse. The site is just east of the Kentfield fire station.

Neighbors protested the proposal at a hearing before Cordill Feb. 7.

Orginally Pell and Busse proposed a 99-bed hospital and later an 86-bed hospital. Cordill said there must be no more than 82 beds, that the building must be set back at least 20 feet from property lines, and that there can be no expansion until some access other than the one on Stetson Avenue is developed.

Agricultural Preserve Pact Signed

An agricultural preserve contract on 450 acres southeast of Nicasio has been signed by the owners, Henry F. Tomasini and Florence E. Knecht.

It is the third contract signed so far in Marin County.

The property is adjacent to a 150-acre parcel owned by John G. Kelly, who signed a contract last week. First rancher to sign was George W. Wheelwright, owner of the Green Gulch Ranch near Muir Beach.

Under the contract, the owner agrees to keep his property in agricultural use for 10 years. The county assessor can give the property owner a break on land assessment, disregarding development potential.

Ranchers have until noon March 7, to sign agreements to have an effect on property taxes for the next fiscal year, County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said.

KTIM-FM Switches To Higher Power

Radio KTIM's FM transmission increased nearly four times in power yesterday afternoon as a new high fidelity transmitter was brought into use for the first time.

General Manager Hugh Turner said the station now serves Marin County with 3,000 watts of power on the FM band. The increase, he said, enables listeners in Tiburon and Sausalito as well as the northern edges of the county to receive programs as well as they have been received in central Marin.

The 1,000th anniversary of Poland as a Christian nation will be observed next August in the U.S. and Canada.

Novato High School's Honor Role Recited

Honor roll for the fall semester at Novato High School was announced yesterday by Joseph Garguilo, vice principal.

During the fall semester, 100 students received a 3.5 grade point average or better, out of 1,900 students, he said.

Those who received straight A's, or a four point average, were: Steven Bowen, Scott Bulfinch, Dean Edwards, Wendy Kanoff, Diane Laferriere, Mark Moore, Barbara Palen and Leslie Sherman.

Students with a 3.86 point average were: Marcy Eisenhauer, Marie Katz, Bruce Palmer, Dale Pensotte and Mary Sturken.

Those with a 3.83 average were: Robert Anderson, Gertrude Berger, Sharon Gehlken, Candy Hagler, Leigh Jensen, Leslie Marks, Marion Mayrhofer, Kathleen, McElroy, Vivian Morse, Kerry Onderdonk, Michael Sanders, Lucy Steinkamp, Janice Thorn, Jeffery Wagner, Mary Jo White and John Zaloudek.

Three students, Janet Baker, Karen Morrow and Nancy Perlman, received 3.8 grade point average. Susan Scott had a 3.75 average.

Four students received 3.71 as grade average. These were Nanette Baget, Pamela Bugge, Henry Hicks and Peggy Warner.

Those with 3.67 grade points were: Janice Bueler, Carolyn Clark, James Cowen, Carol Cuzner, Robin Dickenson, Deborah Dohm, Joann Dunn, Stephen Freeberg, Ellen Gargiulo, Charleen Hale, Gretchen Henerlau, Gregory Hodges, Barbara Jones, Rodney Kinney, Nancy Jordan, Regina Lowe, Kathleen Lyons, Michael Magill, Gregory Rockwell, Nancy Swartz, Kent Tonnemacher and Mary Wallace.

Four students received 3.6 grade points. They were Sheila Barrett, Peggy Bennison, Karla Shannon and Kathy Wollam.

Students with 3.57 grade point averages were: Susan Dangerfield, Patsey Dunlap, Diana Helpenny, Mary Milbourn, Patricia Ray, Stephen Sexton, Anita Rose Soper, Nancy Ellen Sturken, Mike Wilson and Susan Yates.

Those with 3.5 grade points were: Karen Born, Joyce Campbell, Diana Castaldi, Leslie Catlin, Barbara Chronister, Pieter Den Heijer, Kenneth Donaldson, Robert Edwards, Lauren Elkin, Peggy Eldredge, Donald George, Sharon Heilman, Maureen Heyman, Sheila Hodges, Karl Johansson, Robert Johnson, William Katz, Linda Lahr, Joanne May, Michelle Moody, Teresa Moran, Corinne Ohagen, Carl Rechsteiner, Cheryl Rogers, Michael Roman, Sharon Sanders, Barbara Schrieber, Bonnie Jean Swan, Barbara Wagner and Charles Walker.

Youth Orchestra's Rehearsals Slated

Rehearsals for a performance of the Marin Chamber Orchestra, sponsored by the San Anselmo and San Rafael recreation departments, will be open to youngsters tomorrow and the following Sunday at 2 p.m. in Alexander Hall on the San Francisco Theological Seminary campus in San Anselmo, that city's park and recreation department announced.

The orchestra will present its first concert of the season March 13 at 4 p.m. on the seminary campus.

Jetliner's Pilot Dies After Landing

CHICAGO (UPI)—Capt. Clarence Cobb delicately touched the Braniff jet liner down at O'Hare International Airport yesterday. As he taxied the big plane, loaded with 54 passengers, toward the terminals, he slumped over. Moments later he was dead.

First Officer B. J. Self notified the tower after Cobb, 45, complained of feeling ill and took over the controls.

Bridge Board Allows Aide To Assist

The Golden Gate Bridge board voted 8 to 5 yesterday to allow its chief engineer to do consultant work for the Marin Transit District—but only on a limited basis and on his own time.

Last week directors met as a "committee-of-the-whole" and approved the plan to loan Arthur Jenkins to the transit district. Yesterday, however, several members of the board raised objections to the proposal.

Stephan C. Leonoudakis of San Francisco recalled that the district's attorney, Jerome B. White, had previously warned Jenkins might be involved in a conflict of interest with the transit district.

Leonoudakis offered a substitute motion enabling the district to cooperate with Marin County Transit District in a number of ways, but which would forbid outside employment by Jenkins. It was not passed.

Jenkins agreed that his sideline work might result in certain conflicts of interest on such issues as commuter bus bridge tolls, but said his first loyalty would always be to the bridge authority.

The majority of board members agreed that any mass transportation bus schemes supported by Jenkins could lead to a decrease in the number of private cars passing over the bridge and would, consequently, be an advantage to the bridge authority.

Young Republicans Facing Trouble On Pair Of Fronts

CORONADO (AP)— Republican State Chairman Gaylord Parkinson raised the possibility today of a state GOP investigation of the California Young Republicans.

With the YRs facing the loss of their national charter, Parkinson said the organization provides "the first concrete example" of a possible John Birch Society takeover of a segment of the Republican party.

He said if the group is cleared of charges brought by the National Young Republicans, "the field is still open for an investigation by the State Central Committee."

Parkinson spoke as the State Central Committee opened a weekend meeting.

The chairman of the Young Republican National Federation, Sen. Tom VanSickle of Kansas, recommended yesterday that the California YRs charter be revoked. He called for a hearing on the case April 2.

"If it isn't done to our satisfaction," said Parkinson, "then we reserve the right to take another look at it."

VanSickle wrote the California YR president, Mike Djordjevich of Daly City, that he was seeking revocation of the charter because:

1. California YR membership has dropped drastically.

2. Djordjevich and other new officers "have publicly stated immature and irresponsible views."

3. The state YRs have failed to transfer $4,700 to the national organization — money he said was owed from the 1964 Republican National Convention.

Djordjevich said the national charges were "vague and incomplete." He said they were the result of internal YR politics.

Parkinson reserved comment on the national charges. He talked instead of possible Birch influence in the YRs.

"With evidence before us of three top officers being members of the John Birch Society, we have before us the first concrete example of a conspiratorial effort . . . and if it is proved there is some sort of conspiracy, then I would say there is no place in the California Republican Party for the John Birch Society," Parkinson said yesterday.

Djordjevich has identified three of his officers as Birch Society members. He said they are: Martin Carlson of Ventura, executive vice president; Stanley Kompst of Pleasant Hill, national committeeman; and Norman Mark of Sutter County, treasurer.

He repeated the views that apparently angered the national YRs, saying the United States should get out of the United Nations and the income tax should be abolished.

But he said these views were supported by the 1965 National Young Republican platform.

He denied Parkinson's conspiracy charge and said the three officers who are members of the John Birch Society "hid nothing."

"There are fine, dedicated Americans in the Birch Society and these people who were elected with me are fine, dedicated Americans'," he said.

Three Wyoming Men Survive Plane Crash

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— Three Wyoming men escaped injury when their light plane crashed on takeoff at San Francisco International Airport last night.

They were identified as Reymond Bickel, the pilot; his father, W. E. Bickel, and R. R. Mollring.

Religious, Social Views To Be Told

Members of six religious denominations will discuss basic beliefs and attitudes toward major issues in an eight-week series of public discussions entitled "Modern Religions — Facts and Focus."

Beginning Tuesday from 9-10 p.m. at Temple Rodef Sholom, Santa Venetia, the Marin Jewish Center, Congregation Kol Shofar, Temple Rodef Sholom and the Bureau of Jewish Education will sponsor the course and a course in "Basic Judaism" as part of the second year of the Joint Jewish Studies Institute of Marin.

In "modern religions," prominent clergy will present viewpoints on such tenets as man and God, sin, salvation, Heaven and Hell and conversion. They will discuss their religious position on intermarriage, social action, birth control.

Speakers will be: March 1, Rev. William Burns of St. Anselm's Roman Catholic Church; March 8, Dr. Fred Fisher of Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, Strawberry; March 15, Dr. Darrell Smith, Mormon; March 29, Rev. Karel Botermans of the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Marin in San Rafael; April 12, James Cassen of the Bay Area Ethical Culture Fellowship; April 19, Judaism, speaker to be announced.

For the same eight weeks from 7:45 to 8:45 p.m. Tuesdays a course in "Basic Judaism" will be offered, to present the essentials of Jewish history, religious beliefs and practices. The instructor will be Rabbi Morris Schussheim of Congregation Kol Shofar.

Theologian Explains The Meaning Of Faith

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

What is faith?

Christian theologians have been trying for 20 centuries to formulate an adequate answer to that question.

One of the first attempts was made by the anonymous author of the New Testament's Epistle to the Hebrews. He said that "faith gives substance to our hopes, and makes us certain of realities we do not see."

To Martin Luther, faith was not so much a matter of believing in propositions as of trusting a person. "Faith," he said, "is a lively confidence in the goodness of God."

In our own century, the Scottish theologian, John Baillie described faith as "a primary mode of apprehending reality," which is as "self-authenticating" as the physical senses of sight, touch and hearing.

Latest to undertake the classic task of defining faith is the distinguished English theologian, Austin Farrer, warden of Keble College at Oxford University. His thoughts are contained in a book entitled "Saving Belief."

Dr. Farrer takes issue with the view, very widespread today, that faith is primarily an act of will — a sort of dogged determination to believe things for which we find little or no persuasive evidence.

"Faith is neither an attitude we adopt in looking for an object of conviction, nor an attitude we work up to bolster a conviction already lodged in our minds," he says.

"Faith implies genuine persuasion, and persuasion is not genuine unless it comes from the thing which persuades us. It cannot be got going by stoking up the furnaces of the will."

He also finds inadequate Luther's attempt to equate faith with trustfulness.

"How can an attitude of trustfulness — evidently appropriate to God if He exists—be appropriate to a decision whether He exists or not? We can trust Him if He exists, but we cannot, in the same sense, trust Him to exist."

Dr. Farrar says Faith is an "attitude of mind" which is open and responsive to the evidence of a creator that is writ large and small throughout the universe.

Everything that exists—from the galaxies to our own self-conscious human minds—is persuasive proof — to some — that behind all this there has to be "a supreme creative will. . .an infinite and changeless cause."

"Without the readiness of faith, the evidence of God will not be accepted, or will not convince," says Dr. Farrer. "This is not to say that faith is put in the place of evidence. What convinces us is not our faith, but the evidence; faith is a subjective condition favorable to the reception of the evidence."

He then suggests that faith is the "natural" human response: what really needs explanation is not the existence of faith, but the phenomenon of unfaith which blinds men to the evidence of God.

Dr. Farrer sees an analogy in the psychology of human relationships. Sympathy opens our eyes to aspects of another personality which would be quite invisible to us if we were cynical or suspicious. In the same way, he believes, disbelief may stem from "an ingrained prejudice, a subconscious resolve to count God out, an unacknowledged voluntary blindness."

This does not mean that disbelief is an act of willful wickedness. Just as "some men are so warped by circumstances that they are cynical and mistrustful toward other human beings through no fault of their own. . .so it is true that many men are incapable of faith."

"They can be cured, however," he concludes. "And God will cure them, whether in this life or hereafter."

Pastor's Car Still Working

A Nevada pastor who was given a used car in 1961 by students at Golden Gate Baptist Seminary at Strawberry has put 100,000 miles on the car in his ministerial work.

Rev. LaVern A. Inzer of Winnemucca was given the car, bought by student donations, after he had been fired from his weekday job as a bookkeeper for preaching against houses of prostitution in the city.

Inzer, once a student at the seminary, is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Winnemucca. He is still driving the car.

World Council Tells Viet Nam Peace Plan

All sides involved in the Viet Nam fighting have been urged to take action toward peace by the central committee of the World Council of Churches in annual session in Geneva, Switzerland.

The policy-making body called for a stop in the Viet Nam fighting as "the most effective step" toward negotiation, and outlined a 10-point program designed to bring the combatants to the conference table.

Another cease-fire was advocated with a "cooling off period" adequate to test the possibilities of negotiation, and a "considerably enlarged unit of the International Control Commission to ensure that cease-fire commitments are honored."

The statement also urged all-out efforts to bring the People's Republic of China into the world community of nations.

It further called for a stop to the bombing of the North, and an end to the military infiltration of the South by North Viet Nam.

The United States was urged to announce its commitment to a withdrawal of its troops "phased in accordance with provisions for peace-keeping machinery under international auspices."

The United States also was asked to review its policy of "containment of communism," and communist nations supporting "wars of liberation" were asked to modify their policies.

North and South Viet Nam were called upon to develop greater flexibility in initiating and responding to negotiation proposals.

Both the South Vietnamese government and the National Liberation Front (Viet Cong) should be accorded a place in negotiations.

Missionaries To Tell Of Philippine Work

Mrs. Howard Houston, on furlough from work as an American Baptist missionary in the Philippines, will speak at 6 and 7 p.m. tomorrow at the First Baptist Church of Mill Valley.

The Houstons had served in the Philippines since 1954 where Rev. Houston was field secretary for the mission at Iloilo City. Prior to their Philippine assignment, the Houstons were missionaries working in the Naga hills in northeast India.

JAWBONE OPERATORS—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Chittick supervise activities at the Jawbone where college students can speak their minds. The Jawbone is a coffee house near Pennsylvania State University at State College, Pa. (AP Wirephoto)

Jawbone Encourages Students To Speak

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — They call the place the "Jawbone," maybe because it's an easy name to remember, or perhaps because "jawing" is its main purpose — to encourage students and other visitors to talk freely.

Actually it's a coffee house located in an outworn residence a block off the Pennsylvania State University campus. It was opened three years ago by the Penn State Lutheran Student Assn. Most of the people who go there don't know it is church-affiliated.

The men and women—mostly students and faculty—who frequent the Jawbone may be Protestant, Roman Catholic or Jewish. They may be Moslems or atheists. It makes no difference.

The aim of the student association is to provide a place for informal discourse. And informal it is.

The Jawbone occupies the first floor of the building.

The lighting is by candles stuck in bottles and by well-shaded electric fixtures.

A sizeable hamburger grill in one corner of the former parlor goes full tilt. A hood and small exhaust fan fight a losing battle with clouds of smoke from the grill.

Visitors sit around tables sipping coffee, tea or soft drinks and eating sandwiches and snacks, which are sold on a donation basis. The menu suggests the amount of contribution for various items and cautions: "Only your honesty shall keep us open!" There are seats for about 100 persons.

All the help are volunteers, except the man at the hamburger grill. The big nights are Friday and Saturday from 8 to midnight. This year Wednesday night sessions were added to encourage faculty members to attend.

There is no entertainment Wednesdays and the grill is closed. On weekends, some entertainment is scheduled, like folk-singing, poetry, satire, drama, readings or speakers. Entertainment is limited to two 20-minute periods so as not to cut down on the conversation.

Anyone is welcome to use the "open microphone" anytime to air his views. There also are displays of student art and sculpture, which can be purchased.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Chittick supervise the Jawbone, operating on the theory that what governs least governs best. Chittick has a year to go at the Lutheran School of Theology in Philadelphia and is serving his internship with the campus ministry staff.

Asked how the coffee house ties in with religion or a church program, Chittick said he felt the answer was that many young persons have found conventional church programs lack some things people need. The Jawbone is an attempt to supply part of that need through providing a place where they can speak out.

Presbyterian Denounces Merger Plan

NEW YORK—A recent proposal to merge four Protestant denominations, offered by Eugene Carson Blake before he was elected president of the World Council of Churches, has been denounced by a fellow Presbyterian who said the plan invited Christians to "form an enlarged country club for the protection of special interests."

Dr. Marcus Barth of the University of Chicago Divinity School, took issue with Dr. Blake's proposal for a union of Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians and the U. S. Church of Christ (which includes Congregationalists), reported an article in Redbook Magazine.

"The proposal," Dr. Barth said, "invites Christians in the U. S. to form a club or trust of the well-established, respectable, English-extraction denominations at the expense of union with the least of Christ's brethren, be they Christian or not. A union that does not embrace brethren of the left wing of the Reformation and by those churches whose existence is caused by, or reflects, the dreadful racial segregation of present-day America is not a worthy union."

Ecumenical "dialogue" is now going on among more than 30 churches or groups of churches.

Anti-Communist To Speak On Dead God Idea

Rev. Paul C. R. Peterson, formerly pastor of the First Congregational Church in San Rafael, will speak on "Is God Really Dead" at 7:45 p.m. Monday at the Civic Center.

Rev. Peterson is director of Awake America, a radio and pamphlet crusade against communism. He founded the organization in 1963 when he "became concerned about the menace of communism and the apparent indifference of the churches.

"I shared the same indifference for many years. When I graduated from UCLA I was a pacifist, a liberal and my sympathies were with socialism," Rev. Peterson said. Today he accepts the Bible "as the infallible word of God."

Marin Central Church of Mill Valley is sponsoring his talk.

Sermons Scheduled At Baptist School

Rev. C. Roy Angell will give a series of sermons at Golden Gate Baptist Seminary at Strawberry beginning at 9:50 a.m. Tuesday through Friday.

Churches Aiming For Talk, Drama

A "Theater for Dialogue" is being formed by several Marin churches, its purpose being to present plays that will create a sense of dialogue between actors and audience.

The concept is to encourage discussion, after each performance, of values expressed in the plays, said Rev. James E. Symons, pastor of St. Andrews United Presbyterian Church, Marin City.

"This dialogue will serve as a stimulus for the personal expression of relationships in an age of impersonal communication," he added.

A general meeting will be held by the theater at 8 p.m. Monday at the Marin City church with auditions for two one-act plays, "The Public Eye" and "The Private Ear" by Peter Shaffer, to follow. Auditions will be held also at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the church.

Actors and technicians are needed, Reverend Symons said, explaining that the theater is not just for church members. Tom Leith of San Anselmo has been named production director. The theater has the backing of Rev. Karel Botermans, pastor of the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Marin, San Rafael, and Symons.

Further information may be obtained from Neill Whitman of 123 Terrace Avenue, Kentfield.

Missionary Family Prepares Trimaran For Sailing Seas

Missionary Joseph Conmack, 55, his wife, Irene, and their 6-year-old daughter, Esther, plan to weigh anchor next month for the South Seas to spread the Word of God, using their trimaran as a "floating church."

Conmack, a Seventh-Day Adventist, has his craft, Carol-Lee-Esther, tied up at Clipper Yacht Harbor in Sausalito, where he is busy loading gospel literature in plastic bags and food and water for the voyage.

Still needed, according to the missionary, is a "non-smoking, teetotaling, experienced navigator-sailor."

Conmack did much of the construction of the Carol-Lee-Esther himself in Stockton. The ship has 1,200 feet of sail and a Diesel engine. Mrs. Conmack, a former teacher, plans to tutor her daughter on the voyage, which is planned to last seven years.

Central Church Back In Mill Valley

Members of Marin Central Church will continue meeting at 2:30 p.m., Sunday, at Scout Hall, 177 East Blithedale Avenue, Mill Valley.

The congregation had planned to rent space Sunday afternoons at Lucas Valley Community Church but use of a room conflicted with preparation for the weekday nursery school, a Central Church member explained.

MINISTER'S IDEA FOR AVOIDING FLU

BURBANK (AP)—The Rev. L. A. Failing put this recipe for halting influenza in his weekly bulletin to members of the Lutheran Memorial church:

"Avoid crowds — Attend church."

Missionary Council To Conduct Service

The Women's Missionary Council will conduct the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at San Rafael Assembly of God Church.

The theme of the program, "Reach Out", will be presented by song, in pantomine and by speakers.

Cases Imperil Welfare Job

"The future of the church-related welfare agency well may be at stake in a series of court cases now in litigation," it is reported in a recent issue of "Together" magazine.

Local authorities in six states have initiated actions to cancel tax exemptions of privately operated homes for the aged.

"Focal point of the debate now going on is the legal definition of the word 'charity.'" Some tax officials argue that most homes are not truly charitable because residents pay for their services — and in some cases pay a large admitting fee.

Such a definition is too narrow, attorneys for the homes counter. "Church welfare leaders believe 'charity' encompasses a ministry to the whole person, regardless of his financial condition," the article says.

Rev. Howard W. Washburn, Methodist Board of Hospitals and Homes consultant on services to the aging, said that "taxing homes for the aged soon could lead to taxation of all privately operated welfare institutions, including hospitals and children's homes, the Methodist magazine reports.

Centennial

The hundredth anniversary of the Christian Science organization will be observed by church members this year. The centennial stems from events in 1866 when Mary Baker Eddy began her religious movement.

U.S. Pays Off First Victims Of H-Test

RONGELAP, Marshall Islands (UPI) —The United States government has run into some difficulty in closing a chapter of history it would like to forget.

A government mission paid nearly $1 million this week to 129 residents of this tiny island who were dusted with fallout from an H-bomb nearly 12 years ago.

U.S. Trust Territory Atty. Gen. Robert K. Shoecraft, who headed the mission, said yesterday there was only one person left to be paid.

He said the former resident of Rongelap is now living on remote Ebon Island, which can only be reached by boat. The payment will be made as soon as possible, Shoecraft said.

The H-bomb was exploded March 1, 1954 near Bikini, 100 miles away. Scientists miscalculated and the device was 50 per cent more powerful than expected.

The shot, set off on a tiny man-made island dredged up for the purpose, blasted millions of tons of water and pulverized coral miles into the air. The island vanished in the explosion.

The intensively radioactive dust contaminated a 7,000 square mile area and visited radiation sickness in varying degrees on 23 Japanese fishermen, the Marshall Islanders, and some U.S. servicemen. One Japanese died—the world's first victim of the hydrogen age.

Shoecraft and his party began to make payments Thursday to 124 persons or their heirs.

He said "there was little evidence of any desire to spend the principal and no person took more than $500 in cash."

WARDING OFF THE FLU

Fred Nunnally, Salinas High School freshman, yesterday tried out his own answer to the influenza outbreak that is sweeping California and elsewhere in the nation. Fred figures a regular, military-style gas mask is worth a try, with one out of four of his classmates absent with the bug. His classmate, Galen Jung, is stoically taking his chances without protection. (UPI Telephoto)

New Radar Due For Airline Use

NEW YORK (UPI) —The Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) yesterday outlined plans for the use starting this fall of the first radar system to pinpoint the altitude of planes.

Robert W. Martin, chief of the FAA's Air Traffic Division for the New York region, said the key feature of the system is the transponder, a special electronic device installed in planes to provide altitude figures for ground controllers.

Constant plane position reports, Martin said, are run through a computer and then appear on the face of a radarscope in the form of written letters and numbers. These figures identify the airplane, its track and altitude.

Retired Oil Executive, Wife Die In Air Crash

RED BLUFF (AP) — Ice formed on the wings of a troubled airplane yesterday and the craft crashed, killing a retired Pasadena oil executive and his wife.

William W. Valentine, 60, had radioed the Red Bluff control tower that his aircraft had a "partial power failure." The airplane turned and was on an approach to the airport when it crashed and burned fiercely in a wheat field.

The aircraft was three miles short of the airport. Valentine was thrown about 25 feet from the wreckage. His wife, Mary Stringfellow Valentine, was trapped in the flames.

Witnesses said the family's dog, a purebred McNab shepherd named George, jumped from the wreckage and circled the burning craft several times. He then ran away.

The Valentines, who have homes in Pasadena and Montague, a farm town near Yreka, flew frequently between the two points. Valentine had filed a flight plan at Montague indicating his destination was Long Beach.

Valentine, who had retired from the board of directors at Union Oil Co. in 1947, had 21 years flying experience and was licensed for instrument flight. The family's plane was an Aero Commander, a fairly large plane capable of seating six people.

Valentine radioed that the plane had lost one of its two engines. The airport said the plane apparently lost altitude and the wings iced up in humid air, causing the crash.

Valentine's son, William Jr., posted a reward for the lost dog, whose collar tag is stamped "Valentine."

Senator Demands Ethical Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate Ethics committee announced Friday it would consider charges against Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., that he carried out assignments for a registered agent of West Germany.

Dodd had asked the committee to examine allegations made against him by syndicated columnists Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson. He also wrote FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover asking the FBI to investigate the charges in his alleged relationship with Julius Klein, a public relations man and registered foreign agent.

Dodd said he asked for the two investigations "because I have absolutely nothing to conceal in this matter."

No date was set for the Senate hearings.

Japan To Try Cut-Rate Satellite

TOKYO (UPI) —Japan will launch an earth satellite March 26 in an attempt to become the fourth nation to enter the space race.

If the Japanese satellite is successfully put into space, it will be the most inexpensive ever launched.

Dr. Noboru Takagi, director of the Tokyo University Aeronautics and Space Research Institute, said the Japanese will try to put a globe-shaped titanium satellite about 1.4 feet in diameter in orbit along a course close to that of France's A1 satellite.

At a total expense of about $277,000, the satellite will cost only a tiny fraction of the millions the United States, Russia and France each spent to enter the space race.

Jail Escape Try A Bit Too Obvious

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Albert R. DeBold 23, of Weymouth, Mass., didn't get very far in his attempt to escape from the Hartford Jail.

DeBold was spotted right away yesterday as he started to drive off in a pink Cadillac owned by one of the guards.

Helen Bottel

Nationally syndicated columnist who offers mature advice on personal problems. Good-humored, never flippant . . . and obviously sincere.

ADVICE

with good humor
For adults • For teenagers

"Helen Help Us"

by
Helen Bottel

STARTS MON. FEB. 28 ★ I-J WOMEN'S PAGES

TWO COLUMNS IN ONE
- "Helen Help Us" 3 days per week for adults
- "Youth Asked For It" 3 days per week for teenagers

Every week day • On alternate days Helen Bottel deals with adult and teenage problems.

This new I-J feature is unlike any "advice" column you perhaps have ever read. It is good-humored but mature. It is never flippant. As a writer, Helen Bottel is both sensitive and realistic . . . and her concern for those whose problems she discusses is inherent in her evaluations and answers. Look for this interesting new feature starting February 28 . . . in the I-J.

Deals with adult problems . . . with the growing needs of young men and women

ATTENTION, PLEASE!

Do you want an organ in your home and the FUN it can give your ENTIRE family?
BUT
1. Don't want the inconvenience of going to a studio to learn to play?
2. Don't have the hours or time for private instruction in your home?
3. Cost of instruction too much for you or entire family when free lessons are over?

THEN WAIT NO LONGER
If any of these reasons are holding your musical enjoyment in check Pacific Organ & Piano's EXCLUSIVE new "FAMILY-FUN PROGRAM" is designed for you and all of your family. Children of all ages, mother & dad, grandmother & grandfather all CAN and WILL play the organ using Pacific's "FAMILY FUN PROGRAM."
Come in and see us now and find a lifetime of musical pleasure at your finger tips.

LOOK
We just listed this sensational San Rafael buy—$26,500 value. But—owner wants immediate sale so is offering this terrific 3 bedroom, 1½ bath home in lovely area between San Rafael and San Anselmo for only $22,500. Patio, spacious rooms—so attractive. However, there is a problem! Drainage has caused some foundation work to be needed. Contractor's estimate is $2,000. Take it as is and fix it yourself or buy and have it done. A REAL SAVING EITHER WAY. Exclusive $22,500.

ONE OF A KIND
Owner leaving and offers this attractive San Anselmo home. In a quiet neighborhood in a sheltered court, this makes for privacy and comfort. 3 bedrooms, double garage, excellent condition. Best buy in the area and priced to sell! $26,300

A VIEW EXCELLENTE
Plus a brand new spacious home near choice Racquet Club (tennis & swimming), built to sell for $5,000 over asking price. Lovely view! Check the quality: 4 bedrooms, dining room, rumpus room, breakfast room, easy level entrance. It's outstanding and brand new. $43,750.

LAZY GARDENERS
This is your dream home. Enjoy the landscaping—all the hard work is done for you. (Set out with trees, lawns, paths, and flowers). All it needs is your personalized touch. A home of ALL large rooms. Large formal dining room, larger than usual living room and 2 baths. Complete privacy! (Eves ph. 453-7003). $46,500.

LEAVING COUNTRY
So it's reduced $10,000. A water view that people travel the world over to compare. In fact, this owner is going to New Zealand and is forced to sell his dream home. And the bonus is a fine STUDIO. Redwood grove, sunny patio, easy commute location and a top quality home with 2 bedrooms, dining, 2½ bathrooms and studio apartment. Eves. ph. 388-8066). $48,500.

STUPENDOUS
Advertised for the first time. A beautiful home in every detail—quality for the most discriminating. We need a whole page to tell you about this. Why don't you call for an appointment! A few statistics though. 4 bedrooms, formal dining room, brand new big family room, luxury master bedroom suite, 3 baths and 3 fireplaces. Rooms arranged to give parents complete privacy. Pool site all ready. Fabulous view! Close to town. Owner leaving, you see—we just can't be brief—there's LOTS MORE. Exclusive (Eves ph. 454-7732). $76,750.

SMALL WONDER
a tight-running small home that is every bit as practical and charming as our little friend the Volkswagen (from whose advertisement weer—borrow our headline). Up in the hills on a view lot, just a few years old and in better than new condition, this is what a one bedroom home should be: just enough space to lighten your spirits and not so much that you become a slave to maintenance. Charming living room with raised hearth fireplace, view windows onto sunny deck; built-in kitchen, large paneled bedroom with beamed ceilings. Covered carport for your Volkswagen. Will also accommodate the Cadillac you buy with the money you save by buying this at a low $22,000!

Consider The Armadillo

who must carry his home on his back. Then consider this home so conveniently located and so well built that you can come and go and leave it right where it is, and so moderately priced that it'll never be a burden to you. Enough parables; down to the facts: 3-year-old California contemporary-styled 3-bedroom, 2-bath on a big lot in a quiet residential area. 2-car covered parking, big storage and laundry and workshop area, brick fireplace, hardwood floors, built-in kitchen, sliding glass to protective patio. An Armadillo would jump at this at $28,500, if he could!

Drake Celebrates Mar in Cage Championship

THIRD SECTION Sat., Feb. 26, 1966 21

By RALPH CHATOIAN

"I said a year ago we would win it and we did," said a happy Carl "Red" Brown after his Drake High School basketball players had won themselves the Marin Athletic League championship.

The Pirates left no doubt of their championship class last night, rolling over the Marin Catholic Wildcats 60-32 in the Drake gym.

And Brown, the veteran coach of the Bucs, took the championship relatively in stride. He was not going to settle for anything less than the top. He had predicted a championship at the close of last season, and repeated his forecast before the 1965-66 season got underway.

The Wildcats made a game of it for the first quarter of last night's contest, leading the Pirates 13-10. Then Drake, realizing the game was for all the marbles, exploded in the second stanza for 21 points and walked off the court at intermission with a 31-19 lead.

The second half was a complete rout, the Pirates scoring 29 points to only 13 for the Wildcats, who made only 3 of 22 shots from the floor in the entire second half.

Five times the lead changed hands in the first quarter, the Pirates appearing tight and tensed. Then came the second period and Drake couldn't be stopped. Will Curley, Drake's fine guard who was elected team captain before the game, scored the basket that put Drake in front 14-13 early in the second quarter. It was a short jumper behind a screen set up by Jerry Sprout.

Then before the half ended, Sprout scored a couple of buckets of his own, Curley hit two more and big Bob Tobin three, a 20-footer, one underneath after a fine pass from Curley, and the third on a pretty little hook shot from five feet out.

One by one, Brown pulled his starters in the fourth quarter and as each one trotted to the bench, the screaming Drake students gave him a standing ovation. With still 3:46 left in the game, the last starter, Curley, was pulled from the court and the cheers for him were just a little louder. His cheers were well deserved, as he played quite a game as floor leader.

Curley and Tobin were the big point makers for Drake, big (6-5) Bob scoring 18 points and Will, 15. Tobin has just about every shot in the book, including a fall-away jumper which he hit in the third quarter. Curley made 5 of 12 shots from the floor and 5 of 6 from the free throw line. And his passing led to many more points.

Drake's other backcourt man, Bill Ingram, scored 8 points and made some good steals. He played a good floor game, in the face of four fouls against him as early as the third quarter.

Ches Bornia with 8 points and Pat Waltz with 7 led the Marin Catholic scoring. The cold Wildcats made only 11 of 45 shots from the floor (23 per cent) to Drake's 22 of 65 (34 per cent). From the free throw line, Drake made 16 of 28 (57 per cent) and Marin Catholic 10 of 26 (39 per cent).

Led by Tobin's 10, Drake controlled the rebounding, 32 to 23.

Drake completed the league slate with a 10-2 record, and was 20-4 over-all, including a 13-1 mark on its own court.

Brown, wanting his cagers to get a taste of some rough and tough competition before the Berkeley Tournament of Champions, has scheduled a scrimmage against College of Marin next Monday afternoon in Kentfield.

Marin Catholic	13	6	5	8—32
Drake	10	21	10	19—60

Marin Catholic scoring: Ches Bornia, 4-0-8; Pat Waltz, 3-1-7; Brian Grove, 2-0-4; Jim Ingrassia, 1-1-3; Mike Lasater, 0-2-2; Shean McCarthy, 0-2-2; Bob Lombardi, 1-0-2; Paul McCarthy, 0-2-2; Rick Rafael, 0-1-1; Paul Vickers, 0-1-1. Totals: 11-10—32.

Drake scoring: Bob Tobin, 7-4-18; Will Curley, 5-5-15; Bill Ingram, 3-2-8; Jerry Sprout, 2-3-7; Don Alvarado, 2-0-4; Pete Forni, 2-0-4; Dan Busch, 0-2-2; Carl Gonser, 1-0-2. Totals: 22-16—60.

Total fouls: Marin Catholic 19, Drake 20.

Fouled out: Marin Catholic, Bornia.

Officials: Wes Mathews, Joe Wardlaw.

GO, TEAM GO—Drake cheerleaders Susan Travis and Brad Kritsky (kneeling) and Diana Gibbs and Rich Cohen led cheering section during title-clinching game last night.

VICTORY RIDE—Drake Coach Carl Brown got traditional victory ride on shoulders of players—bespectacled team captain Will Curley, Phil Davis (15) and Jerry Sprout (35).

LOUD AND CLEAR—Songs and yells were loud and clear from Drake rooting section as their beloved Pirates won the Marin Athletic League basketball championship.

JIM MURRAY

The Greatest Cager Of All

Throughout history, whenever civilization as we know it was threatened, someone has come along to save it.

I mean, there was Horatius at the bridge. Washington was at Valley Forge. Wellington was at Waterloo. Grant took Richmond. Sergeant York took care of the Kaiser, and Churchill, Hitler.

The world of sports is no exception. Boxing almost perished with Jack Johnson, who had an unfortunate habit of beating up white people until along came Dempsey. Baseball had a dreadful scandal until there appeared Judge Landis and Babe Ruth. Football was almost outlawed until along came Knute Rockne.

BUT NOWHERE, at no time, did any individual do more to rescue a game from oblivion than William Felton Russell, a sixth-generation American, a highly proper Bostonian, and the best artisan the game of basketball has ever seen.

If it weren't for W. F. Russell, the game of basketball would right now be being slowly digested by Wilton Chamberlain, a public monument somewhere between Mt. Rushmore and the Empire State Building.

WILT CHAMBERLAIN'S exploits are all in the record book. Over 30 times he has scored 60 or more points a game. He scored 178 points in two games once.

He soars 7 feet 2 inches into the stratosphere. He weighs more than some small elephants. He is agile, supple, athletic. He would long since have turned the game of basketball into low comedy — if it weren't for Russell.

RUSSELL TURNS the game of defense into a high art. I have to think the greatest feat in all the history of sports is his holding Wilt Chamberlain to a paltry 14 points in one game this season. This is a turn of events not to be discredited. Chamberlain could score 14 points from a locked dressing room on an average night. To be kept away from the basket by a man 4 inches shorter and 70 pounds lighter has to rank with holding Babe Ruth to four straight pop-ups, flattening Dempsey in one round or getting three homers off Koufax.

RUSSELL IS a savior in the grand tradition of Ruth, Landis, Joan of Arc or that Dutch kid who put his finger in the dike. Without him, basketball would just be a playground game. Skins against the shirts or an exhibition series.

RUSSELL'S SKILLS are as recondite as a plumber's. They don't show in the record book. They show in the scorebook. His is the most extraordinary history of achievement in all of athletics. He has never—never—played on a losing team. Wherever Bill Russell showed up in sneakers and gym suit, his team was a winner. From McClymonds High, to San Francisco U., to the Boston Celts, the only time a team of his failed to win a national championship was when he was in the hospital.

THERE IS a belt manufacturer who annually takes it upon himself to identify the world's sports champion for the year. There is a national magazine which annually nominates a "sportsman-of-the-year."

NEITHER ONE of them has ever had a basketball player in the top 10. They run heavily to golfers and pitchers. They err. No one in the whole fabric of athletics dominates his event the way Bill Russell does. He is the most extraordinary athlete of his generation. If you don't think so, just ask Wilt Chamberlain, who knows what Napoleon felt like at Waterloo, Hitler at the bunker, and Dempsey at the Tunney fight.

Tars Lose, Win In Tournament

College of Marin Tars split their two games in the Chabot College Invitational Baseball Tournament at Hayward yesterday, losing the opener 13-2 to Laney J.C. of Oakland and beating host Chabot 1-0 in a rain-abbreviated four-inning nightcap in which Tar pitcher Bill Clark had a no-hitter going.

Today's tournament finals were postponed until a later date due to wet grounds.

10 Down, 2 To Go: Tars Clinch Title!

College of Marin's powerful basketball team clinched a tie for the Golden Valley Conference championship last night and can lock up sole ownership tonight.

When the Tars whipped Siskiyous 94-78 last night in Kentfield, it put them a step closer to becoming the first team to ever go through the Golden Valley Conference undefeated. They are now 10-0.

Santa Rosa J.C. defeated Yuba 86-63 last night to retain a slim mathematical chance of tying Marin for the title.

Tonight at 8 o'clock, Marin hosts Shasta and a triumph will clinch the championship. In a schedule change, the Tars wind up their regular season play next Wednesday in Napa. The game had originally been scheduled for next Friday, but Riemcke is expecting to be challenged for the right to go to the state tournament and wants a breather before that happens.

Marin led throughout the game last night but Siskiyous didn't give up easy. At halftime, Marin was in front 51-43.

With 13:10 left in the game, Siskiyou came up to three points from Marin, 59-56. With only 4:30 left, it was Marin 79 and Siskiyous 72. But a stout zone defense held off the Eagles and Marin ran off with the game.

Tar forward Rod Monti led all scorers with 25 points, but three other Mariners hit for double figures. Jim Halm had 19, Fred Arnold 18 and Don Hanson, a guard, chipped in with 14. Bob Corson, No. 3 scorer in the conference, led the Eagles with 21 points, and also pulled down 17 rebounds.

For Marin, Halm had 13 rebounds, Arnold 12 and Monti 11. Halm and Arnold, the Tars' 6-7 duo, fouled out in the fourth quarter but it was too late for the Eagles to do anything.

Marin made 34 of 73 shots from the field for 46 per cent, and Siskiyous went 28 of 73 for 38 per cent. From the free throw line the Eagles were fantastic, making 22 of 23, missing just one charity toss in the first half. Marin made 26 of 42 free throws.

Siskiyous scorers: Bill Newlun, 3-5-11; Bill Duchi, 4-0-8; Joe Dickson, 2-2-6; Jim Griffin, 1-5-7; Jerry Bates, 1-0-2; Joe Blevins, 6-2-14; Ron Quigley, 4-1-9; Bob Corson, 7-7-21. Totals: 28-22—78.

College of Marin scorers: Fred Arnold, 7-4-18; Rod Monti, 10-5-25; Jim Halm, 6-7-19; Lorry Galassi, 1-4-6; Don Hanson, 7-0-14; Bill Pandiani, 0-1-1; Rick Henika, 1-0-2; Larry Wolfe, 2-4-8; Bill Brody, 0-1-1. Totals: 34-26—94.

Two Mariners Win Wrestling Titles

Two College of Marin athletes won championships yesterday and two more earned runner-up honors in the Golden Valley Conference Wrestling Tournament held at Kentfield.

Marin sophomore Fred Fellows, a 225-pound football player from Mill Valley, captured the heavyweight title by winning all three of his matches and freshman Gary Arthur won the 152-pound championship by winning all four of his matches.

Both winners are graduates of Tamalpais High School.

Runners-up for Marin were freshman Brian Whitney in the 137-pound class and sophomore Ralph Terry in the 160-pound division. Whitney is a Novato High graduate and Terry a Tam alumnus, each winning two of three matches yesterday.

All four Marin grapplers thus became eligible to compete in the North Coast Section Junior College Championships at Chabot College in Hayward on March 5. There the winners and runners-up in each division will qualify for the state finals at Orange Coast College later next month.

In yesterday's team competition at the conference meet Sierra College captured the title with 86 points, followed in order by Yuba with 77, Marin 58, Santa Rosa 54, Shasta 43, and Napa 5.

Sixty-three individuals participated in the day-long event.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Friday's Sports In Brief By The Associated Press

GOLF

DURBAN, South Africa — Jack Nicklaus has pulled within two strokes of South Africa's Gary Player at the two-thirds mark of their six-round, 108-hole golfing tour of South Africa.

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Skee Riegel, making his first start in the $35,000 PGA Seniors golf tournament, fired a five-under-par 67 and took the first round lead.

MANILA — Celestino Tugot of the Philippines shot a 72-for a 36-hole total of 142 and led the Philippine Open by one stroke at the half way point.

TENNIS

TAMPA, Fla. — Top-Ranked Cliff Drysdale smashed his way into the semifinals of the Dixie International Tennis Tournament with a 6-0, 7-5 victory over Juan Gisbert of Spain.

GENERAL

CHICAGO — Multi-millionaire James D. Norris, business tycoon, co-owner of the Chicago Black Hawks hockey team, owner of the Spring Hill Farms racing stable, and promoter-owner of the now-defunct International Boxing Club, died early yesterday from a heart condition which had first developed a decade ago.

COLORADO GIRL NEARS WORLD SKATING TITLE

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — Brown-haired Peggy Fleming, 17, of Colorado Springs, Colo., made a firm bid today for the world title in figure skating, leaving behind last year's champion, Petra Burka of Canada.

At the end of the compulsory figures program counting 60 per cent toward victory, Miss Fleming had 1,233.0 points for first place among 20 women contestants.

Blushing with excitement, Miss Fleming said the most tiresome and difficult part of the program will come tomorrow in the free skating competition.

But free skating counts only 40 per cent toward the title and barring an unforseen complication, Miss Fleming should have no trouble winning the gold medal.

ANOTHER CARE PACKAGE FROM JAPAN

Giants Sign Ambidextrous Hurler

The San Francisco Giants, first American major league team ever to field a Japanese player, have sent a try-out contract to a 20-year-old Japanese hurler who pitches with either hand.

The ambidextrous wonder is Shozo Yoshinari, due to appear in the Giants' minor league training camp at Casa Grande, Ariz., by March 20.

The Giants signed three Japanese baseball players in 1964, but only one of them stuck — Masanori Murakami. The left-handed Murakami became their top southpaw reliever last season, but after an international contract dispute with the Nankai Hawks returned to Japan to pitch there this year.

"We have sent a Fresno contract to Yoshinari to sign," said Jack Schwarz, secretary of the Giants' minor league farm system. "He is paying his own way over."

Murakami also started for Fresno of the Class A California League. And scout Cappy Harada discovered both.

Schwarz added that there would be no repeat of the Murakami incident over Yoshinari.

"This time we have an ironclad release from the Tokyo Giants," Schwarz declared. "Yoshinari clearly is a free agent."

Yoshinari, a 6-foot, 180-pounder, was signed to a bonus contract in 1964 by the Tokyo squad.

"I saw him pitch his Akita High School team to the Japanese National Championships, winning three games in three starts in the National tournament finals in 1964," Harada said.

"He pitched all three of those games right handed. I saw him again that same year, pitching left handed in an exhibition game for the Tokyo Giants."

Yoshinari has excellent control, keeps the ball low and throws good sliders and curves with either hand, Harada said, although the youngster does appear to get better breaking pitches right handed.

Seniors Vs. Faculty

Tonight's basketball game between the seniors and faculty of San Rafael High School will start at 8 o'clock.

Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for student body card holders.

San Rafael Jayvees Clout Novato, 51-35

Mike Donahoo scored 16 points—the margin of victory—in San Rafael's 51-35 win over Novato last night in their junior varsity basketball game, giving San Rafael a 9-3 final record against Marin opposition.

GOLDEN GATE MEET

Clarke Shatters Two-Mile Record

By JACK STEVENSON

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Australia's Ron Clarke, who flies thousands of miles to run a few, lived up to a prediction he wished he hadn't made and today owns his eighth world record.

Leading from wire to wire in the Golden Gate Invitational Meet at the Cow Palace last night, Clarke smashed the world two-mile indoor standard with a clocking of 8 minutes, 28.8 seconds.

"I was sorry I predicted a record because it put a great deal of pressure on me to do it," Clarke admitted. "When the time after three-quarters of a mile was almost 3:11, I didn't think I would make it."

"I never looked behind me the entire race. I thought it was Gerry Lindgren close on me."

It was, however, 20-year-old Tracy Smith from the Pasadena Athletic Assn., who dogged Clarke's heels as he broke Jim Beatty's 1953 world record of 8:30.8.

"I think," added Clarke, "that this will be my last two mile race indoors. I find it very hard to get across (the ocean)."

Clarke's best previous two mile indoors was 8:34.8 on these same Cow Palace boards a year ago.

He had to better that to beat the doggedly determined Smith, who ran 8:32.4, nearly 10 seconds faster than his previous best.

Lindgren, the Washington State freshman, expected to give the Aussie his toughest competition, finished third in 8:48.2 with Doug Brown of Montana fourth at 8:57.4.

A crowd of 9,300 roared encouragement to Clarke in his record try and he acknowledged the cheering when he said, "You all own part of this record."

Fractional times were 61.7 seconds for the first quarter mile; 2:05.6; 3:10.2; 4:13.8; 5:18.1; 6:42.6, and 7:27.7.

Clarke ran 1½ seconds behind Beatty's record pace after three quarters of a mile, but ahead of it after a mile and a quarter.

Illinois Expected To Cancel Clay-Terrell Title Go

By JERRY LISKA

CHICAGO (AP) — Unbending Cassius Clay and the attorney general of Illinois today appeared to have killed Clay's scheduled heavyweight title match with Ernie Terrell here March 29 and probably chased it elsewhere.

Official cancellation of the bout was expected Monday when the Illinois Athletic Commission was scheduled to meet again.

A spokesman for Main Bouts, Inc., owning closed circuit television rights to the virtually-cancelled Chicago match, said three cities were receptive to taking over the bout.

The MBI spokesman, Bob Aaron, declined to identify the possible sites of a bout ahead of Clay's likely April induction into the Army, but a Pittsburgh promoter said he was offered the match by Clay interests.

In an incredible series of events yesterday, the scheduled Clay-Terrell bout in Chicago was blown skyhigh when:

1—Clay testily refused to apologize before the Illinois State Athletic Commission for his "unpatriotic remarks" in an outburst eight days ago when his Louisville, Ky., Draft Board reclassified him 1-A.

2—The three-member boxing commission hastily recessed until Monday after Clay's assertion that he didn't come from his Miami training camp to "make a showdown plea or apologize the way the press said I would."

3—Atty. Gen. William G. Clark minutes later declared the proposed fight was illegal anyway for violations of the Illinois boxing code.

Clay's performance at the somewhat weird commission meeting was typical of the unpredictable 24-year-old undefeated champion.

Instead of an expected contrite apology for his anti-draft blast in which he said that as a Black Muslim he wanted no part of the Viet Nam war, Clay in effect blamed the press for his adverse publicity.

"If I got any apologizing to do, I'll do it to government officials, the draft board and others," Clay blurted to the amazement of the commission which reportedly would have reaffirmed the fight if Clay was properly apologetic.

But equally strange was the fact the commission called the meeting to order some 40 minutes after the attorney general had told the group in closed session to inform the bout principals the fight was illegal.

Clark said the license of National Sports Promotions, Inc., carried the name of two individuals and under the Illinois Exhibition Act, a corporation must be represented by at least 50 persons.

Clark also added that both Clay and Terrell failed to meet compliance of the Illinois Boxing Act.

The later charge was not specified by Clark, but the attorney general pointed out that the Clay-Terrell contract violations came under a section barring licenses to fighters except to those of "good and stable moral character . . . not likely to engage in acts detrimental to the public."

What would have happened if the commission re-affirmed the fight was not explained by the attorney general, who commented, "I'll stand on my opinion offered to the commission."

Immediately after the abrupt "recess" the commission was closeted with co-promoter Ben Bentley, his attorney, Frank (Spike) McAdams, and one of Clay's attorneys, Chauncey Eskridge.

Loud protestations were heard from Bentley behind closed doors, but he emerged from the session with the comment:

"Everything still is status quo, they (the commission) reached no decision.

Bentley reported he and his promoting partner, Irvin Schoenwald — who was confined to a hospital with a virus condition — already had 14,800 tickets printed for the proposed bout at the International Amphitheater and had advanced Terrell $5,000 for training expenses.

The commission meeting was lively if shortlived.

Chairman Joe Triner, 77, started out on the wrong foot, as far as Clay was concerned, by addressing him as "Cassius."

Clay retorted, as he did several times later, "the name is Muhammad Ali" — his Black Muslim appellation.

Clay's attorney, Edward Jacko, kept coaching the champ and prompted him to say: "I didn't intend to hurt anyone in Viet Nam or their children."

But generally, Clay insisted that his only mistake in his outburst last Friday was making it to the press.

"I came here because certain people advised me, and certain people would be hurt financially over what I said and you people — the commission — were put on the spot before your governor and other authorities."

Clay was scheduled to attend a Black Muslim convention here today and Sunday.

Runner-Up Tamites Cop Season Finale

A RED HOT FINISH BY S. R. BULLDOGS

San Rafael High School's Bulldogs, who started their Marin Athletic League basketball season on a losing note, last night ended it on a winning one, defeating the visiting Novato Hornets with surprising ease.

The final tally was 48-30.

That means the Bulldogs won four of their last five games, with the loss coming at the hands of Drake High's Pirates in a thriller 57-56—and the Pirates are the MCAL champs!

Though the San Rafael cagers had their troubles in the first half of MCAL play (they were dumped by the Hornets 68-44 in the first round) they were obviously an improved outfit in the second half of the schedule.

Last night, for example, Coach Diaz' cagers took command of the game in the first period and coasted to victory over the Novato quint, a team that was expected to be right in the thick of battle this year.

With Joe Cunningham and Jeff Allen leading the way, the San Rafael boys jumped out to a 13-8 lead at the end of the first period and led 27-15 at half.

Cunningham and Allen were the game's top scorers with 13 points each, and Allen's total included 6 of 8 attempts from the field. Bill Tetu chipped in with 7 points for the winners and snared 11 defensive rebounds, while Roger Widmer had 5 points and 6 assists. Allen also had 11 rebounds and Cunningham had 4 assists.

The Hornets mustered just 25 per cent from the field (13X52) while San Rafael registered 35 per cent from the floor (18X53). From the free throw line it was San Rafael 71 per cent (12X17) and 40 per cent for the visitors (4X10).

Al Parsons scored 10 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to pace the Hornet offense. Tom Owens and John Howard each had 6 points for the visitors.

Both teams wound up with 4-8 league records.

San Rafael	13	14	11	10—48
Novato	8	7	7	8—30

San Rafael scores: Jeff Allen, 6-1-13; John Farrar, 1-0-2; Chip Tyson, 1-2-4; Bill Tetu, 3-1-7; Dick Draney, 1-0-2; Roger Widmer, 1-3-5; Joe Cunningham, 4-5-13; Bob McLennan, 1-0-2. Totals: 18-12—48

Novato scorers: Tom Corder, 2-0-4; Tom Owens, 3-0-6; Al Parsons, 4-2-10; Ev Fritz, 2-0-4; John Howard, 2-2-6. Totals: 13-4—30

Fouls: San Rafael 10, Novato 13.

Indians In Win Over Terra Linda

Hoping that Marin Catholic would upset the Pirates of Sir Francis Drake High School, the Tamalpais Indians last night rallied to defeat the visiting Terra Linda basketballers, 57-52.

But Drake beat the Marin quint 60-32, so instead of a tie that would have resulted in a playoff for a berth in the Berkeley Tournament of Champions, the Indians of Tam had to settle for second place with a final 9-3 Marin Athletic League record—which really isn't too bad for a team that wasn't expected to finish much higher than fourth or fifth place at the start of the season.

Paced by Steve Woodward's 21 points, the Indians—who had taken a 2-point lead at the end of the first period, then fell behind at intermission 34-33—outscored the Trojans 17-11 in the third period, pulling 7 points ahead 50-43.

The Trojans, who were not about to call it quits, made a desperate drive in the final stanza but with Woodward ripping the hoop from long range and Honor Jackson dominating the boards, the Tam quint held on for the win.

"Woody's" 21 points were high for the game and Mike Biber chalked up 12 markers for the victors. Jackson had just 5 points but played a good all-round game while grabbing 8 rebounds.

The Tam cagers outrebounded the Trojans 22-21.

From the field it was 47 per cent for the winners and, after shooting a sizzling 62 per cent in the first half, the Trojans shot just 12 per cent in the second half to wind up with 37 per cent.

The Tam cagers committed 20 fouls and the Terra Linda quint capitalized by scoring 27 points from the charity line while shooting 74 per cent. The Indians shot 63 per cent from the free throw line.

Leading Terra Linda scorers were Glen Olden with 19 points and Fred Daniele with 17. Both boys played outstanding games for the Trojans.

The Trojans, who ended their season with a 4-8 MCAL record, clipped the Tam boys when the two teams met in the first round 56-54.

Tamalpais	15	18	17	7	—57
Terra Linda	13	21	7	11	—52

Tamalpais scorers: Mike Biber, 6-0-12; Steve Johnson, 3-1-7; Steve Woodward, 9-3-21; Russ Williams, 3-0-6; Ron Gilliam, 3-0-6; Honor Jackson, 1-3-5. Totals: 25-7—57.

Terra Linda scorers: Brian Perron, 1-6-8; John Ahern, 0-2-2; Craig Hill, 1-0-2; Steve Congdon, 2-0-4; Fred Daniele, 3-11-17; Glen Olden, 5-8-19. Totals: 12-27—52.

Fouls: Tamalpais 22, Terra Linda 8.

STANFORD, UCLA WIN, SLUG IT OUT TONIGHT

Oregon State carried the Pacific Athletic Conference basketball battle to fifth-place Washington State this afternoon, confident of retaining its already commanding 8-2 lead.

A four-way tie for second place dissolved last night — but perhaps not permanently — when UCLA and Stanford won their conference games. An idle Oregon squad slipped into third on a technicality and a defeated USC Trojan squad landed in fourth.

The standings were far from definitive, however: UCLA and Stanford, both 7-4 in conference play, slug it out tonight at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion; Oregon, 6-4, is considered a likely bet tonight against 2-8 Washington in Washington, and USC, 6-5, is unlikely to be embarrased by lackluster California, which reposes in the PAC cellar at 2-9.

The Bruins' Mike Lynn, Kenny Washington and Freddie Goss spurred UCLA to a 95-78 victory over the California Bears in Pauley last night.

Lynn scored 22 points, Goss 20 and Washington 18 in desperately fanning the Bruin hopes for a fourth consecutive league title.

The Bruins relaxed their zone press for a while in the first half and the Bears took a brief 26-25 lead with four minutes remaining. But UCLA clamped on the press again and roared back to a 40-31 halftime lead.

Bruin coach John Wooden, looking ahead to tonight's game against Stanford, said he planned "to play the same way we played up there, only do things better." Wooden, whose squad lost 74-69 in its last meeting with Stanford, observed optimistically that the Bruins' famed press always seems to work better at home than on the road.

Stanford's Indians stalled in the final minutes last night to hang onto an 82-71 victory over Southern California and their slim chance for the PAC title.

The Indians, tied 58-58 in the second half, rallied for nine straight points, to take a 76-58 lead with less than seven minutes left.

From there on they slowed down the game and kept USC on ice. Ray Kosanke, who scored 18 points, sparked the Indian victory by a strong defensive performance against Trojan John Block, who sank 25 points in the first half and then collected only three in the second, after Kosanke put him under wraps.

Barry's 42 Paces S.F. Past Cincy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The San Francisco Warriors play their season's concluding game with the Cincinnati Royals tonight in the National Basketball Assn. game at Civic Auditorium.

The Warriors have won five of the nine meetings so far this season with the third-place club in the eastern division. San Francisco took the edge last night in a 125-119 victory over the Royals.

Rookie Rick Barry hit six free throws in the last four minutes to finish with 42 points for the Warriors. Tom Meschery grabbed eight of his 15 rebounds in the concluding minutes to preserve the Warriors' slim four to six point lead.

This Is It: USF Vs. Pacific '5' Tonight

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tonight, as they say in the melodramas, is the showdown between those two deadlocked basketball foes who have been riding herd in the West Coast Athletic Conference — the University of San Francisco Dons and the University of the Pacific Tigers.

Both the Dons and Tigers hold 10-1 basketball records in the WCAC and have left other contenders by the side of the trail.

The game, 8 o'clock at USF, pits the likes of Pacific's rebounding genius Keith Swagerty and junior ace Bob Krulish against the balanced Dons, who have won 33 straight home triumphs.

USF ran its string to 33 with an 88-67 victory over St. Mary's last night as Erwin Mueller dunked in 17 points and all Don starters hit double figures.

UOP, meanwhile, ran over Santa Clara 73-68. The Broncos upset the Tigers in their last outing for UOP's only conference defeat. USF's only loss was to UOP at Stockton last Feb. 12 by an 88-78 count.

Swagerty hit 17 points and Krulish 24 for UOP.

Clarke Smashes Record; Grelle In 4:00.3 Mile

At that point, the surprising Smith ran only a few steps behind.

The Australian won the award as the meet's outstanding athlete for the second consecutive year. Still, there were several other outstanding performances.

Veteran miler Jim Grelle set a new meet and Cow Palace records with a mile time of 4:00.3.

So did triple jumper Art Walker with a 52-foot, 5¾-inch effort on his final attempt. Pole vaulter John Pennel cleared 16-5 on his first try at the height but then missed three at 17-¼, attempting to better his own indoor world record.

Little Wayne Hermen of San Jose State ran the 160-yard dash in 16.4 seconds, fastest ever for an event unique to the Cow Palace.

He also placed second in the 60 and ran on the San Jose mile relay team, which set meet and Cow Palace records with a time of 3:19.7.

TONIGHT AT 'PALACE'

Seals Face 'Must Win' Situation Vs. Totems

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The San Francisco Seals tonight battle the Seattle Totems, whose position they covet in the Western Hockey League standings.

The Seals, last in the WHL, are aiming for the Totems' fourth-place berth, which is the cutoff for making the post-season playoffs.

Tonight's game at the Cow Palace is regarded as a "must" game by Coach Charley Burns.

"Seattle, with their seven point lead in fourth," Burns says, "can win one game to our three or four and still stay ahead."

But the Seals are also troubled by injuries. Jack McCartan, with a pulled groin, plans to take the warmup practice, then say if he can play in regular action. Ron Schock, with a bruised instep, is even more doubtful.

Stan Gilbertson, a rookie, will start at left wing.

Terra Linda Frosh Whip Tam, 49 To 25

Terra Linda's freshman basketball team ended its season yesterday with a 49-25 victory over Tamalpais' frosh. Mark Clark scored 12 points for Terra Linda and Pat Purcell added 11 more.

The Trojan Babes finished with a 9-3 record in the mythical Marin Athletic League standings. For the whole season, the Terra Linda frosh were 19-5.

TELEVISION REVIEW

Teen-Age Conformity Surprises Watchers

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —You can bet what the main topic of conversation will be for the immediate future in Webster Groves, Mo.: That CBS-TV documentary about the town that was broadcast last night.

If the network's depiction of the well-to-do St. Louis suburb as a hotbed of conformity was even close to accurate—and if most of the youngsters are really as lacking in adventure as they indicated—there should be some soul-searching.

For all I know, the program may have been quite accurate, but I am personally hesitant to base my judgment of anything or anybody on a one-hour television summary. You cannot compress a town into an hour —only some aspects of it —for who knows what intrepid souls might have been overlooked? However, where the program most surely hit home, and gathered its undeniable strength, was in using this suburban setting for illustrating a nation-wide situation where some towns may unintentionally be denying the flowering of the inquisitive spirit that makes men and women whole.

The name of the documentary was "Sixteen in Webster Groves," and the idea was to examine the attitude of some 16-year-olds (those just old enough to drop out of school) toward "their parents, education, marriage and their futures." Rather than finding a rebellious lot of youngsters, the indications were that most of them fell into almost the extreme opposite category, middle-aged in their views well before their time, frequently depressingly.

Yet there was definite sympathy toward the youngsters and the pressures on them for exceptional grades and getting ahead. The most critical—and occasionally ridiculing — sorties in the hour were aimed, by implication, at some of the parents. A high police official, interviewed about the subject at hand, said: "These people have been regimented so much they just don't know what self reliance is."

There were some droll aspects to last night's hour. Most of the nation is concerned about kids who are raising the dickens (as most of the nation is each generation)—but good old CBS-TV is worried about those who aren't. I must confess that I also found little to be fearful of concerning the youngsters except for their lack of adventure—admittedly a serious shortcoming. But in a way I wasn't too upset that there are still some people who care deeply about a continuity of some old-fashioned formalities of life.

The trouble, CBS-TV indicated, is that these formalities are drawn so tightly at times that they amount to a form of suffocation. Don Marquis, the columnist, once wrote:

"My general advice to the young is always to rush in where angels fear to tread. Find a place where no angel has ever set his or her foot and camp there. The truly competent angel should not be afraid to go anywhere; but angels are not what they used to be. The very fact that angels fear to tread in a place shows that it needs pioneering; youth must do it, and make it safe for the angels; coax them in."

THE CHANNEL SWIM: Dean Martin's NBC-TV series was officially renewed for next season . . . The same network's "Daniel Boone" western also will be back . . . And so will another NBC-TV oater, "Laredo" . . . At CBS-TV, meanwhile, Garry Moore will return with a new one-hour variety series.

Sen. Robert Kennedy is interviewed on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" tomorrow, replacing the originally scheduled Rep. Melvin Laird . . . Actor Glenn Ford, a long-time television holdout, will be the narrator of ABC-TV's March 10 one-hour documentary about the Navy's unorthodox role in the Viet Nam war.

Nancy Sinatra appears tomorrow on CBS-TV's Ed Sullivan show to sing her hit song, nation's most popular records, "These Boots are Made for Walkin'," currently one of the Singer-pianist Ike Cole presents a song tribute to his brother, the late Nat (King) Cole, on the same network's Red Skelton hour March 8.

Woman Reports Batman Crime

CHICAGO (AP) — Zwot!

"His face was covered with a Batman mask and he was wearing bat gloves," Mary Green told police in describing a man who robbed her yesterday.

Mrs. Green, 45, said she was returning through an alley to her apartment from a neighborhood grocery when a man approached partly costumed like Batman on television.

She told police he put his hand over her mouth and grabbed her purse, which contained $3 and personal papers.

New England Hit By Heavy Snow: Skiers Happy

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

A fresh, heavy snowfall smacked New England today, in the wake of a crippling blanket of wet, heavy snow that fell yesterday.

Fifteen inches of new snow fell at Greenville, Maine, in a 12-hour period, to bring the total snowfall to 50 inches.

Rumford, Maine, was covered by 40 inches of snow today, including 16 inches of new snow that fell during the night. Gale force winds whipped the snow into huge drifts and halted or delayed transportation.

Schools throughout the East were closed down and ski slope operators reported a booming weekend business.

More than 14 inches of snow fell at Bolton, Conn., yesterday. Twelve inches blanketed the Hudson Valley and Albany area in upstate New York. Four inches fell on New York City, seven inches on Boston.

The weather bureau said the snow would continue in Maine today. Clearing weather was predicted for the rest of the East, although snow flurries would be present from the eastern Great Lakes to the Appalachians and New England.

Police Say Sailor Passed False Check

San Rafael police yesterday arrested Robert B. Lane, 24, of Treasure Island, on a charge of passing a false check for $428.40 Aug. 21 at Gem Auto Sales, 1530 Fourth Street, when he purchased a used car.

He was being held in restricted quarters at Treasure Island for being absent without leave. Bail was set at $550.

Mississippi has not defeated Alabama in football since 1910.

Bettini May Also Enter County Race

San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini may make it a three-way race for county supervisor in the first district.

Bettini said today he is "seriously considering" candidacy for the job now held by Byron W. Leydecker, chairman of the board.

Leydecker has said he will probably run again, and former San Rafael Mayor John F. McInnis, Leydecker's opponent in 1964, has told friends he will run again.

No candidate has yet filed or made formal announcements, however.

Bettini, in the insurance business, served on the San Rafael Board of Education for 10 years before being elected mayor last year.

NEW ADMIRAL — John H. Hoefer of Belvedere has been promoted from captain to rear admiral in the Naval Reserve, the Navy announced today. He and Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-San Francisco, were among 18 reserve officers promoted to rear admiral throughout the country. Hoefer is president of a San Francisco advertising firm. He was a Navy lieutenant commander during World War II, serving in Asia and the South Pacific, and now commands the Twelfth Naval District's public affairs company.

Fowl Cholera Sweeping State

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An outbreak of fowl cholera has killed some 60,000 birds from the Oregon border to the Salton Sea, the State Fish and Game Department reports.

The department said yesterday that the disease has hit ducks, geese and seagulls.

The disease, the report said, is different from the human form of Asiatic cholera.

The department suggested draining waterfowl areas to check the spread of the disease.

Milton S. Cohen, superintendent of the Larkspur School District, will speak on "Russia's Commitment to Education," describing his trip to the Soviet Union last spring, at 3:45 p.m. Monday at the Ross Grammar School. The talk will be sponsored by the Ross School District Teachers Assn.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Installation Of Seat Belt May Mean Use Required In Lawsuit

VAN DELLEN

Wisconsin is one of 20 states that adopted legislation requiring installation of seat belts in cars sold in the state.

Dr. J.W. McRoberts of Sheboygan, Wis., assumes that since it is mandatory to install seat belts, it also must mean that all drivers and front-seat passengers are required to use them.

A WISCONSIN Circuit court jury recently decided that a person involved in an accident was casually negligent because she was not using the device at the time of the mishap. The woman sustained back injuries and the jury reduced the award she would have received by 10 per cent because of her negligence.

The trial judge stated that seat belts were installed for use and that the legislature intended that they be used in certain circumstances. What's good for the goose is still good for the gander.

PEOPLE SWALLOW the strangest things and medical journals have published many reports on unusual items that have been retrieved from the stomach and intestines.

We can expect this behavior in toddlers and in oldsters with dentures. Most adults who make the medical literature as swallowers of unusual articles have a subnormal mentality or are psychiatric cases attempting suicide.

The latest was reported in the Journal of the Indiana State Medical association. A 54-year-old man swallowed a large tablespoon that went as far as the upper part of the esophagus and no further.

X-RAYS REVEALED that the spoon handle was still in the lower throat. It was visible thru a laryngoscope and was removed with considerable difficulty.

He had attempted suicide 20 or more times. The victim was an old hand at swallowing objects including sponges and smaller spoons.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

HEREDITARY

Mrs. P. R. writes: We have Huntington's chorea in the family on the in-law side. Is there any known cure or way to help these unfortunate people?

REPLY

There is no cure, to my knowledge, except through eugenics. This family trait will exist as long as the family continues to propagate. Fortunately the disease does not appear in all the offspring but it occurs with enough regularity to realize the possibility.

DIETARY DILEMMA

E. R. writes: What can an underweight person eat that will not make his acne worse? I have been told to eat sweets and starchy foods but when I do, my complexion suffers.

REPLY

You should know what makes the acne worse. Eat fewer sweets and greasy foods and more bread, jam, macroni, and dairy products along with your regular diet. A glass of milk between meals often helps the weight problem.

MENOPAUSE AND VISION

R. B. writes: Can change of life or high blood pressure affect the eyesight? A woman of 58 who has both conditions finds she cannot see as well as before, even with glasses.

REPLY

High blood pressure, but not the menopause, may impair vision. Age itself is a possible factor, because, in other conditions which affect the older person, glasses may be of little value. Cataract is an example.

TONGUE CRACKS

Mrs. A. writes: Do cracks in the tongue mean a serious disease?

REPLY

Not necessarily. In geographic tongue, the organ is partitioned by deep furrows and it looks terrible but works in a normal fashion.

Punishment Suggested For De Gaulle Cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. George Smathers, D-Fla., wants to get even for French President Charles de Gaulle's plans to withdraw from NATO by placing some sort of restriction on U.S. tourist travel to France.

"If De Gaulle doesn't want our troops in France or any part of the NATO alliance, I don't think he should get the money Americans spend in Paris," Smathers said at a Senate Finance Committee hearing yesterday. "We could have some kind of tax on them or a passport restriction."

College Realty Deal Hurt By Proceedings' Secrecy

The unsuccessful attempt by College of Marin to negotiate for the former College Market property is evidence that "quiet" negotiation by lawyers claiming lawyer-client privilege is not always fruitful.

The advisability of having public agencies use the county's legal counsel as a real estate agent and negotiator should be seriously questioned.

In general, negotiations for real estate are best handled by real estate brokers, not by lawyers, as the current problem on the College Avenue property would indicate.

This is what apparently happened: Negotiations for the property were started by County Counsel Douglas Maloney on behalf of the College last April.

In July, the college board authorized Maloney to file a condemnation suit if necessary. Maloney continued to negotiate.

On or about Aug. 26, the owners sold the property for some $35,000 to the Catholic Archdiocese of San Francisco, and the papers went into escrow. On Aug. 31, Maloney filed a condemnation suit, but the property owners did not get a notice of the suit until Sept. 4, the day after the sale to the Catholic Archdiocese had been consummated.

In brief, then, while the college "negotiated" for about four months, the property was snapped up from under its nose by another purchaser. And this purchaser did not know of the college condemnation suit until after the purchase had been completed.

The Catholic Church bought the property for its Catholic student group, the Newman Club. Church spokesmen report that considerable money and material have gone into the property, and it may now be worth almost double what they paid for it.

Now, the college is in the position of having to negotiate with new owners. We have a case here where a public agency, which could have acquired or condemned the property last year, let it slip through its fingers and is now faced with buying from the new owner at perhaps double the price.

This is a far cry from exaggerated claims often made by public agencies that hush-hush negotiation for land will "save taxpayers money." In this case, the negotiations were conducted so quietly that the parties involved apparently did not know what was going on.

Real estate brokers are sometimes accused by lawyers of infringing into the field of law when they draw up deeds of trust and other legal documents.

In the current college property case, the reverse is true. We find a legal man serving as real estate agent, haggling for property—a field which is not exactly his forte.

In either case, the results usually prove unsatisfactory.

This experience shows that hush-hush negotiation is not always the "money saver" that proponents of secrecy would have you believe, and that lawyers should not be given free rein to act as real estate agents for public agencies.

Buzzing The Blue Jays

A well-known Mill Valley bird watcher, who prefers to be anonymous, has developed a technique of ridding his bird feeder of overly greedy Jays. He simply places a buzzer on the feeding tray and connects it to a push-button on his dining room table. When the Jays begin chasing away the other birds, he merely yawns and touches a finger to the button. The Jays panic and fall all over themselves in their rush to leave.

Jays are well-known tree-top bullies. Less aggressive birds have little chance in getting their share of the food when the Jays are about. But with his buzzer, our friend can drive away the Jays at will.

Indeed, he reports the Jays are now so cautious about approaching the feeder, he is losing some of his original glee. It's a good idea, nonetheless.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to considerate motorists who blink their car lights as a friendly warning to an oncoming driver who has forgotten to turn on his headlights.

BOUQUETS, during Engineers' Week (this week), to the professional engineers, for encouraging youth to enter the scientific field and helping America retain the lead in technological achievements.

BOUQUETS to county firemen, sheriff's deputies, and a national park ranger for plucking two men off rocks at Pierce Point before the tide closed in on them.

A BOUQUET to Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, for filling in admirably as president pro-tem of the State Senate during the illness of Sen. Hugh M. Burns.

A BOUQUET to David Scott Griffeath, 17, Tam High School senior, for winning a $600 scholarship at a banquet in San Francisco climaxing Engineer's Week.

BOUQUETS to Marin members of the Constitution Revision Commission, notably John A. Busterud of San Rafael, for their part in revising the bulky state Constitution.

BRICKBATS to the sloppy operation of some of our small special assessment districts, which are so confused they don't know who the legal directors are or when their terms expire.

A BRICKBAT to the persistent flu bug, which has forced schools and businesses to slow down to a crawl.

A BOUQUET to San Rafael city councilmen for ordering stiffer fines for another type of bug—the litterbug.

BOUQUETS to Marin teen-agers for conducting a special campaign today for the Heart Fund drive.

A BOUQUET to Gerald N. Hill, formerly of Marin, for being elected president of the California Democratic Council.

A BOUQUET to Dominican College of San Rafael for winning a distinguished service award (one of five in U.S.) from the American Assn. of Colleges for Teacher Education.

A BOUQUET to Novato Junior Women's Club for donating an electronic nebulizer to Novato Hospital.

SMALL ANTS DISTRACT BIG ONES

The best antidote to destructive fire ants seems to be an even smaller species of ant.

Throughout the southern U.S., fire ants ravage crops, snarl machinery, and inflict painful lumps on both people and animals.

Recently, scientists in Uruguay, the home of fire ants, discovered that they are relatively harmless when the tiny insects are around.

These little ants mysteriously influence their troublesome big brothers to feed them, raise their offspring and do all their work for them. This keeps the fire ants too busy to cause trouble.

Science deserves great credit for finding ways to free mankind from many scourges and pests. Still, such solutions have been there all the time—either intact or waiting to be put together.

It is part of the design of our heavenly Father that each person use his intelligence and determination to find ways of improving the physical and spiritual condition of all.

"For every creature of God is good."

Septuagenarian Tells How To Avoid Flu

Editor, Independent-Journal:

With so much "flu" going around, may I offer a remedy to combat that—"Brown's Yeast" of the Vitamin B family. It builds up resistance and vitality. I haven't had a cold in years—never think about them—and the flu once in 30 years.

Friday last was my birthday—77 years—and as a retired carpenter 43 years in Marin, I can do any work of my own and enjoy doing it (work on my own property). . . .

My reason for this is the yeast is so very inexpensive and the flu takes so much out of our system needlessly. The yeast is grown to dry for vitamin use, not for beer making.

Withdrawal Urged From Viet Nam War

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Our position in Viet Nam is untenable, immoral, illegal and shameful. For these reasons we must withdraw, and let the Vietnamese people decide their own destiny without the enlightenment that our napalm, guns, bombs and gas gives them.

It is of the utmost urgency to devise a plan to convert to a peace economy. The war has already escalated to a point where major dislocation to the economy will occur if the war machine is slowed down, and this situation can only get worse as our commitment to napalm diplomacy becomes complete.

Such a plan would require strong government control of our economy, which would understandably be resisted by most free-enterprise entrepreneurs. But consider the alternatives—a continuing war and arms build-up, which could only end in holocaust, or an economic collapse, with all the suffering that would entail, with ultimately another arms race and war to pull us out of it. A third alternative, that of our war industries voluntarily cutting back or diversifying to keep the economy going, seems totally unrealistic.

Camp Fire Girls Thank Mint Buyers

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On behalf of Golden Gate Council Camp Fire Girls, Marin section, I would like to thank all residents of Marin County for their fine reception of our Blue Bird, Camp Fire, Jr. High and Horizon Club girls in their mint selling for the past month. The cooperation and generosity of the people of Marin have made this year's sale the best yet. The added revenue, along with Crusade funds, will enable the girls to participate in a broader, more challenging program in the year ahead.

My sincere thanks to each and every one.

Praise For Frost's Bottleneck Solution

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Bouquets to Public Works Director Donald Frost, who pulled out of the hat a solution on the widening of Sir Francis Drake and a remedy for the parking problem by his Phase I of Alternate III plan which was adopted by the Board of Supervisors previously.

By this Phase I the property owners can still utilize all of their property and still maintain their existing parking which otherwise would have been cut off, thereby causing considerable loss in value . . . Also, by this Phase I, the potential killer curve at College Avenue and Sir Francis Drake will be eliminated . . .

The one problem that will arise from these parking lots is that thhey will be filled with students from thhe college. It is mandatory for the college authorities to progress with their own parking lots . . . and not use up public space as well as private space. The college has had too much to say in the development of Kentfield. They are like thhe tentacles of an octopus reaching out, grabbing for more. The authorities of the college have no regard for those property owners that support them . . .

Let us hope that the Board of Supervisors acts immediately on Mr. Frost's solution. There is a deadline to meet on the acquisition of these properties and by delaying any more, it could result in higher prices for the lands involved in Phase I and the problem continues to get worse.

Mill Valley Pond Drawbacks Claimed

Editor, Independent-Journal:

In reference to a proposal for 30-acre pond for flood control on Arroyo Corte Madera del Presidio (Feb. 9 I-J) . . .

The idea of a pond is commendable as a recreational feature, but its effect on flood control would be practically nil. The bulk of inflow . . . comes from the hills and this whole volume of water has to be safely carried through the City of Mill Valley before it reaches the pond at the mouth of the creek. Only a short lower reach of the creek (approximately downstream from La Goma Street) is under tidal influence. Therefore, even if the pool at the mouth is properly dimensioned, there cannot be any appreciable reduction in the construction cost of the channel . . .

A 30-acre pond contains 30 acre-feet of water per foot of depth. The standard project storm runoff is estimated at about 4,200 acre-feet, or 140 times the pool volume per foot depth.

. . . According to a rule (established by the American Waterworks Assn.), a pool equal to one-half of the flood volume would reduce the pool peak outflow by 35 per cent. To obtain that reduction, it would be necessary to have the 30-acre pool 70 feet deep, pumped dry before the storm. On the other hand, if a reasonable depth of pool is used, say 14 feet, then the capacity of the pool will be 10 per cent of the runoff, and the reduction in the peak outflow will be only about three per cent . . .

Construction of the project designed for a "flood of record" capacity is not a safe practice when protection by levees is involved. Such project creates a false sense of security and, when a flood of greater magnitude eventually occurs, the damages may become greater than they would be without a project.

A BEGGAR knocked on the door of a New England farmhouse, whining that he hadn't eaten for two days. The lady of the house marched him straight to the woodshed where there was a pile of uncut lumber. "Do you see that wood?" she asked. "Yeah," whimpered the beggar. "I seen it." "You should say, 'I saw it,'" the New England matron reproved him. U.S. Dollars Popular Abroad; Its Gold Is Even More So . . .

By JOSEPH R. COYNE
(James Marlowe is ill.)

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dollar is as good as gold, the government assures us. And Spain, Belgium, Austria and France are in a good position to prove it.

THEY TRADED MORE dollars for U.S. gold last year than all other nations—more than $1.24 billion worth. This and other gold sales reduced U.S. stocks to about $13.8 billion at the start of the year, a net reduction of $1.66 billion during 1965.

But despite this further drain on U.S. gold—stocks stood at $24.6 billion in 1949—government officials are optimistic that the reduction in gold reserves can be halted. And the key to the question is the U.S. balance of payments.

Bring the balance of payments deficit into equlibrium —$250 billion either side of zero—and the drain on gold will eventually stop, is the reasoning.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler said most of the gold sales last year came during the first six months and a steady decline thereafter suggests "a healthy state of foreign condfidence in the dollar."

And Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor said the determination of Americans to end balance of payments deficit—the difference between U.S. spending abroad and foreign spending in this country—has renewed confidence in the dollar.

This is how the United States saw a $1.66-billion reduction in its gold stock last year:

Most was purchased by foreign countries with dollars but Fowler said $1.1 billion of this came during the first six months of the year and only $177 million between July and December.

France, in line with a policy announced one year ago, cashed in the most dollars for gold—$880 million. Following were Spain at $180 million, Austria at $101 million and Belgium at $83 million.

THE GOLD DRAIN began after World War II when U.S. dollars were sent overseas to help the recovery of war-torn countries.

Since the United States guarantees conversion of official dollar holdings for gold, every dollar which goes abroad represents a potential drain on gold stocks.

The only way to end the drain is to stop the net outflow of dollars by bringing equilibrium to the balance of payments.

The Johnson administration one year ago began a voluntary program among the nation's businessmen and bankers to stem private investment of U.S. dollars abroad. Connor and Fowler said this program was the major reason why last year's deficit was only $1.3 billion, less than half the deficits for the previous two years and the smallest since 1957 when the United States had a $520-million surplus.

Goal of the administration is equilibrium this year.

If this is done and the balance remains in equilibrium—Connor has already asked businessmen to come up with a long-range program to insure this—the drain on U.S. gold stocks will eventually cease, the Treasury feels.

BUT THE FLY in the ointment could be the Viet Nam war. The U.S. buildup there will send more dollars abroad to become potential drains on gold stocks.

Nation's Negro Is Helping Himself

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG JR.

In the past several years the press and airwaves have been full of civil rights news—telling the story of what is being done to help Negro citizens attain full equality. Much of this news has to do with demonstrations and with Federal laws and court decisions. Much has been done and much remains to be done in the fields of legislation and in rousing the nation to take action.

But the question has been raised: What is the Negro doing to help himself? It has been asked both by well-meaning friends of the Negro and by his enemies. The answer, I am happy to report, is a lot—an awful lot. He is pulling himself up by his bootstraps.

FIRST, the organizations of the Negro community have been extremely active. Negro churches, fraternal organizations, social clubs, fraternities and sororities have community service programs designed to stimulate and encourage youths and adults alike. They have scholarship programs and training and citizenship services, and have contributed many thousands of dollars to raise the health and educational levels of the community.

These efforts have been aided by individual Negroes who have climbed out of circumstances of crippling poverty to make a better life for themselves and their families. This rapidly growing middle-class has expanded at a truly amazing rate.

AS COMPANIES continue to open their doors to Negroes, we find more and more individual success stories of the kind I have written about in past columns — young Negro engineers, lawyers, scientists, managers and salesmen, who have helped contribute to our nation's store of wealth and knowledge.

Negroes, so long barred from the sources of capital needed to establish their own businesses, are now making great strides in that field. Negro-operated banks like Harlem's Carver Federal Savings and Loan Assn., and the Freedom National Bank are providing needed funds to help Negro businessmen. These businessmen are also taking advantage of federal loans.

Negro colleges, which are, by the way, integrating their student bodies at a rate which white schools should emulate, are active in conducting remedial programs to train young people in their areas.

WE AT THE Urban League are in a position to note the great sense of participation by the Negro community in programs like the Skills Bank, which refers qualified people to job openings. Other successful projects are the anti-poverty workshops; the secretarial training program, in which young women volunteer for training in the skills they need for jobs in industry; the many other job training projects we run; and the new leadership development program which seeks out and trains the heretofore untapped reservoir of leadership in the community.

The Negro poor, too, have shown that they do not want things to be done for them, but that they wish the opportunity to do things for themselves. The many anti-poverty programs around the country are continually being pressed by the Negro poor to let them decide what they need and to let them do these things for themselves. Anything which smacks of "welfare-ism" or a retention of the status quo, anything which denies them full participation in planning and executing these programs, runs into sturdy opposition. Self-reliance is the key word here.

There are many more ways in which the Negro has sought, successfully, to help himself. Impressive though this is, it takes on added significance when seen against the background of poverty and discrimination which has hindered his efforts.

NUCLEAR AGE DEFENSE

War Returns To A Cave

By DONALD ZLYSTRA
Advance News Service

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. —The Nation's defense control center, buried more than 1,200 feet deep in Cheyenne Mountain near Colorado Springs, is still powerless to defend the United States against its most potent threat — the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile (ICBM.).

Built at a cost of $142.4 million, this complex nerve center for U.S. defense in the nuclear age features the best detection devices and instantaneous communications man has yet devised. The facility is scheduled to be completely operational after July 1.

Its underground granite-encased facilities warn instantly of attack—by enemy ICBMS, by bomber aircraft, by missile-launching submarines, or by a weapons-carrying orbiting satellite.

Today the United States can reach out and destroy even satellite space vehicles—but not enemy ICBMS speeding toward North American targets.

The one weapon the United States has developed to defend against the long-range missile threat has not yet been approved for installation — the multi-billion-dollar Nike-X anti-missile system. The Nike-X system essentially centers on a missile to shoot down another missile.

Next to filling that major gap, U.S. and Canadian officers manning the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) here stress the urgent need for an improved interceptor airplane.

Here too, development is already well in hand but operational funds have not been requested by the Pentagon.

But even with these glaring retaliatory deficiencies, the nation's ability to obtain early warning of an attack—and instantly to deploy the considerable forces now available—has taken a giant step forward with virtual completion of the NORAD center in Cheyenne Mountain.

It's fitted with every conceivable gadget modern science can devise to keep its occupants alive and directing a fight against an enemy capable of raining scores of nuclear explosions on this mountain fortress.

Besides directing the continent's nuclear defense, the Cheyenne Mountain redoubt would in event of attack order this nation's retailiatory strikes.

Not only would the United States be able to launch this awesome counter-force within minutes of an attack. It would hold in reserve missiles at Air Force Strategic Air Command (SAC) launch sites, already - airborne nuclear bombers and Polaris submarines at sea—a second counter-punch, capable of destroying any major targets that survived the first U.S. retaliatory attack.

NORAD's mountain command post is designed specifically to:

1. Get SAC bomber forces and tactical fighter interceptor planes airborne immediately when the first warnings;

2. Launch immediately the first massive missile counter-strike; and

3. To survive as a command center to direct sucessive retaliatory strikes by U.S. forces.

So speedy is today's reaction time that the entire SAC fleet of B-52 and B-58 bombers can be airborne within 15 minutes of the launching of the first Soviet ICBM. U.S. ICBMS can begin their flight of 30 minutes or less to major Soviet targets within a minute or two of the first alarm.

Missiles not launched in the first would wait in their protected silos for NORAD's electronic commands, relayed instantly through SAC's command post at Offutt Air Force Base, Neb.

Warning of a nuclear attack against North Aemerica comes almost instantly to Cheyenne Mountain through a bewildering variety of sensor devices. Chief among these is SAC's ballistic Missile Early Warning System (BMEWS). Three massive radar sites—at Clear, Alaska; Thule, Greenland; and at Fylingdales Moors, Great Britain — detect ICBMS after launch and immediately begin tracking their flights.

A similar aircraft warning system, the Distant Early Warning Line (DEW Line) relays data on incoming enemy aircraft to NORAD, obtained through the Semi-Automatic Ground Environment (SAGE) system radars. Improved radars now have permitted major reduction of the number of sites in this complex.

Against the threat of planes and missiles approaching from south of the United States, NORAD depends on Navy's SPASUR system—a line of radar across southern United States. Other long-range radar warnings could come from installations on the island of Trinidad off South America and from a station at Diyarbakir in Turkey.

Precise visual tracking of satellites and other space vehicles is possible through a global net of Baker Nunn tracking cameras located at stations throughout the world.

Most of these sources feed their data promptly—many almost instantaneously—to the Cheyenne Mountain redoubt, where a battery of 13 major computers directs the messages to the right sub-centers and sorts and stores the data for immediate display to commanders.

More than 400 U.S. Air Force, Army, Navy and Canadian military personnel will man the Colorado Springs mountain control center on a peacetime alert basis daily. This number can be promptly increased to 900.

Food, sleeping accomodations and air and water for the entire complex are stored within the mountain, permitting entirely independent operation for 30 days.

Survival in this granite-clad center is a relative matter, its military commanders admit. Questioned closely, none of them wilul contend, for instance, that a super Soviet 50-megaton nuclear warhead directly on target could not knock out their control center.

But the entire massive investment in technology, dollars and men was made on the assumption that the possibility of such a Soviet feat is "remote."

Alternate control centers, distant from the Cheyenne Mountain facility in unrevealed locations, are maintained against this direct-hit possibility. For instance, SAC's hardened control site at Offutt could conduct the nuclear battle if Cheyenne Mountain were eliminated.

A-Bomb Spending Down —There's A Stockpile

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second year in a row, the United States is spending less for producing nuclear weapons —but there's no cause for any adversary to enjoy it more.

Indeed, all available evidence suggests that a major reason for the spending retrenchment is that a huge stockpile of both A-weapons and H-weapons has been built up in recent years.

Production of new and improved nuclear bombs, missiles, land mines, depth charges, artillery shells and other arms goes on—although the Atomic Energy Commission has said there is "a reduction in the rate of increase."

Major plants and other facilities for the development, fabrication and testing of both nuclear and non-nuclear components of such weapons are spread over many states, extending from California to Florida and from Iowa to New Mexico.

Aside from investments in nuclear test sites in Nevada and the far Pacific area—the latter now on a stand-by basis —capital investment in this weapons production complex exceeds $1 billion.

For the year ended last June 30, the AEC spent $763 million on its weapons program, including costs of underground testing at the Nevada proving grounds. This represented a decrease of five per cent from the previous year.

In the current fiscal year — now half over—the AEC is operating with a weapons budget of $704.4 million.

The commission reports it "is maintaining the country's nuclear defense capability as well as its readiness to resume atmospheric testing in the event the limited test ban treaty is abrogated."

And where are the nation's completely fabricated weapons stored—other than those deployed with military units on land and sea and in the bays of ever-watchful bombers aloft?

The location of these storage vaults is one of the nation's closest-kept secrets. But it's common talk around Albuquerque, N. M.—the nerve center of America's far-flung nuclear weapons production complex—that one of the storage areas lies in Manzano Mountain, which overlooks the old southwest frontier town.

The location of the plants, laboratories and other facilities engaged in the actual development, fabrication and assembly of the weapons is NO secret—although, in most cases, the AEC describes only in general terms what goes on in such places.

Here's a run-down on weapons installations and their missions:

1. Raw Materials. Plutonium is produced at plants at Hanford, Wash., and Savannah River, Aiken, S. C. U-235 is produced in plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Paducah, Ky., and Portsmouth, Ohio.

2. The AEC's scientific laboratories at Los Alamos, N.M., and Livermore, where new weapons concepts are dreamed up for testing. These laboratories also fabricate the nuclear explosive components for later use in completed weapons. The Y-12 plant at Oak Ridge also fabricates U-235 into bomb components.

3. Amarillo, Tex.: Manufacture of conventional chemical explosives for use as "triggers" for nuclear explosives.

4. Mound Laboratory, Miamisburg, Ohio: Produces special explosives for detonators and other devices.

5. Pinellas Peninsula plant, near Clearwater, Fla.: Develops and produces complex miniaturized "neutron-generating devices" to provide the first nuclear "sparks" for a chain-reaction within a weapon.

Sandia Base, Albuquerque, N. Mex.: Nerve center for the development and rigorous slam-bang testing of various non-nuclear components. The latter range from switching and timing devices and automatic fuses to "safeing" devices to prevent premature explosion or unauthorized detonation of completed weapons.

Some of this non-nuclear, but really rough-house, testing is done in Coyote Canyon, near Sandia; some is done at Livermore; and still more at sites at White Sands Missile Range; Cape Kennedy, Fla., and Tonopah, Nev. The latter is northwest of the AEC's nuclear testing area.

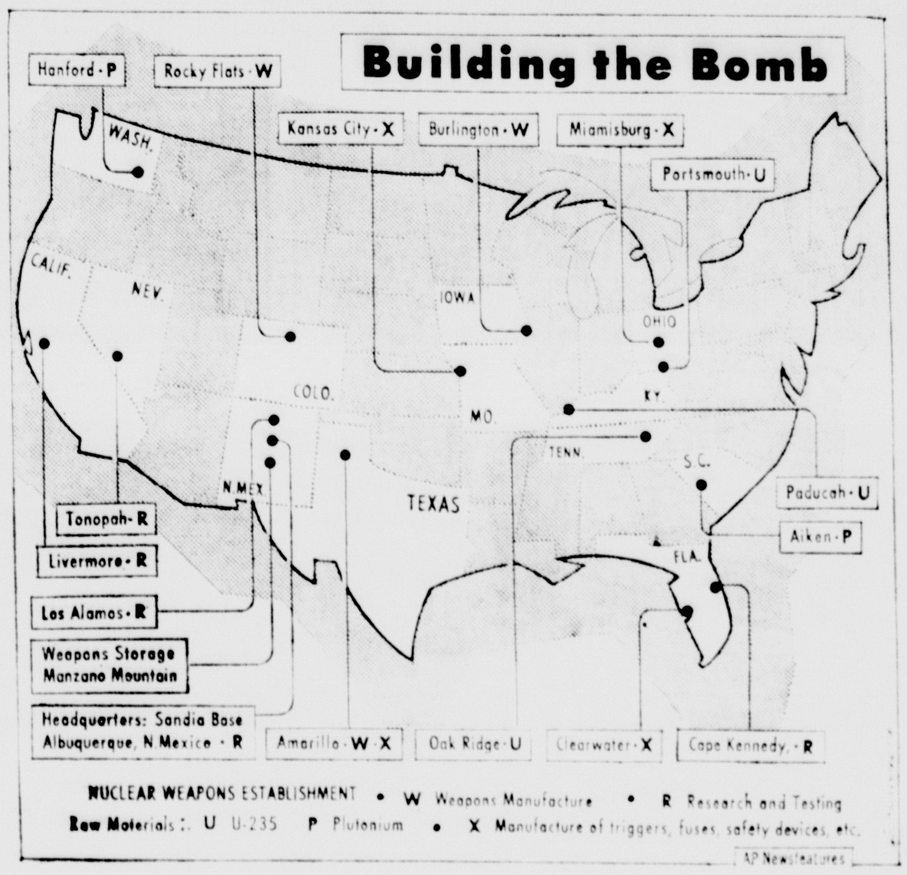
7. Kansas City, Mo.: Production of complex electronic, electro-mechanical and mechanical devices.

8. Burlington, Iowa, and Amarillo, Tex.: Fabrication of chemical explosives and also "the assembly of the various items into weapons and weapons components" — presumably meaning the complete assembly of weapons.

9. Rocky Flats, Colo.: Fabrication and assembly of complete weapons.

For some years, the nation's weaponeers had two other plants — one at San Antonio, Tex., the other at Clarksville, Tenn.—both engaged in weapons "modification," including the "retirement" of obsolete weapons.

But, as part of the retrenchment program, the Tennessee plant was closed in September. The San Antonio facility will be closed out by next July. Operations of the two plants will be consolidated with those at Burlington, Iowa, and Amarillo, Tex. Some 3,600 employees were dropped from the AEC payroll this year—2,000 of them at the Kansas City plant, the rest from Clarksville, Oak Ridge, San Antonio, Albuquerque and Rocky Flats.



Hundreds May Woo State's Voters

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — A total of 899 persons have filed their declarations of intent to seek election to legislative offices this year.

This averaged out to more than seven would-be candidates for each of the 120 offices up for election. However, it was expected this number would dwindle sharply when the time comes for taking out actual nomination papers as many persons filed for more than one office and will have to make a decision before March 25.

Of the total, 538 were Democrats, 356 Republicans and five stated no party. Proving that politics is primarily a man's profession, only 53 women filed in the total.

While many of the "intentees" may not follow through and file for the offices, the Feb. 23 deadline did show definitely that 50 offices in the legislature will not have incumbents seeking reelection next year. This included 22 senate districts, many of which are new ones created under reapportionment, and 28 in the assembly. Of that total, 23 assemblymen have declared intentions to run for the senate and others have announced retirements (three to accept appointment to judgeships).

The filings of intent also made it final that nine present senators will retire at the end of this year: Sens. Luther E. Gibson, D-Vallejo; John W. Holmdahl, D-Oakland; Hugh P. Donnelly, D-Turlock; Paul J. Lunardi, D-Vallejo; Frank S. Petersen, D-Ukiah; Carl L. Christensen, D-Eureka; Joseph A. Rattigan, D-Santa Rosa; Harold T. Sedgwick, R-Yuba City, and Robert D. Williams, D-Hanford.

The declarations found one legislator, Senator Walter W. Stiern, D-Bakersfield, with no opposition. Ten senators and 28 assemblymen face no opposition in their own party in the primary elections. In addition, two assemblymen running for the senate and five other senatorial candidates have no primary opposition. Fourteen candidates for the assembly, other than incumbents, are assured of their party's nomination without a contest.

The declarations, if all carried through for actual filing, would find senators opposing senators in five districts. These include Sens. Virgil O'Sullivan, D-Williams, Fred W. Marler, R-Redding; and Stan Pittman, R-Oroville in the 2nd district; Sens. Stephen P. Teale, D-West Point, and John C. Begovich, D-Jackson, in the 3rd; Sens. William Symons, Jr., R-Bishop, Howard Way, R-Exeter, and James A. Cobey, D-Merced, in the 15th; Sens. Donald L. Grunsky, R-Watsonville, Vernon L. Sturgeon, D-Paso Robles, and Fred S. Farr, D-Carmel, in the 17th; and Sens. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ventura, and Alvin C. Weingand, D-Santa Barbara, in the 24th.

Two senators face opposition from assemblymen, and three of the senate districts have two assemblymen opposing each other.

A second contest for statewide office among high-ranking Democrats took shape last week with the announcement of Thomas W. Braden, president of the state board of education, that he would oppose Lt. Gov. Glenn M. Anderson for his renomination to a third term. Braden, who indicated he had the backing of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York, launched his campaign with sharp criticism of Anderson for being a "do nothing" official and for having shirked his duty while acting governor during the Watts riots last summer.

Anderson later quoted from an editorial endorsing him, as printed in Braden's Oceanside Blade-Tribune in 1962, which praised him for most of the qualities which Braden now accuses him of lacking.

In the other contest, Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch is being challenged by William M. Bennett, member of the California Public Utilities Commission.

Governor Edmund G. Brown broadened the agenda for the special session of the legislature during the week by adding 14 more items for consideration. A number were seemingly technical or non-controversial. Major ones included: increasing number of courts and judges and salary of court attaches; increase membership of California youth authority, and creation of a national redwood road committee.

The California Democratic Council held a hectic convention in Bakersfield during the weekend, in which the group's controversial president, Simon Casady, resigned. A vote of confidence found Casady outvoted by a narrow margin. A number of Democrats did not seek CDC endorsement although Governor Brown appeared at the convention after the Casady ouster and received the group's support.

Brown, meanwhile, has charged the Republican candidates for governor tried to put together a back-room deal some time ago, agreeing that the one making the poorest showing in the opinion polls would drop out of the race. Brown charged this might be a violation of election laws and called for an investigation by a district attorney or the legislative elections committees. One of the GOP candidates, George Christopher, said there was no more violation than in Democratic circles when it was attempted to get such candidates as Pierre Salinger out of the election two years ago and to get Braden and Lloyd Hand out of the lieutenant governor's race this year.

A tightening of the state's laws on smog controls was called for in a special message to the legislature from Governor Brown. He asked that the state board of public health be required to set statewide standards for air pollution. When any county exceeded these standards, it would come under regulations requiring installation of both exhaust and crankcase devices on used cars. Brown asked that exhaust devices be required for installation as soon as one is certified. He called also for a mandatory annual statewide inspection of devices by licensed stations.

California was rocked by the most serious influenza epidemic since at least as far back as 1957. The department of public health said the disease had reached epidemic proportions in at least 18 counties. So far, the disease has resulted primarily in illness and absenteeism from work and schools, although there were reports of deaths from influenza-pneumonia ailments beginning to be filed.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Hot African winds blowing across the fetid swamps of Ghana carry with them yellow fever and malaria-laden insects which take their toll of human lives.

The winds of political change, sweeping across the "dark continent" take their toll of governments.

The latest of six African regimes toppled in the last four months by military coups was that of President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana.

Nkrumah, who ruled as the virtual dictator of Ghana, since its independence from Britain in 1957, was on his way to Peking when the pre-dawn coup occurred Thursday.

Ironically, the 56-year-old American educated Nkrumah was on a one-man peace mission to North Viet Nam when his government was overthrown by the military and the police.

Only brief fighting was reported between anti-government forces and Soviet trained troops guarding Nkrumah's fortress-like residence.

A National Liberation Council formed by the apparently successful insurgents immediately set up committees to help administer the affairs of state in the nation of 7.2 million persons.

Broadcasts from the capital city of Accra announced the suspension of the Constitution and Parliament and the abolition of the country's only political group—Nkrumah's Convention People's Party.

The broadcast said the action had been taken because of the "serious political and economic situation in the country." It declared that "the myth surrounding Kwame Nkrumah has been broken."

Around The World Around The Clock:

New York—In New York to accept a Freedom House award, President Lyndon B. Johnson restated this country's determination to pursue the war in Viet Nam at the same time seeking roads to peace. Johnson gave a point by point reply to the questions raised most frequently about administration policy in Viet Nam.

Singapore: Anti-Communist students rioted in Jakarta protesting a cabinet shakeup by President Sukarno. Five persons were reported to have been killed when Sukarno's palace guards fired into the rioters.

Paris: President de Gaulle announced he will pull France's armed forces out of NATO by 1969 but would still remain a member of the Atlantic Alliance.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Knowing Your Opponents Helps Decide On Finesse Strategy

One of the most ticklish problems in expert play is whether to finesse or play for the drop.

There are rules to guide you, but many exceptions to the rules.

Opening lead — ♠ 8.

West leads the eight of spades, and East plays the nine to drive out the king.

You run the five diamonds, discarding spades from the dummy.

East signals with the nine and eight of hearts, then throws a spade.

West throws two low hearts.

NOW, THE QUESTION

You next lead the king of clubs, and East drops the queen.

You lead the nine of clubs, and West plays low.

Should you let the nine of clubs ride for a finesse or should you go up with dummy's ace?

The best play depends on the opponents and how well you can judge them.

You consider how well they play and how larcenous they are.

NAIVE PLAY

A certain kind of East will always play the queen if he has the doubleton queen-jack.

If he drops the jack you know he does not have the queen.

If he drops the queen, you have to guess.

The average good West player will cover the nine with the jack if he started with J-8-7-6. This will give you three club tricks, but will stop you from getting all five clubs.

West's failure to cover means that East has the jack.

TRICKY KIND

A certain kind of larcenous West will flicker for the merest fraction of a second before playing a low club on your nine.

He hopes that his hesitation is just barely long enough to make you think that he has the jack but not long enough for you to complain about.

This is unethical, of course, but it will act as a boomerang if you know your customer and therefore realize that the slight hesitation really means that he doesn't hold the jack.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ J 7 3
♡ K Q
◇ A K J
♣ A 10 5 3 2

What do you say?

Answer: Bid one club.

You have balanced distribution and 18 points in high cards, but the hand is slightly too strong for an opening bid of 1 no trump.

In addition to the 18 points you have a 10 and a fairly good five-card suit. Treat it like a 19-point hand.

ALMANAC

TODAY IS Saturday, Feb. 26, the 57th day of 1966 with 308 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter; the morning star is Venus; the evening star is Jupiter.

French novelist and poet Victor Hugo was born on this day in 1802.

On this day in history:

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte, with a squadron of 1,200 men, left the island of Elba to begin his second conquest of France.

In 1870, New York's first subway line was opened to the public.

In 1919, Congress established Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona.

In 1935, Germany started the operation of its air force which was to become the dread "Luftwaffe" of World War II.

A Thought for the Day — Russian author Dostoyevsky said: "Tyrannny is a habit capable of being developed, and at last becomes a disease . . . the man and the citizen disappear forever in the tyrant."

ONLY SEVEN OF THESE

Thomas R. Sheridan, executive director for the McCone Commission which investigated the Watts riot of last summer, looks at the towering 13-volume, 8,500-page stack made by a complete transcript of the commission's investigation. The six-foot product of three months of hearings was made "available" Wednesday, but only seven copies have been made—for obvious reasons. (UPI Telephoto)

Campus Vote For Offices Next Week

College of Marin students will go to the polls Monday and Tuesday to elect representative to seven class and student body offices. Five of the positions are uncontested.

The contested positions and the candidates seeking them are: Sophomore men's representative, John Larsen and William Perin of San Rafael; rally and assemblies commissioner, James Brewer of Fairfax, Bruce Ferry of San Rafael, and Steve Schilling of Mill Valley.

The student executive council Thursday placed the office of rallies and assemblies commissioner on the ballot after parliamentarian Jared Dreyfus reported that the grades of the elected commissioner, Steve Tobin, have fallen below the required level.

The uncontested offices and candidates are: sophomore women's representative, Jody Angel of San Anselmo; freshman men's representative, Dennis Gilardi of Larkspur; freshman women's representative, Jeri Stehlin of Belvedere; commissioner of spirit and athletics, Barbara Dillon of San Anselmo; college center commissioner, Donna Ryan of San Rafael.

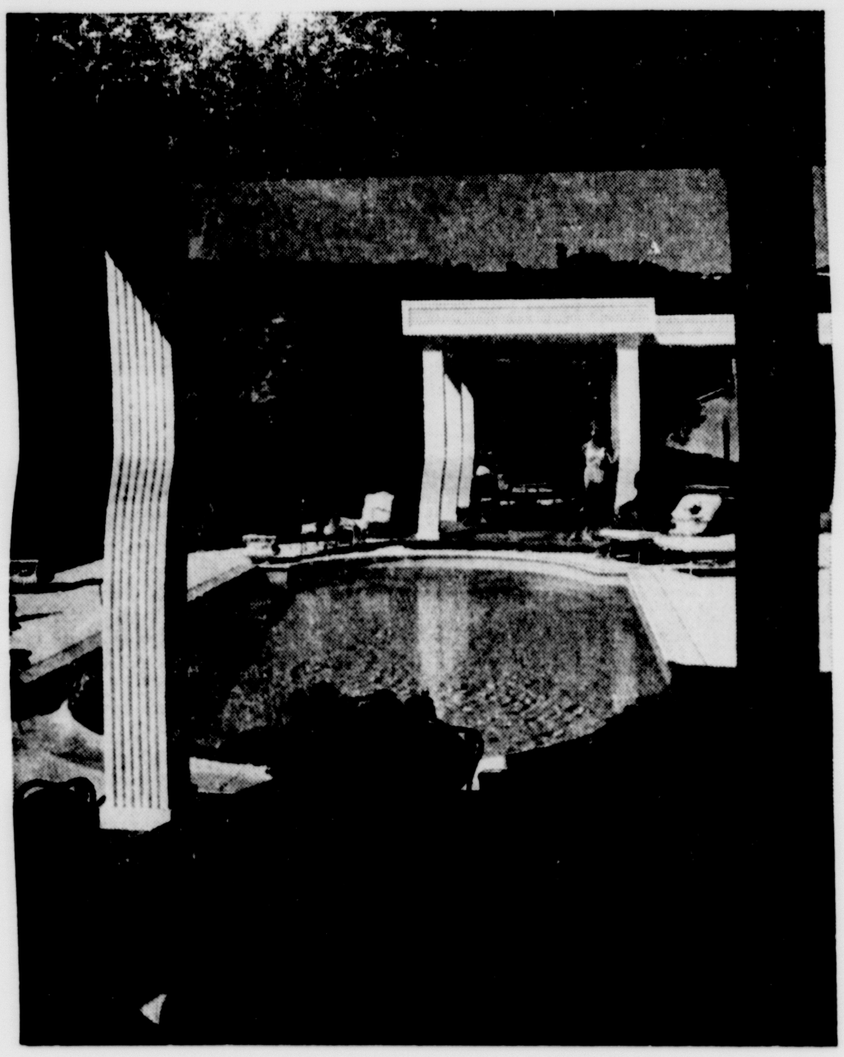
Camper Enthusiasts To Rally In Marin

More than 200 campers and their pickup camper trucks are expected at a rally organized by the Bay Area Camper Club tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the old California Highway Patrol office, 696 Francisco Boulevard West, San Rafael.

Club officials said they are seeking new members to form a local club and to take part in weekend outings with camper coaches.

Home On Leave

James Scagliola, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Scagliola of 121 Hilldale Drive, San Anselmo, has returned home on leave from the Army. He will leave March 1 for Viet Nam.



BULLETIN: FIRST 10 MONTHS OF 1965 IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA*

Anthony builds more pools than the next fifteen single pool builders combined!

Most buyers of pools pick Anthony because they have friends who are satisfied Anthony pool owners. Their reasons:

WHY ANTHONY?

DEPENDABLE ACCESSORIES. Anthony builds and services the complete line: filters, heaters, purifiers, cleaners, proved dependable by the world's largest pool-builder.

FUTURE BACK-UP. Warranties depend on financial strength. Anthony's current statement shows cash of $1,265,567.

COMPLETE POOL—EASY PAYMENTS. Low as $26.67 a month, 10-year terms. Makes it easy to give your family a pool.

*Per most recent building permits reported, Anthony also built more pools than all franchised pool builders combined!

month-end SPECIAL SALE

154,000 BTU HEATER WITH EVERY POOL*

You can get more for your money from Anthony right now. During the last two weeks of January (our off season) we'll include a 154,000 BTU heater with every pool we sell. Retail value is $395.00. No matter what is the list price of the pool you select, the heater will be included with your pool for the price of the pool alone.

*Installation not included. Applies to pool bids made this month.

How To Relax While Aboard Your Airliner

With Common Sense You Arrive At Your Destination Refreshed

The great trick of traveling wisely and well in the jet age involves knowing how to relax on an airplane. This ability determines whether you arrive at your destination feeling fresh and fit or foggy and fatigued.

While tranquilizers and sleeping pills are reported to be the rage with the jet set, there are all sorts of tips which beat barbiturates in helping travelers to fly in comfort and arrive rested.

A GOOD MANY of these tips are a matter of just plain common sense. Yet, many tourists, caught up in the excitement of preparing for a trip abroad, fail to follow these simple suggestions.

Avoid a build-up of tensions prior to departure. Finish business at the office and at home well in advance. Start at least 48 hours before take-off to slow the day's tempo, eat simply and retire early. Remember that packing and farewell parties at the last minute leave their mark on the nervous system.

Keep in mind that your metabolism has geared your periods of sleep and wakefulness to the day-and-night cycle. Jets, however, traverse many time zones, and turn night into day and vice versa. Therefore, if you store up rest, you will be able to cope with these time changes more easily.

WHEN FLYING from west to east, you may find that traveling in the daytime is more restful. London, for example, is six and a half hours from New York by Pan Am Clipper. The clock in London, however, is six hours ahead of the clock in New York. Thus, if you leave New York at 10 in the morning, you arrive in London at 10:30 p.m. (4:30 p.m. New York time), and still have plenty of time to unpack and have a good night's sleep.

Choose comfortable clothes for traveling, and save your Sunday best for later. Wear jersey, knits, worsteds and other materials which do not wrinkle easily. Wear outfits which allow you to twist and turn without restraint. Many people like to remove their jackets and ties and kick off their shoes. You may want to tuck your favorite slippers in your flight bag.

Keep your leg room free of bags and packages. Carry onto the plane only what will fit under your seat. Clutter discourages movement, and maintaining a static position for any length of time increases muscular strain, and thus brings on fatigue. If you have trouble finding a comfortable position for your head, you might pack an inflatable contour pillow to support your neck and prevent kinks.

REMEMBER sleep is not completely essential to rest. Cat-naps and comfortable relaxation, so doctors say, can give you 90 per cent as much rest as deep sleep. What is more, studies show that too-lengthy rests may actually increase fatigue. Body temperatures fall during sleep, and the longer you are immobile, the more energy you have to expend to warm your body up to peak performance temperature.

How you look often determines in your mind how you feel. Therefore, a grooming kit in your flight bag is a good idea. Stock it with cosmetics, tissues, cologne and whatever else you may need. The airlines furnish many of these personal items without charge, and all planes have outlets for electric razors. Spruce up before you arrive at your destination, and you'll look as fresh and fit as when you left home.

Think of your flight as a time to unwind—free from jangling telephones, traffic jams and household clatter. The jets are quiet and smooth-riding no matter where you sit.

DO NOT WORRY about being bored. Cocktails and a meal will occupy an hour or two of your time. Then, you might read, nap, write a letter, play cards or just sit back and watch the world go by.

As a final word, remember that the safety statistics about air travel are not twisted to appear better than they are. They're factual. And it is enormously safer to fly than to walk, drive or run around the block.

THIS PHOTO FROM American Airlines demonstrates just how much, with proper planning, the traveler can pack into two large suitcases plus the usual hand luggage. Here everything from party finery to sports equipment, including boots, iron and transistor radio, have been fitted comfortably into the luggage.

Bound For Europe? Why Not An Iceland Stopover?

Icelandic Airlines, which offers the lowest all-year fares of any scheduled airline from New York to Iceland and eight other European countries, will give passengers an option of extending two, three and four-day stopover tours of Iceland at no additional air fare, effective May 1.

Rates for the extended Icelandic stopover tours will be $34.50, $48 and $66.50.

The new tours will be in addition to the popular one-day stopover tour of Reykjavik, the island's picturesque capital, and its environs currently offered by the airline at the all-inclusive thrift season rate of $15.

From June 1 to Aug. 31, the rate for the one-day tour is $19.50.

NOWHERE in scenic Europe are the vistas more spectacular than in Norway's fjord country, viewed here from the very top of the famous Pulpit Rock in the Lyse Fjord near Stavenger.

BIG BEN and the House of Parliament in London are just one of many attractions in Britain for the tourist and camera. The island is a treasure house of historic, picturesque sights.

Europe Improves Its Facilities

The American tourist can claim considerable credit for improving travel facilities in Europe. And some Europeans are reaping the benefits too.

So says Siegfried Biedermann. He should know.

For the past 15 years Biedermann has supervised operations for Gateway Holidays, one of the leading U.S. operators of escorted motorcoach tours on the continent.

ON A VISIT to the United States, Biedermann said Americans have changed the face of travel in Europe during the past 10 years "by the simple process of going there."

"It is no secret that the American traveler likes his comforts away from home," he said. "If you want his business, you have to provide them for him."

What comforts did the 'Americans want, and what was done to meet his demands?

"FIRST OF ALL, the average tourist wanted to see the Europe of his dreams but he wanted to do so while spending his nights in hotels with such modern appointments as private bath and air-conditioning." Biedermann said. "In other words Americans want to savor the attractions of Old Europe with all the up-to-date comforts they find at home."

He said Americans not only want to sleep in air-conditioned comfort but also want to travel that way.

"Sometimes," he added with a smile, "I think they would like us to air-condition all of Europe. And sometimes I think we have."

BECAUSE OF THE Americans, he said air-conditioned sight-seeing motorcoaches are virtually a "must" these days. He noted Gateway Holidays ordered a fleet of new motorcoaches after two years of tests to determine the type of air-conditioning Americans liked best.

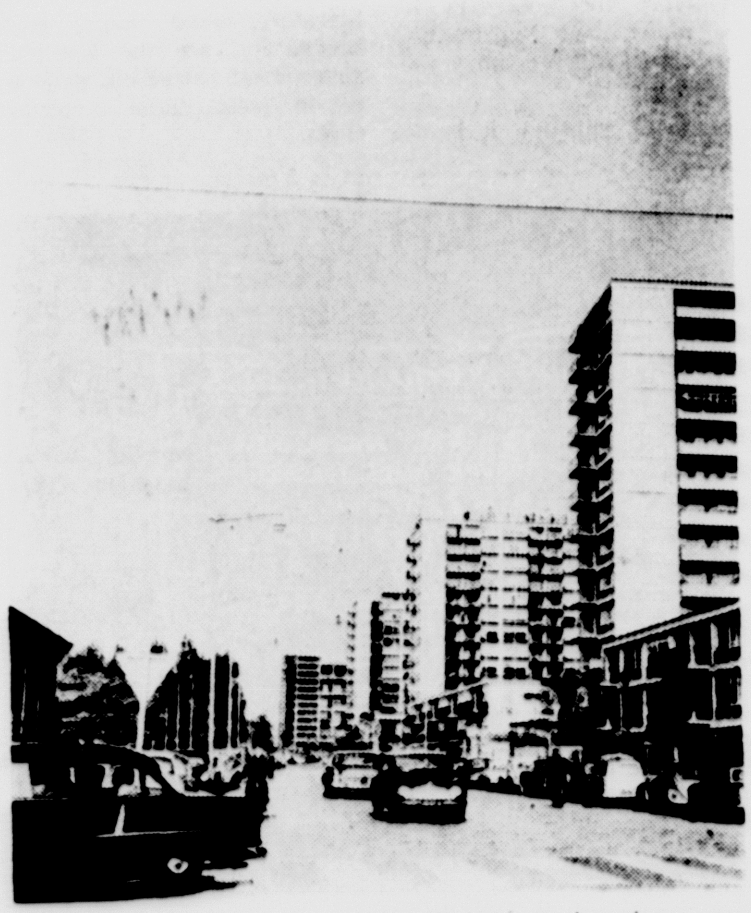
"Frankly, tour companies, including ours, may never have done this if it wasn't for the American traveler," Biedermann said.

Biedermann noted that the European also has benefited by the improvements resulting from the travel industry's efforts to keep the American traveler comfortable and satisfied.

"ICE WATER IS no longer lacking where Americans dine and dishes such as they enjoy in the United States have been adapted by European chefs with their own provincial touches," he said.

"It is no longer strange, either, to see-in Rome, Paris, Frankfurt or Vienna-traditional old European wine restaurants and American snack bars side by side. And many Europeans are enjoying the innovations."

But, he added "the sound of flamenco music remains as stirring as ever even if the bathroom fixtures are 20th century American and the Colosseum in Rome is as awesome as ever even when viewed from the comfort of an air-conditioned motorcoach."



ROTTERDAM, destroyed in World War II, has been rebuilt by the Dutch into one of the most modern cities in all Europe. Life moves at a brisk pace in the handsome city, but the traditional Dutch bike riders remain a part of the life of the Netherlands.

Touring Europe By Automobile

By TOM BUCHANAN
Tourist Manager,
Reynold C. Johnson Co.

Each year more and more American tourists tour Western Europe by car.

The advantages of traveling by car are many including freedom from bus and rail schedules, coupled with the advantage of being able to visit romantic and colorful places off the beaten path. Many places in both England and on the continent are miles away from rail and bus routes and you avoid the high cost of big cities and big hotels.

Should you take your own car, rent one over there, or buy a small European car?

Your operating costs will be higher than in the U.S. Gasoline prices vary from 40 cents to 80 cents per gallon, higher in some of the more popular touring areas. Oil prices are about the same as here. Labor charges will usually be lower than in the U.S. because of lower wages.

Figured on a cost-per-mile basis, two or three people driving a European car can travel more cheaply than by first class rail accommodations. In essence, the cost determining factors are your itinerary and whether you choose to buy, rent or take your own car.

Taking your own car: You should arrange for shipping your own car abroad at the same time you book your passage. This way you can take your car as excess baggage which is considerably cheaper than regular freight.

Advantages: The chief advantage of taking your own car is comfort. The average American car holds five or six easily while the average European car capacity is three or four passengers. Large American cars also have more luggage space.

Disadvantages: With gasoline prices so high, your own car which gets 10 to 20 miles to the gallon will be much more expensive to run than a small European make, most of which get about 30 to 40 miles to the gallon. You won't like the low grade fuel in Europe. It is hard on your high compression engine and cuts mileage still further.

American cars are over-sized for many European roads, particularly in rural sections and towns. Attempting to maneuver your car down these narrow streets is like trying to put 10 pounds of groceries in a five-pound sack. Unless you take to the big cities and have a popular make American car, you will have trouble finding parts in the event of a breakdown.

In some countries, American cars are not particularly popular. Europeans speak of the larger models as "The cars with the dollars sign grin." Appearing in an American car also labels you immediately as a tourist. In an European car you will escape many curious stares while touring.

Do not take your car abroad as capital, with the idea of selling it to pay part of your expenses. Most countries have laws prohibiting such transactions, and where it is permitted, the duties and restrictions are generally prohibitive.

Renting a car in Europe:

Advantages: If you are going to be in Europe for two or three weeks, it is less expensive to rent a car than to buy one, unless the European car of your choice is one which you would like to keep permanently for your use at home. There are numerous rental agencies throughout Europe with both European and American models to lease. Rental systems are similar to those in this country. You pay a daily base rate plus a per mile rate. The rental fee usually includes insurance, lubrication and membership in an automobile club with its attendant routing and emergency services. The lessee pays for gasoline and any tolls or transportation charges. Make your rental arrangements early in the spring. During the summer, the selection of models is limited.

Disadvantages: Renting for longer than a three- to four-week tour is expensive. You have nothing to show for your investment except a receipt. You have a tendency to watch the mileage and driving to keep it down destroys some of the advantages of auto travel. Renting ordinarily means you have to return the car to the point of origin unless you wish to pay an extra charge for pickup service.

Purchasing a small European car: The simplest and quickest method to buy a European car is to order it in the U.S.A. for delivery in Europe. By placing your order here through authorized sources, you are assured of delivery in Europe of the model and color of your choice at the place and time designated by you. Most registration, documents and insurance arrangements can be handled here prior to your departure.

Advantages: You can buy a car delivered overseas, use it to tour and have it returned home for less money than the same car would cost locally. If you wait to buy until you are in Europe, there may be a delay of three to four weeks depending on model and the demands of the season. In addition, no European authorized dealer has on his showroom floor the model of your choice equipped with American specifications which include safety glass, speedometer in miles per hour and sealed beam headlights. If on shipping your European car home you find you do not need it for use in this country, you can re-sell it here and regain a great deal of your original investment. This is particularly true in the case of Volkswagens, where the resale value in the U.S.A. is very high.

European cars are more maneuverable and economical to drive. Ownership relieves you of any worries about mileage and return of the car to the starting point. You will be less conspicuous in a foreign car. Also in addition, parts and service are readily available throughout Europe on all popular makes of European automobiles. For example: The Volkswagen organization has a dealer network in Europe of over 3,000 dealers.

Disadvantages: European cars can feel somewhat small to begin with and cannot comfortably accommodate five or six passengers. If you return some makes of European cars to this country, you will have problems with parts and service as they do not have a large American dealer network. Also the resale in the U.S. for some European makes is poor due to the lack of acceptance by the American public.

Licenses and other documents: A U.S. state driving permit is recognized by all European countries except Austria, Greece, Portugal, Spain and Turkey. If you intend driving in any of the aforementioned countries, it will be necessary to obtain an American international driving permit. This can be handled by your local automobile club.

It is no longer necessary for you to obtain a Carnet de Passage or Triptyque, unless you again intend driving in countries such as Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Rumania. Such countries require that a motorist obtain a temporary import card at the border.

In Greece and Turkey, a Carnet is required if you are touring in these countries for a period longer than four months. At the time you place your order in this country for delivery abroad, you pay for and obtain on delivery the necessary license plates and registration, depending on which country you take delivery in.

Insurance: Although it is no more dangerous to drive in Europe than in this country, adequate insurance is compulsory. If you are unlucky enough to have an accident, the language barrier and strange regulations can mean considerable delays. Liability insurance is compulsory in most European countries. The necessary insurance can in most instances be paid for here at the time you place your order.

Advantages of motoring through Europe: Americans who have motored through Europe always come back with a long list of advantages in favor of touring Europe by car: More comprehensive itinerary — no timetable worries — you can dress and live more informally —baggage is easy to handle and you eliminate an amazing number of tips—less need for reservations since you can stop in small towns, if one is filled it is easy to drive on to the next place—motels are now being constructed in most European countries—families can travel as cheaply as one—you will see more, do more, spend less and go further—offers you a pleasant and memorable journey.

For more information: The best sources of information in this country on auto travel in Europe are the imported motor car dealers, distributors and manufacturers, travel agents and auto clubs. These organizations can obtain your car documents, provide adequate insurance, rent, arrange purchase of your imported car or shipment of your American car, book passage by air or steamship, make hotel reservations and arrange for sightseeing.

Your best source for travel literature, road maps, guide books, etc. are the European government tourist offices located in most major American cities.

RED SQUARE IN Moscow is one of the photogenic locations in the Russian capital city, rapidly becoming a leading tourist center for westerners. Iron curtain countries generally have become more active in attracting and in serving American travelers, eager for the Yankee dollars.

Reds Woo The Yankee Dollar

In a way it seems ironic: Communist countries fighting for the American dollar. The Capitalist dollar.

But they are, and it shows clearly in the tourist business.

Just a few years ago it was nearly impossible for an American tourist to penetrate the Iron Curtain. Today, the Communists have virtually torn down the curtain. And they are using capitalist tools—advertising agencies, travel agencies, public relations.

The scramble for the tourist business is most un-Lenin-like. But it is paying off.

IT IS HARD to come by figures from the Communist side. But take some samples prepared by the State Department, based on passport applications. In 1960, it appears, some 22,000 Americans visited Czechoslovakia. By 1964 the figure was 80,000.

For the Soviet Union, it was 16,000 in 1960 and 30,000 in 1964.

Yugoslavia, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Bulgaria are enjoying similar tourist booms, varying only in percentage of increase.

Albania alone, among the Communist nations of Eastern Europe, remains a closed country. From a grand total of 85 Americans in 1960, Albania's trade shrank to 60 in 1964, although it did know a dizzying 160 American travelers in 1963.

As is most everything else in the Communist world, tourism is a state operation. Intourist handles it for the Soviet Union, Cedok for Czechoslovakia, Carpati for Romania and so on.

FOR THE American wishing to visit, all is simplicity. Obtain a passport, get a visa (all Communist countries now emphasize how easy that is) and hie off to your favorite travel agency. The Communists do business through American travel agencies, and they pay commissions too.

From then on, the changes begin. One does not simply ramble around Old Muscovy.

One plans an itinerary — chosen from the list offered by Intourist, or Cedok, or whatever state agency — and one pays for it before leaving home. Departures from these norms are liable to cause surprise, consternation, refusal.

Part of this is undoubtedly due to a pathological fear of espionage, gradually receding but nonetheless still strong.

Intourist often gives other reasons. It explains, somewhat sheepishly, that there are no accommodations in the out-of-the-way place you wish to visit. Or it says that the hotel are crowded in summer, why not come in winter?

BUT THERE IS no doubt of the Communists' sincerity in wishing to encourage tourism.

The Intourist office in New York offers a wall-high sheaf of color brochures that might put the Miami Chamber of Commerce on its mettle. Cedok's travel folders make Czechoslovakia well night irresistible. Romania and Bulgaria beckon from the pages of their tourist literature.

There is no glossing over the lack of plumbing, but this is made to seem unimportant, somehow, in exchange for the palaces of the czars, the castles of the vanished aristocracy, the glimpses of life in strange and fabled lands, the magnificent old churches in countries now officially atheist.

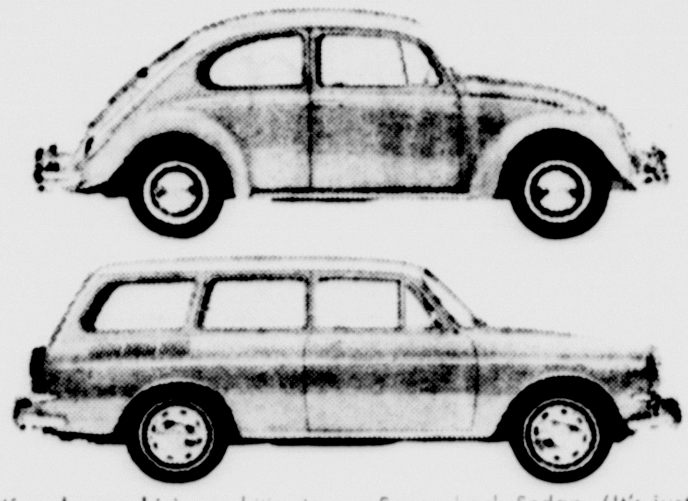
And the traveling is easy. You can enter from almost any place in Europe, by car, ship train or plane.

INTOURIST WILL even put you in the driver's seat, in limited circumstances, but the roads aren't much in East Europe, once off the main routes. If you're using your own car, bring your own spare parts.

Bring your own camera if you like, but be careful what you photograph. Don't take pictures from a plane, and remember that railway bridges, power stations and the like are sensitive. Film is hard to get; bring your own.

And when you leave the country, don't take any local currency with you. It's forbidden.

Pick up either Volkswagen in Europe.



If you have a driving ambition to see Europe, the cheapest way to do the driving is in your own VW. And picking it up in Europe is the cheapest way to buy one.

You can get a genuine beetle in any of 55 cities in 9 countries. And, if you want a little more room and a little more power, spend a little more money and get our Squareback Sedan. (It's just as genuine, but not so beetle-ish.)

We'll attend to the details of purchase, delivery, insurance and licensing. And if the car needs servicing after you ship it home, we'll attend to that, too.

If you think this is quite a lot, mail us the coupon and we'll show you how easy it is.

Tips On Tipping— Guidelines For American Abroad

In French it's "pourboire," in German "trinkgeld," in Spanish "propina," in Arabic "bakeesh" and in Chinese "cumshaw."

Translated into English, they all mean the same thing—tips. And who, when and how much to tip is a problem for the American traveling to new places at home and abroad, particularly for the first time.

NO ONE KNOWS for sure how the practice started. One version is that it began in 18th Century London when waiters set up bowls marked "To Insure Prompt Service" at coffee houses and pubs. The word tips comes from the first letter of each word, according to this story.

With few exceptions, such as Iceland, where it is frowned upon, and the Soviet Union; where it is forbidden, tipping has become virtually a fact of life around the world.

In many foreign countries, it long has been traditional for hotels, restaurants, night clubs, cafes, etc., to include a 10 to 20 per cent service charge on bills. But this has not solved the problem, particularly for the American unfamiliar with the custom, currency and language.

AMERICANS quickly learn bellboys, chambermaids, waiters, doormen and others still expect a litfle extra slipped into their palms. And then there are the porters, shoeshine men, and the restroom and cloakroom attendants.

There is no such thing as a perfect tipper. But a good rule-of-thumb is to tip as you would at home, keeping in mind the service charge and the difference in local conditions.

TIPPING CAB DRIVERS in America is practically a must. The minimum tip for short rides averages 20 cents in the big cities. For longer hauls, it averages about 20 per cent of the meter.

The American traveling by long-distance bus does not have to tip, even for handling of luggage. And never tip stewardesses or other crew members on plane flights. But skycaps at airports get 25 cents per bag and you can speed recovery of luggage from the racks with an additional gratuity.

At railway stations, red caps are paid—not tipped—25 cents per bag, and remember that means every piece placed on his cart, including parcels, paper bags, etc. On long-distance train trips, the pullman porter rates $1 per person, or $1.50 per couple, per night.

THE DINING car waiter gets 15 per cent of the bill and the bartender in the club car expects 25 cents for one drink or 20 per cent of the total check for more.

On short cruises, figure on distributing about 10 per cent of the fare for tips. Waiters get $1 per day per person as do room stewards. The wine steward should be tipped $3 to $5, depending on his services, and the palms of the maitre d' and captain should be crossed with $3 to $5 each.

Slip $3 per person or $5 per couple to the deck steward who tucks you into the chair and brings drinks and snacks.

Tip bartenders, night room stewards and other help for services rendered just as you would ashore.

JUST SOUTH OF Brussels, the mound of Waterloo where Napoleon met his great defeat serves as a reminder to visitors of the history that was played here. A lion, commemorating the battle, sits atop the mound.

Don't Let Illness Ruin Trip— Be Sure To Take Your Shots

Once again an outbreak of typhoid in a tourist-popular foreign country stresses the wisdom, if not the necessity, for Americans to take precautionary health measures before heading overseas.

Probably nothing can ruin a vacation more than illness, particularly in some strange country. Yet the risk could have been reduced by including a visit to the family physician on the "must" list of preparations for the trip abroad.

THE LATEST outbreak occurred in the town of Conflans-St. Honorine on the outskirts of Paris last December. No Americans were involved then nor were any affected in the 1964 outbreak in Aberdeen, Scotland.

But there were some Americans stricken, though none fatally, in the epidemic at the famed resort of Zermatt in the Swiss Alps in 1963.

All three countries have high sanitary standards on a par with those in the United States and the outbreaks were quickly quelled. But they pointed up why immunization against infectious diseases are so important for the traveler.

INOCULATION against typhoid is not compulsory for the American tourist. However, the U. S. Public Health Service urges anti-typhoid shots for Americans traveling anywhere in the world, including some sections of the United States itself.

The service also recommends vaccinations against paratyphoid, tetanus, polio and diphtheria in addition to those which may be required by various countries included in the itinerary.

Americans do not have to be vaccinated against smallpox to leave the United States. But a vaccination against such disease is compulsory for returning citizens.

Each must have a certificate of vaccination or other proof of immunity for re-entry from foreign lands with the exception of Canada, the Canal Zone, the west coast of Lower California in Mexico and some Caribbean islands.

Advice On How To Stay Well

The California Medical Assn. warns that, though at home you can be fairly sure of sanitation which protects your health, this isn't always the case abroad.

The association offers these tips for travelers:

Food and water may be safe in better hotels and restaurants, but it's still a good idea to be selective about what you eat. Thoroughly cooked foods are safest.

Bottled water should be used for drinking and brushing teeth and it's a good idea to avoid the use of ice in drinks since it may have been made from contaminated water.

Immunization shots should be obtained well in advance of a trip. Smallpox immunization is necessary for any trip outside Canada and the U.S. possessions and shots for typhus, cholera and yellow fever are needed for travel to many parts of Asia, Africa, Eastern Europe and Central and South America.

If you take medicine regularly be sure to take an adequate supply.

The Tourists Aren't The 'Litterbugs'

Travelers Are Acquitted On Basis Of A Survey

American tourists long have been singled out as the main culprits in despoiling the nation's highways and byways with litter.

A recent survey, however, indicates they have been grossly maligned.

The survey was conducted by Keep America Beautiful (KAB), the national litter-prevention organization. It takes the major blame away from the tourists and places it on the shoulders of local residents.

KAB ASKED professional and voluntary litter fighters — an equal number of men and women in all 50 states — the question:

"Who produces the most litter? Local residents or tourists?"

Local residents were indicted by 78 per cent. Only 13 per cent cited tourists while 9 per cent had no opinion.

The consensus was summed up by one respondent: "Like auto accidents, most littering occurs within 25 miles of home."

THE KAB survey also partially exploded another popular belief that people litter more in the summer. About 50 per cent of the litter fighters polled said littering was worst in the summer months. About 22 per cent said litterbugs are equally active in all seasons.

A substantial number said there is more littering in the spring, fall or winter.

Law enforcement officers are on the alert for litterbugs the year around, the KAB warned. Anti-litter laws are becoming tougher.

KAB cited some examples of stiff penalties:

Littering can cost up to $1,000 in Georgia.

MISSOURI AND Ohio provide fines of up to $500.

Fines in Kentucky run up to $300. Here in California, judges frequently fine litterbugs up to $250 per offense.

The average maximum fine is $100, which may be levied in such states as Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Pennsylvania and Wyoming.

New York City has a $25 limit for littering, but it makes up in volume of convictions for the relative smallness of the fine. More than 60,000 litterbugs were fined a total of more than $200,000 last year.

Judges in California, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, New Jersey, South Dakota, Texas and other states recently have meted out a new kind of penalty—making the punishment fit the crime.

Flagrant litterbugs are sentenced to clean up stretches of highway and beaches of empty cans, paper and other debris discarded by equally thoughtless or careless visitors.

KAB, which conducts a continuing public educational program to combat littering throughout the United States, urges all motorists to carry litterbags in their cars as the best way to contribute to the campaign to keep America clean. Most states provide receptacles along highways where the bags can be emptied or deposited.

THE OLD SOUTH with its remnants of plantation life holds a fascination for many American tourists. The scene here is the Oak Valley Plantation, in Louisiana, one of several such estates that are open for public visits.

A QUIZ FOR TRAVELERS

Test your travel I.Q. with this quiz prepared by Pan American Airways. Then, score yourself.

Score 20, and you're a geographic genius. At 15, you are still a star pupil. A score of 10 is not bad, but anything under five means you ought to get around a little more.

1. Many modern countries tend to change not only their size but their names. Most people, for example, know that Siam is the old name for Thailand, but not so many people know that the Gold Coast is now called Ghana. The former names of 10 countries are listed in the lettered column; the names by which these nations are known today are listed in the numbered set. Match them up and score one point for each correct answer.

a. Madagascar
b. Egypt
c. Palestine
d. Nyasaland
e. Persia
f. North Borneo
g. Northern Rhodesia
h. Chosen
i. Dutch Guinea
j. Abyssinia

1. Iran
2. Surinam
3. Ethiopia
4. Zambia
5. United Arab Republic
6. Israel
7. Sabah
8. Malawi
9. Korea
10. Malagasy Republic

2. There are some hotels around the world which rate as landmarks in the city in which they are located. Take as an example the Waldorf in New York or Sacher's in Vienna. Then, match the hotels in the lettered column with the cities in the numbered column in which they are located. Score one point for each correct answer.

a. Mandarin Hotel
b. Tamanaco
c. Phoenicia Intercontental Hotel
d. Imperial Hotel
e. Raffles Hotel
f. Grande-Bretagne
g. George V Hotel
h. Copacabana Palace
i. Chateau Frontenac
j. Mamounia Hotel

1. Marrakech, Morocco
2. Montreal, Quebec
3. Hong Kong
4. Rio de Janeiro
5. Beirut
6. Tokyo
7. Singapore
8. Athens
9. Paris
10. Caracas

Answers to travel quiz:

a. Madagascar—Malagasy Republic; b. Egypt—United Arab Republic; c. Palestine—Israel; d. Nyasaland—Malawi; e. Persia—Iran; f. North Borneo — Sabah; g. Northern Rhodesia—Zambia; h. Chosen—Korea; i. Dutch Guinea — Surinam; j. Abyssinia—Ethiopia.

a. Mandarin Hotel — Hong Kong; b. Tamanaco — Caracas; c. Phoenicia Intercontinental—Beirut; d. Imperial Hotel — Tokyo; e. Raffles Hotel—Singapore; f. Grande-Bretagne — Athens; g. George V Hotel — Paris; h. Copacabana Palace—Rio de Janeiro; i. Chateau Frontenac — Montreal, Quebec; j. Mamounia Hotel—Marrakech, Morroco.

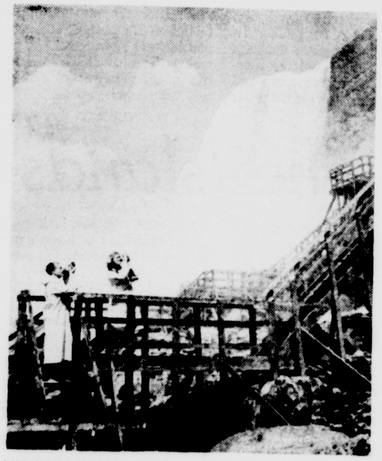
IT'S GREAT TO go abroad. But more and more Americans are discovering the scenic and recreation delights of their own country during their vacations. For instance, Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming offers grandeur that brings back many year after year. The camera is a necessary tool to capture something of the majesty of the falls.

Let's See The USA In 1966

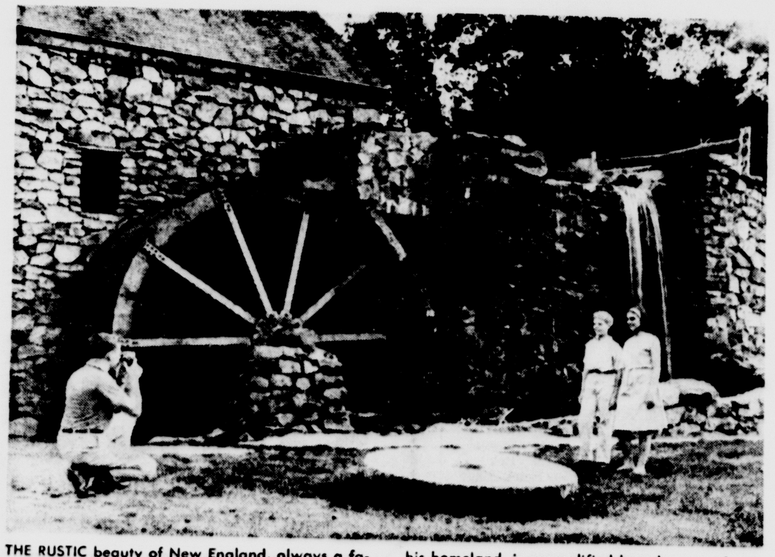
And Be Sure To Take A Camera

CALIFORNIA'S chief rival for floral gardens and for water sports is Florida, all the way across the country, with such attractions as pretty girls and Cypress Gardens seen here.

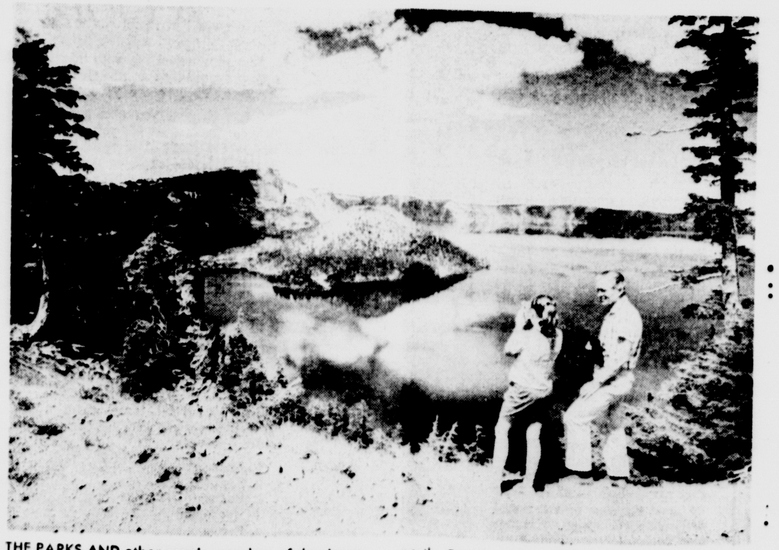


NIAGARA FALLS remains a traditional favorite with honeymooners and also enjoys continued popularity with the general American vacationing public.

IT IS EXCITING angles such as these in Utah's scenic Zion National Park that challenge the photographer in virtually every tourist. Both color and black and white film should be included in the camera gear, for some scenes demand one treatment, others a different approach. And often you will want to use both on the same subject.



THE RUSTIC beauty of New England, always a favorite target for the American tourist traveling his homeland, is exemplified here by one of Massachusett's Old Mills. History is everywhere you turn in the U.S.'s northeastern corner.



THE PARKS AND other scenic wonders of the American West are the equal of the natural attractions of any area in the world. In our neighbor to the north, Oregon, the vistas of Crater Lake lure visitors who can't resist putting cameras into operation.

NOT ALL OF America's prime tourist attractions are to be found in the wide open spaces. The cities, too, offer their delights. For instance, New Orleans' French Quarter, where an outdoor art exhibit is under way here. Even San Francisco Bay Area residents admit that New Orleans approaches their own metropolis in cosmopolitan scenes.

'Roughing It' In Comfort

"This vacation, let's go somewhere and really rough it!"

Thousands of American families set out on vacation trips every year with that announced purpose.

Tired of the suburban soft life, they long to test themselves against the elemental challenges of the great outdoors. They want to sleep in the wind and weather, wash in the ice-cold streams, find their own food and build their own fires for cooking it.

AT LEAST that's what they say they want.

Actually, according to the National Park Service, the average family heading "back to nature" hopes to find there most of the same comforts it left at home.

"With our rising standard of living, more people then ever before have more money and more leisure time for travel and they tend to want and to expect more conveniences," said George G. Downes of the U.S. Park Service's San Francisco office. "We are attempting to phase out our primitive campsites as funds permit."

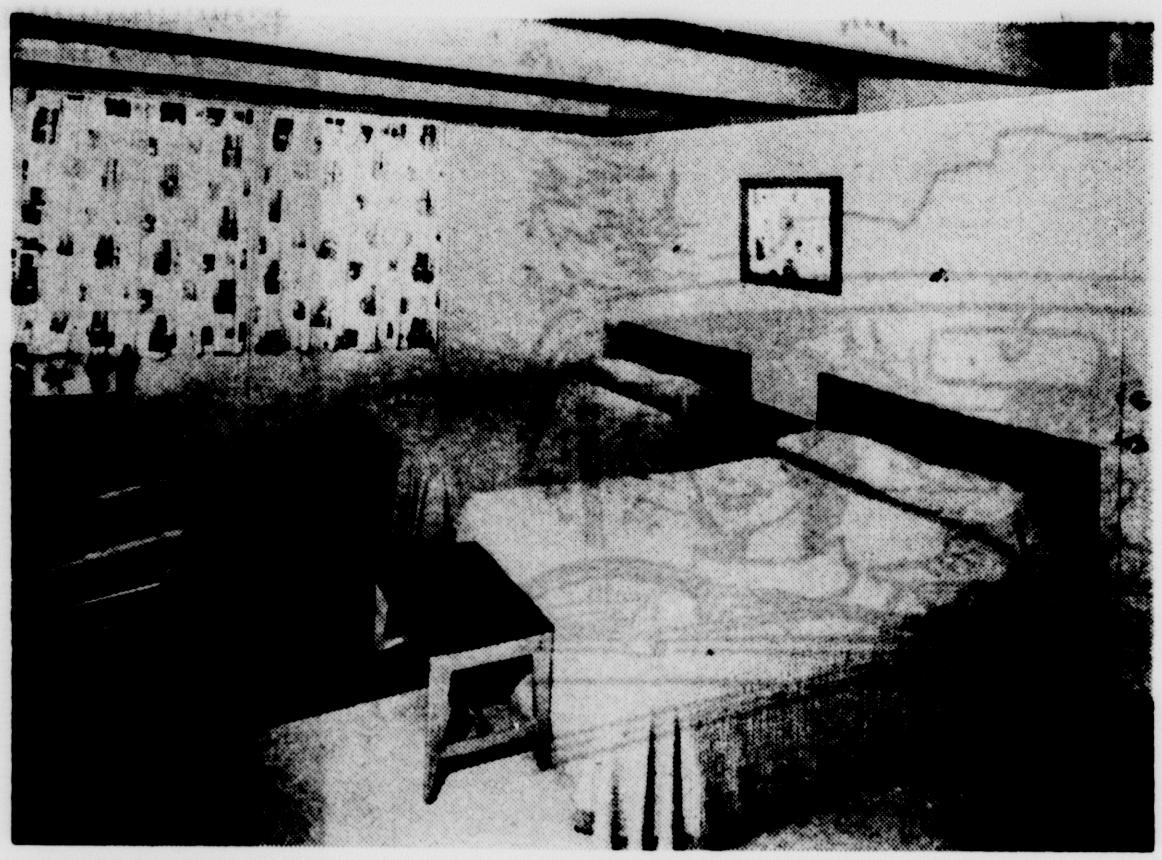
THE MODERN "pioneer" expects soft beds and warm covers, hot as well as cold running water, modern toilets, regulated heat, and good restaurants close by.

One indication of his hardiness was found in a recent survey in which campers entering parks were asked which items of "camping equipment" they brought with them. By far the most answered "camera," with "first aid kit" running second.

New conveniences greeting 1965 visitors to the oldest and most spectacular of the national parks, Yellowstone, gave another tipoff. While the park was closed between tour seasons, space heaters and water heaters were placed in the eight-plex cabins of its Canyon Village area.

HEATERS WERE provided for each room and Day & Night Manufacturing Co.'s 100-gallon commercial water heaters for each entire cabin. The park hopes to make similar additions in other areas as funds become available.

Further improvements of the national parks are being undertaken under the Congress-approved Mission 66 program. Scheduled for completion in 1966, this program includes building visitor centers, renovating existing facilities, and otherwise modernizing the parks "to assure the maximum protection of the scenic, scientific, and historic resources" and "to make them available for the use and enjoyment of present and future generations."



THIS COMFORTABLE ROOM is an interior unit of the Canyon Village tourist cabins in famed Yellowstone National Park. It is designed to make the "camper" as comfortable on vacation as he is at home. Primitive areas are gradually giving way to these kind of facilities.

They All Like To Surf In The Islands

Hand me my "gun", man, and let's hit the "heavies" off Waikiki.

The "soup" is fine for "hot doggin", but let's try for a "quasimoto" in one of the "big daddies" without a "wipe out".

That's surf talk, folks, and it's very much the "in" lingo among the beachniks in Hawaii.

Here, in this surfer's Valhalla, everyone who is really in the swim has a smattering of basic surf-ese. A "gun" for example, is a big wave surfboard which the pros prefer to the 20-pound fiberglas slabs used by beginners.

THE "HEAVIES" or "big daddies" are the giant breakers which have been known to tower up to 35 or 40 feet before crashing onto the beach. The "soup" is the foam from broken waves, ideal for novices, and "hot doggin" is stunt riding, usually in the foam. The "hot doggers" who try a bold stance as the board takes the waves are doing a "quasimoto."

If they don't make it, they do a "wipe out" or "take gas," or to put it bluntly, they get dunked.

A "ding" is a dent in the board and a "tube" is the hollow section in the wave. There are all sorts of terms, too, to describe ways to maneuver the board — spinners, standing islands, cut backs and so on.

SURFING ADDICTS not only talk their own language, but subscribe to surfing magazines, belong to surf clubs and sport surf togs. The surferettes in Hawaii wear bikinis, but Neoprene "wet suits" with booties and mittens are the fashion in cold waters up north. What is more, they go in for music-to-surf-by, and flock to surfing films such as "Going My Wave."

There was a time when surfing had its share of bad publicity, thanks to a cult of oddballs who threw tin cans at old ladies and staged beer brawls on the beaches. Today, however, surfing is as respectable a sport as skiing, and nowhere is it more respectable than in Hawaii with its fine surfing beaches at every turn.

When the surf is really rolling, dedicated surfers in Honolulu leave schools and offices, grab their boards and dash to Makaha Beach, 45 minutes from Waikiki on the west side of the island.

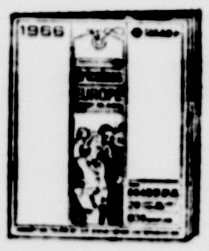
ANYONE WHO wants to try his luck at surfing in Hawaii might do well to take a few tips from champion Fred Hemmings, Jr. He offers this advice:

1. Know how to swim and relax in the water.
2. Let the local beach boy select a board suited to your height and weight. Boards rent for about $1 an hour.
3. Take a few lessons, and then go on to develop your own style.
4. Never surf alone or turn your back on the sea.
5. Do not let yourself become too tired.

SURFING LESSONS are readily available along the sands at Waikiki and at beaches throughout the Outer Islands. An hour's instruction at about $3.50 will show you how to get on from the side, and how to lie along the center line of the slab with the nose of the board about two inches out of the water. You paddle with hands slightly cupped and arms bent at the elbows. You steer with your arms as you would with the oars of a rowboat.

Do not use suntan lotion, incidentally, as it makes the board slippery. The best way, so they say, to turn around is to sit up near the end of the board and make your legs go in circles. When you're standing up, you can turn by placing a little more weight on one foot than the other.

FREE! 64-page book could save $200 on your European vacation.



This new book describes 20 first-class "Priceless" tours of Europe and Scandinavia. If you took any one on your own, you'd spend at least $200 more. (American Express advance planning makes this saving possible.) Example: A "Three-Week Whirl" in 11 countries from $956*, all inclusive.

*Your price from San Francisco. Based on new jet economy excursion air fares, effective April 1, subject to government approval.

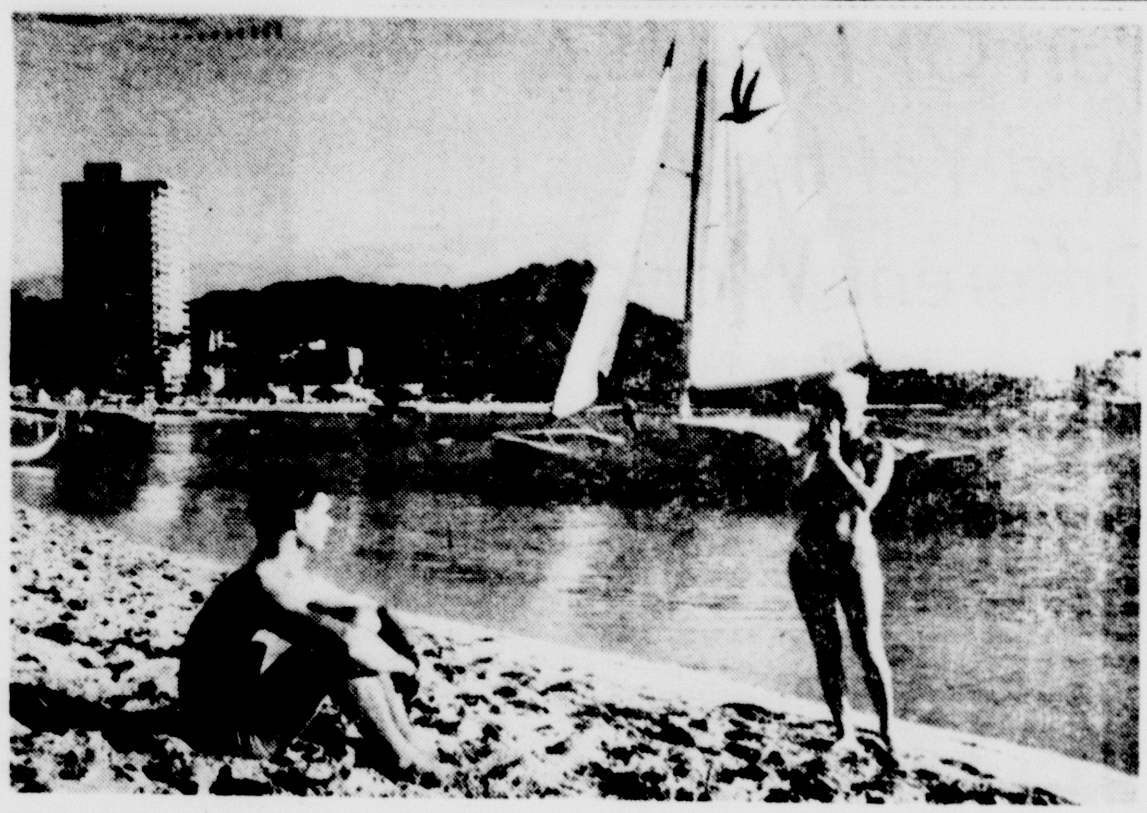
The Contrast Of Two Trips To The Islands

By WISHARD BROWN



IT'S ALWAYS vacation time in the islands. And, of course, one of the most popular spots is famed Waikiki Beach of Hawaii. However, there are other islands to be visited, beaches to be enjoyed and sights to be seen. The visitor thus returns time and time again to this American state in the Pacific.

Old Time Kamaaina's tell you that your first visit to the Hawaiian Islands should be made by ship.

After that, the Islands' magic hold on you will call you back and your return visits will want to be made as speedily as possible, so as to enjoy every moment to the fullest.

My first trip to the Islands was by ship during World War II, but instead of steaming through the Golden Gate with the colorful paper streamers spilling off the deck rails as you sail into the sunset, mine was as a guest of the government, departing from a South Pacific island which was being abandoned except for the cocoanut trees and a few French plantation owners.

OUR SHIP was an ancient Dutch steamer with a Tonkanese crew. The ship was covered with rust and the crew appeared to be rusty too. I'm sure the only things that held the hull of the ship together were the barnacles.

Already on board were additional guests — a battalion of infantry, the "Hawaiian Rifles" —now joined by our own infantry outfit of some 600 anxious GI's who were expecting this bucket of rust to return them to to the States.

By the time we got on board, bunk space was not obtainable, so 12 of our squad improvised by stretching two pup tents over a deck refrigerator. This shelter could hold us all—if we were lying in a straight, prone position.

The voyage lasted 12 days, being calculated by a carton of 24 tropical Hershey bars which I carried on board. Having one for breakfast and one for dinner, these bars lasted until the night before our arrival at Pearl Harbor.

THIS WAS not my idea of an ocean cruise. No comfortable deck chairs; instead, squatting on the deck, if you could find the space. No movies, no hi-fi, no cocktails, no hot meals, no showers, in fact, it was a "stinking" trip!!

All of these experiences were recalled as I made my most recent return visit to the islands aboard a Pan American Jet Clipper, departing from the San Francisco International Airport. From now on, flying is the only way for me.

The comforts are many and the trip so short. In just a few, short hours from takeoff to touchdown, you can enjoy a variety of pleasures designed to please all on board.

The "Theater-in-the-Air" allows you to select programs of your choice from comedy, mood music, pops, classical and special programing for the children—some nine different programs in all of varying length. Also, a full length movie, which you can enjoy without the TV commercials.

MY ONLY complaint was that the individual earphones could be more comfortable. My having an exceptionally large lower jaw complicated matters, for every time that I opened my mouth, the pressure exerted by my lower jaw would pop the earphones out of my ears.

The meals in flight were a gourmet's delight, being prepared by Maxim's of Paris. A large, colorful menu allowed you a variety of selection in choice of entrees, served with fine wines and cordials.

So enjoyable is the hospitality that you are tempted to keep yourself strapped in and never leave the aircraft, but as the Clipper doors open and you get the first feel of the gentle tradewinds, you are ready to begin your Hawaiian holiday.

IT HAS been said by many seasoned mainlanders that on your first trip you should see all of the Islands, if only briefly, and become acquainted with the differences and the delights of each island. This time I was anxious to visit Maui, as a place missed on previous visits.

I was not disappointed in the island, but my choice of hotels could have been better. Having never stayed in Maui, I selected the Sheraton-Maui. Unfortunately, the personnel was overtrained, commercial mainland style. But this is not typical of the majority of the Hawaiian resorts.

However, little time was spent there and I was completely fascinated by the village of Lahaina, years ago the whaling capital of the Mid-Pacific. This village is what you'd expect a South Seas community to look like—a large banyan tree in the center of town, covering a city-block area, alongside the fascinating little shops and the Pioneer Inn, with a side veranda and barroom, unchanged and unpainted in the past 80 years.

THE VILLAGE has a modern shopping center on its outskirts, but the central area has its own, unique charm.

A souvenir hunter would lose his mind in Charlie King's curio shop. Charlie is what you'd expect to find as a typical South Seas beachcomber. He allows you free run of the shop, even to the extent of going behind the counters and examining the merchandise. All types of South Seas and Hawaiian items are for sale at reasonable prices and one of the most popular is the Hawaiian helmet blowing shell which is blown by the natives at all of the resort area torch light ceremonies.

Dining out is fun in Lahaina and two favorites of mine were the Lahaina Broiler, an open-air dining room where the surf seems to creep up to your table, and Pineapple Hill, on a gentle knoll overlooking pineapple fields and the Maui coast towards the Islands of Molaki and Lanai.

THIS REMINDED me of one of the French plantations that I visited while in the New Hebrides Islands in WW II.

Here, too, island delicacies can be found that are sometimes unobtainable elsewhere—turtle soup and turtle steak, for example.

Maui offers excellent swimming, although the surf is heavy compared to the beach at Waikiki.

The golfer would enjoy the Royal Kaanapalli which adjoins the Royal Lahaina and the Sheraton-Maui hotels. Even on a calm day, it can be a real test for the average golfer. Unfortunately, four days was the extent of our stay in Maui, returning to Honolulu via Pacific Air Charter, a comfortable six place airplane that picks you up almost at your hotel doorstep and whisks you back to Oahu. This service I found to be ideal for island-hopping, and it is not too well known by the mainlander.

AS A WHOLE, the beautiful islands of Hawaii offer something for everybody.

For those who like the whirl and excitement, there is Waikiki—Kauai for scenic granduer —Hawaii for the volcanic activity — and the colorful Kona coast and Maui are becoming more popular retreats for the island visitor. Those outer islands are fast enlarging their facilities for the thousands of new visitors expected each year, as Hawaii is truly a year-around vacation land. And from the standpoint of time, you can be in Hawaii in about the time it it takes you to drive to Lake Tahoe.

Part Of The USA, And Yet It's A Different World

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

Ten hours air time away lies a bit of the United States where the culture is a blend of Spain and Africa, where steel bands play calypso rhythms, and where old Spanish forts stand guard over ultra-modern hotels.

The 10 hours is actual flying time by Delta Air Lines jet from San Francisco Airport to San Juan, capital of Puerto Rico—including stops at Dallas and New Orleans.

Ten hours is enough to change worlds. Though Puerto Rico is United States territory — and may someday become the 51st state—it is in effect a foreign country, but one without the difficulties of vaccinations, passports, visas, and exchange of currencies.

THE LANGUAGE is Spanish (though the knowledgeable taxicab drivers all speak English quite well enough to communicate and are likely to prove gold mines of gladly given information).

The culture is something that evolved through the extermination of the native Borinqueno Indians by the Spanish conquerors who followed Columbus to the island, and their replacement by slaves imported from Africa. The beat of that steel band is likely to contain rhythms of both Spain and Africa—along with Tin Pan Alley. But the limbo, a "dance" that is equally characteristic, is pure West Indian (though perhaps with a deep, forgotten African past).

When one steps from that Delta jetliner, as I did, he finds the airport facilities convenient, with much less walking than was necessary at San Francisco's airport.

The airport is on Isla Verde, a promontory of the main island of 3,435-square-mile Puerto Rico.

SAN JUAN proper is on a separate island connected by several bridges.

Here, in the Plaza de Colon, is a statue of Christopher Columbus, who landed on Puerto Rico on his second voyage to the Americas, in 1493. His landing was not at San Juan, however, and the honor of being the first place where Columbus set foot on what is now United States soil is disputed between Aquadilla and Aguada. Columbus called the island San Juan Bautista.

San Juan was founded in 1511 by Juan Ponce de Leon, first Spanish governor of the island, and became the capital eight years later. It was from here that Ponce sailed in 1513 on the search for the "fountain of youth" that took him to Florida. There is a statue of him, too, in San Jose Square.

GUARDING THE "rich port" from which the whole island eventually took its name are Fort Brooke, with Morro Castle jutting into the ocean, at one end, and Fort San Cristobal, midway on the ocean side. These are of the Spanish vintage.

The municipal government for about 20 years has been encouraging restoration of the old Spanish buildings which cling to the hillsides below these forts —and which had become a filthy slum area with the passage of time. There, along the narrow old streets—some of which are composed entirely of steps running up the steep slopes—are intriguing houses, many with wood and wrought iron-ornamented, narrow balconies along their second floors.

This is a city older than any on the mainland of North America. But from atop what remains of the great city wall, or from the eminence of Fort Brooke above San Jose Plaza, where Puerto Rican crowds often demonstrate for independence, one can see the modernist lines of the new luxury hotels—and almost hear the band music and the click of dice and roulette wheels.

THOSE HOTELS and their gambling casinos are highly important to the economy of Puerto Rico.

In 1952, the newly created commonwealth, under its first (and so far, only) popularly elected president, Luis Munoz Marin, began "Operation Bootstrap" to try to lift itself from dependence on U.S. government subsidies.

To attract industry, it offers no property taxes for 10 to 17 years to any company locating on the island — plus freedom from U.S. corporate taxes.

It has been quite successful. However, though the factories put dollars into Puerto Rican pockets, their tax-free status does little to support the government. So it depends heavily on tourists and gambling.

ACCORDING TO Eduardo Rodriguez Perez, supervisor of activities for the Economic Development Administration, a half million tourists visited last year by air, and 100,000 by water.

Many of them left plenty of dollars at the seven gambling casinos in San Juan which are licensed by the government.

The rule is strict for a casino license: It can be only in a luxury hotel with more than 100 rooms, and the hotel must be operated by a legitimate company. One hotel was built and in operation when the government discovered it was owned by a man with close gangland connections. The casino license was at once revoked. Since the hostelry could not operate profitably without it, the owners sold out to the Conrad Hilton organization. It became the San Jeronimo Hilton, second of two Hilton hotels in San Juan (the other is the Caribe Hilton), both with gambling casinos.

BESIDES THE casinos, the government draws gambling revenue from two other sources: Horse races three days each week at El Comandante, which has pari-mutuel wagering, and a weekly government-operated lottery. The latter, however, is played mostly by the residents rather than the tourists.

The music in those swank hotels may be by jazz bands, perhaps with one or two steel drums to add a West Indian touch. But the tourist should be sure to visit some night club with a steel band.

The instruments of a steel band are nothing but oil drums, cut down to various sizes and with their metal heads bent to concave shape. On these, the musicians beat with fingers, palm and heel of the hand. The music is like nothing you have heard before, and you will never forget it.

AND IF YOU find the right place, you can see the limbo danced in San Juan — by a lithe native who will, with a filled highball glass balanced on his forehead, wiggle his way under a bamboo pole no more than a foot off the floor, while remaining on his feet. That, too, is never to be forgotten.

But San Juan, even with its old walled city, its forts, its luxury hotels and its limbo, is by no means all of Puerto Rico. As the Economic Development Administration points out, there are 3,000 miles of roads on the island — and every one of them goes some place that is interesting.

There are beautiful beaches, laved by the startlingly clear aquamarine waters where the Atlantic meets the Mediterranean. There are picturesque villages, sugar cane plantations. And some of the finest hotels are not in San Juan.

AND THERE IS the rain forest, El Yunque, about 25 miles southwest of San Juan on a mountain rising to 3,500 feet above sea level. Here the annual rainfall is over 180 inches, with rain nearly every day followed by sunshine. More than 300 species of tropical trees grow on El Yunque, and among them are more than 50 varieties of tree ferns, hundreds of orchids, numerous kinds of birds, and fascinating butterflies.

When you leave the island, a great trip home awaits you. The Delta jet leaves in the morning, and because of the difference in time, gets you home for supper. And its route lies directly over Watling Island, where Columbus first set foot in the New World, calling it San Salvador. It lies also directly over other islands of the Bahamas chain.

Puerto Rico is a year-around vacation spot, but "the season" ends in April, as the nights, usually around 70 degrees, get warmer during the summer.

THE TRAVELER flying into Puerto Rico has this view from the air as he approaches the capital city of San Juan. Morro Castle is in the foreground, at the tip of San Juan Antiguo, and behind it the city of San Juan where modern buildings sit next to old Spanish houses lining narrow streets. Still farther back is the main island of Puerto Rico.

THE ANCIENT WALLS of Morro Castle, built by the Spanish to guard Puerto Rico ("the rich port") juts over the clear blue water before the admiring gaze of these two visitors. Behind it lies San Juan where the 16th century meets 1966.

CANADIAN PUBS GET NEW LOOK

Here is heart-warming news for travelers of moderate means.

Any visitor who feels overwhelmed by the 50-million-dollar beauty treatment which Vancouver hoteliers have recently given their city should frequent some of the less ambitious of the bistros, in the quieter streets of British Columbia's great metropolitan seaport.

These are blossoming with a new, sometimes exotic, gaiety.

Simple taverns, once the haunt of solemnly dedicated beer drinkers, are sprouting white-clad chefs (who prepare baron of beef sandwiches, deep-fried prawns and innumerable snacks) and pert "Bunny Girls" who carry the food to the customers.

And that isn't all. The accent is on decor, with a capital "D."

Results are sometimes astonishing. On a quiet, seemly and inexpensive pub-crawl in Vancouver you can now move from a half-timbered Elizabethan inn to a Queen Anne mansion, from there to the Paris de Toulouse Lautrec, thence to an imitation gas-lit interior harking back to the New York of Lillian Russell and Diamond Jim Brady, and on to the dark blue velvet drapes and glittering chandeliers of an establishment which resembles a publican's dream of the St. Petersburg of the Romanoffs.

THE SIMPLE TAVERNS of Vancouver, Canada, are now sprouting white clad chefs and smiling maids who carry the food to the costumes. Decor is now, too.

Road To Guadalajara Beckons To Tourists

To drive down Mexico's west coast to Guadalajara, it is suggested you begin at Nogales, Ariz., and cross the border there.

Take the Mexican West Coast Highway straight down to Hermosille, which might be your first overnight spot. You also will pass by Guaymas which has two good hotels and, if it looks interesting to you, stay there.

THE ROUTE, which is hard to get away from, goes from Nogales to Guaymas to Hermosille, Los Mochis, Mazatlan, then turns up to Tepic and goes on to Guadalajara.

There are plenty of good accommodations that run from $5 to $6 per person along the way.

Gasoline (buy Gasolmex in the green pumps) runs about 32 cents U.S. per gallon and is the best grade. You will have no shortage of gas stations on this or any other route in Mexico. The filling stations are operated by the government-run petroleum industry so your U.S. credit cards are no good in Mexico for gasoline.

RESTAURANTS and hotels which honor international credit cards always have a sign in front listing them.

There is plenty of tourist literature available on Guadalajara and the surrounding areas. You might try the nearest Mexican consulate for this information. If they don't have all you want, go to the Mexican Government Tourist Office in Guadalajara and they will supply you with maps, data and everything you need.

U.S. oil companies put out good maps on Mexico.

A Salute From The Orient

"The Orient Salutes Marin," a 90-minute travel show on Hong Kong and the Orient, will be presented in Olney Hall at Marin College, Kentfield, at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Featuring Chinese classical and folk dances by Julie Leung and Vivian Yau, two air hostesses of Cathay Pacific Airways, the travel presentation will also include the prize-winning travel film on Hong Kong, "A Million Lights Shall Glow," as well as a narration accompanied by color slides on Hong Kong and the Orient.

Souvenirs of Hong Kong and the Orient will be drawn as door prizes at the end of the presentation.

Sponsored by the Hong Kong Tourist Assn., Canadian Pacific Air Lines, Cathay Pacific Airways and United Air Lines, the travel show is open to the public free of charge by invitation through the travel agents of Marin County. Invitations may also be obtained through the San Francisco offices of the sponsoring organizations.

Appropriately the narrations of the travel presentation are undertaken by two Marinites. The Orient will be narrated by Victor Eckland of San Anselmo, representing Cathay Pacific Airways, while Lorenzo Lo, of Mill Valley, information director for North America of the Hong Kong Tourist Assn., will narrate the presentation on Hong Kong.

"The Orient Salutes Marin" is part of a nation-wide travel presentation visiting 14 major cities of the United States. Already seen by audiences in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Dallas, the presentation will visit Denver, Kansas City, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., and Boston after the presentation in Marin.

Sights At Our Own Doorsteps

If your plans for that trip to Europe, that flight to Hawaii or on across the Pacific, that "see America" cross-country tour, or whatever your dream trip destination might be, must await another year, do not despair.

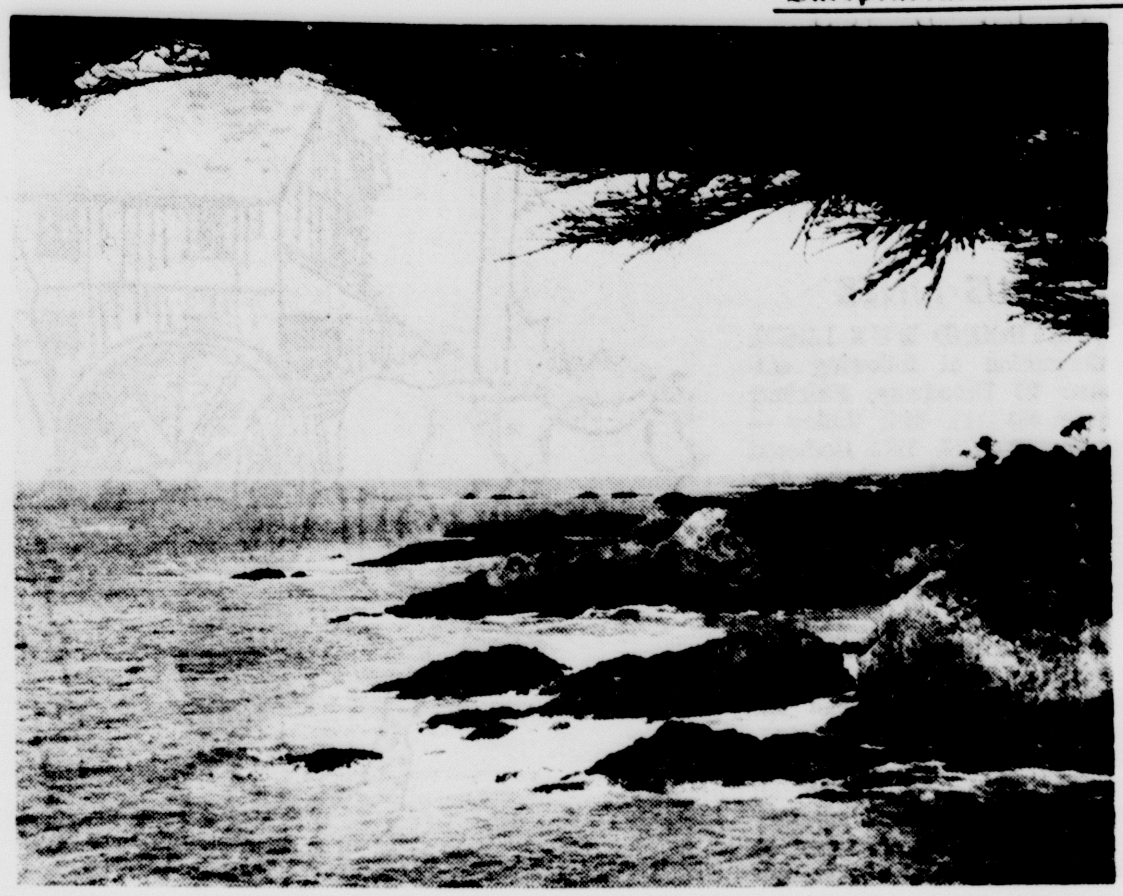
Marinites are fortunate in that right at their doorsteps are a bevy of top vacation attractions.

These sights attract visitors from throughout the world.

Yet many a Marinite has never seen them. Or has seen them all too rarely.

Some of them are pictured here in photographs furnished by the Redwood Empire Assn., an organization dedicated to the publicizing of Northern California's many tourist attractions.

If you haven't yet visited Mendocino's rugged coast, Mount Shasta's majestic slopes, Death Valley's desert floor, San Francisco's many cosmopolitan sights, the Luther Burbank home in Santa Rosa, the many state and national parks and monuments within our state, the Redwood Empire Assn. suggests you do so now.



THE LOVELY AND rugged coast of Mendocino County to our north is world famous for its beauty, and for the wildflowers that come down to the Pacific and contrast with the blue of the ocean.

THE RUSSIAN RIVER country is one of California's favorite vacation and weekend playgrounds. Shown here is the pleasant Rio Nido Beach area in Sonoma County, offering modern accommodations easily reached by highway.

Plan Ahead For Your Auto Trip

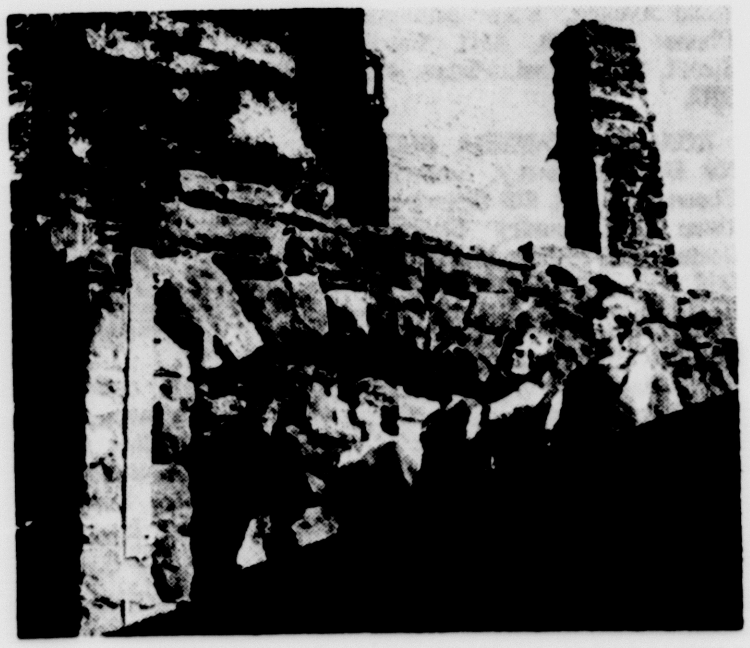
A study of maps and routes for a vacation journey can save many frustrations and sometimes many miles of unnecessary driving, the California State Automobile Assn. advises.

A few minutes study of the routes for the proposed motor trip will familiarize the driver with the proper turns, road conditions, freeway interchanges or highway junctions which he will be facing during the outing.

FAILURE TO spend the time looking at routes and maps could cause late arrival at a planned destination, extra miles of driving or missing the more scenic or enjoyable route to the final destination.

A driver who is familiar with his routes and road conditions is a much more relaxed driver, and as a result is a safer driver on the road.

To achieve the most out of a trip, some pre-planning is necessary.



JACK LONDON State Park in the Valley of the Moon near Glen Ellen features the eerie remains of writer London's famed Wolf House, destroyed by fire in 1913.

INCLUDED IN the planning is where you plan to make stops, advanced accommodations reservations, distances for the entire trip, and preventive maintenance of the family car.

From the extra minutes spent in planning hours of pleasure, relaxation, rest, recreation, and protection will be gained, the California State Automobile Assn. predicts.

Calendar Of Events For '66

There's no better proof that "all the world's a stage," as Shakespeare put it, than Pan Am's "Calendar of World Events for 1966."

Covering over 100 major countries from Afghanistan to Zambia, the calendar indicates that there is a spectacular show somewhere on this planet every single day of the year.

Since Festival USA is the theme of the United States Travel Service in 1966, the calendar features the top events in each of the 50 states in the Union. Notable among them are: The Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D.C., from April 12 to 17; the Kentucky Derby in Louisville from April 27 to May 7; Indianapolis 500 from May 24 to 30; the Jazz Festival in Newport, R.I., from July 1 to 4; the 35th Annual American Indian Exposition in Anadarko, Okla., from July 11 to 17; the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial in Gallup, N.M., from Aug. 11 to 14; the Lawn Tennis Championship in Forest Hills, N.Y., in September; Aloha Week in Hawaii from Oct. 16 to 22.

Events are listed under various geographic headings, that is, the Caribbean, the Middle East, Europe, Asia and the Far East, Africa, South America, Central America and the Pacific. The listing for each area reflects in many ways the culture, climate and customs of the people.

Custom Tailoring

The island of Trinidad with its Oriental community compares with Hong Kong when it comes to custom tailoring. A man's suit, made from the finest British tropical worsted, costs about $35. Clothing can be made overnight, but two or three fittings are advisable.

The Odyssey

VOL. 1 PUBLISHED BY REDWOOD TRAVEL ADVISORS, 1344 FOURTH ST., SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, PHONES 454-4932, 479-4044 No. 1

EDITORIAL

This is the first of a regular monthly appearance of the ODYSSEY. This edition was put together in a matter of hours to meet a deadline. We will try to keep you informed each month on what is new in transportation, hotels, tours, visa and health requirements and fare information.

Redwood Travel Advisors has provided a travel service for Marin County since 1948 Redwood's travel library is very extensive and provides up-to-the-minute information on all parts of the world.

No travel arrangement is too small or too large for Redwood Travel.

FREE VACATION TO EUROPE, HAWAII & MEXICO

Redwood will soon announce a plan where you might receive your vacation FREE. A series of tours with set departures will be made available through their five offices. Every 16th booking will establish a free arrangement, which will be given to one of the group. Book all your travel at a Redwood office.

YOUTH FARES 50% DISCOUNT

Most scheduled airlines have a youth fare program. If you are under 22, you can purchase an Identification Card for $3.00. By presenting this card at time of ticket purchase you pay only 50% of the fare. There are some hitches; no reservations can be made, you must stand by until all full fare passengers are boarded, also military standbys. We don't recommend standby unless time is unimportant. Applications for Identification Cards are available at Redwood at no cost. Youth fare is not valid to Honolulu and on certain holidays.

25 PER CENT SAVINGS ON AIR TICKETS

UNITED AIRLINES has filed a new tarift to take effect in late March for a 25% discount on round-trip tickets. This will provide a saving of $76.18 on a flight to New York. The fares will not be good from noon Friday to noon Saturday, and from noon Sunday to noon Monday. There will also be a period in June, July and August when this 25% discount will not be applicable. All other airlines have also filed for this same discount.

HAWAII AT STILL LOWER FARES

In December new jet planes carrying over 200 passengers, will be in service to Hawaii. The projected one-way fare is $85.00, and even as low as $50.00.

NOW FIVE OFFICES IN CALIFORNIA

Redwood Travel now has in operation five offices with a total staff of 26. The main office is located at 1344 Fourth Street, San Rafael. Branch offices are located at 710 Second Street in Davis; Redwood National Bank Building in Napa; and at 2777 Cleveland Avenue, Coddingtown, in Santa Rosa; also at 198 Northgate Shopping Center in Terra Linda. All offices are still directed from 1344 Fourth Street, San Rafael.

EUROPE FOR $7.00 A DAY

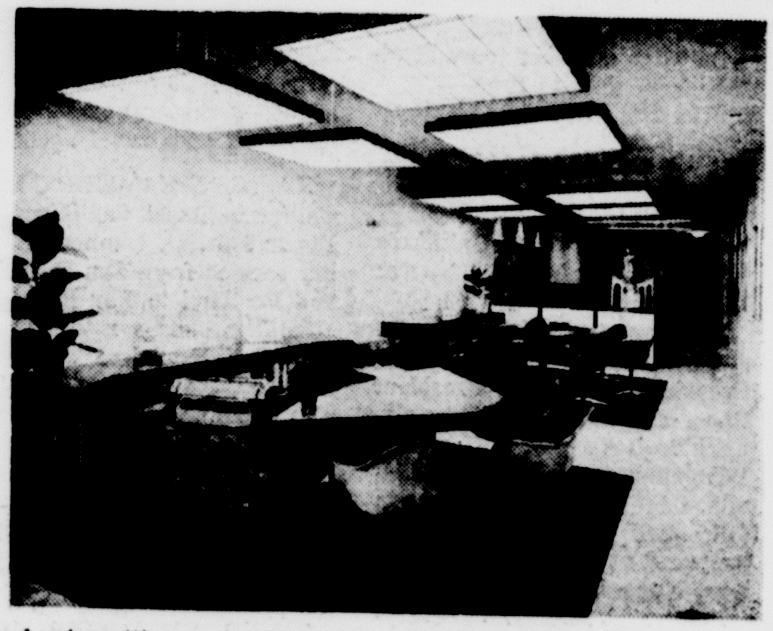
Age limit 30 years.

YOUNG AMERICAN TOURS JULY 3—JULY 31, 1966

Young American Tours is offering a thrill-packed twenty-nine-day tour of New England and the Eastern Seaboard to high school students between the ages of 15 and 18. Far more than a mere scenic excursion, this tour emphasizes to the soon-to-be-college students the wonderful historic background of our country's greatness. Also, it will allow them to see and examine a number of our Eastern colleges and universities as they consider their future education.



This tour is one of many facets —educational, historical, scenic and fun-packed. It takes the student by train and chartered bus through nineteen of our fifty states and two Canadian provinces. Almost thirty colleges, universities and institutions of advanced learning will be seen or visited. The student will see some of North America's most beautiful scenery — the Sierra Nevada and Rocky Mountains, Great Lakes, Niagara Falls, St. Lawrence Seaway, rolling wooded hills and rock-bound coast of New England, Cape Cod, Statue of Liberty, Hudson River, Chesapeake Bay and many others. And he or she will re-live many of the events that formed the foundation of our country's heritage—the landing of the Pilgrims, Boston Tea Party, signing of the Declaration of Independence, Lexington and Concord, the Battle of Gettysburg, the founding of Jamestown, Washington, D.C., and its many historical events and many, many others.

In addition, he or she will be conducted through many of our leading institutions of learning and lore—Fort Dearborn, Williamsburg, the United Nations Building, our country's Capitol, the Smithsonian Institution, Library of Congress, Harvard University, the Naval and Coast Guard academies and numerous others.

Add to this the fun part of this tour—cruises along the Ottawa and Hudson Rivers, a Broadway stage show, Radio City Music Hall, and the camaraderie of a train and bus ride—and the student has all the ingredients of a never-to-be-forgotten experience.

TOTAL TOUR COST — $935.00 (includes all taxes) from San Francisco.

Call or write to Paul Hartman for attractive tour brochure.

GO ABROAD . . . TO CANADA BY SEA

What will undoubtedly appeal to many, not only because the opportunity of "getting away from it all" at the drop of a hat is a stimulant we all need at some time or other, but also because the low cost and high attractions are such that considerable interest is bound to be aroused anyway, is the choice of two short, but extremely fascinating, package tours we are now able to offer. They could be the jackpot for anyone who can ill-afford to be away for longer than a week, yet wants to go somewhere for a rest and and something that is different. Taking advantage of the round trip voyages SAN FRANCISCO/VANCOUVER/SAN FRANCISCO scheduled for those two likeable giants of the P &O-Orient Lines, S.S. "ORSOVA" (29,000 tons) sailing Wednesday, June 22nd, and S.S. "ORIANA" (42,000 tons), sailing Friday, September 2nd, a complete package has been put together in connection with each sailing, consisting of the round voyage and a full program of well planned sightseeing ashore during the day each ship will be at Vancouver, that beautiful city of British Columbia which has so much to offer and where Americans are always welcome. Included are visits to the world famous Stanley Park, Lost Lagoon, Shakeaspearean Gardens and the Queen Elizabeth Arboretum, to name but a few of the highly illuminating attractions provided, and you will be taken from the ship's side and returned, with a special Canadian Smorgasbord style dinner or lunch in between.

"ORSOVA" and "ORIANA" are very popular units of the P & O fleet. Stabilized and fully air-conditioned, and with a name for comfort and service, they offer what can only be described as the almost cruise-like conditions of life at sea in a well run ship. A fine invigorating trip must surely be anticipated in either; restful if you wish or with all the fun in the world if this is preferred. Either way, the fine healthy life on board will surely blow away the cobwebs and be of great benefit to mind and body.

And there can be no question of living out of the proverbial suitcase, with constant packing and unpacking, and wondering if there is going to be room for a souvenir or two or three to take home. Your baggage allowance is generous, and everything you take with you can be left on board in the cabin while enjoying yourself ashore in Vancouver . . . there is simply no problem.

Anyone interested is recommended to apply to us forthwith for one of our special brochures.

RACING FANS . . . ATTENTION!

Competition Press and Autoweek is sponsoring a fabulous 24-DAY RACING TOUR, with tickets and transportation provided to the INDIANAPOLIS 500 . . . NURBURGRING 1000km . . . BELGIAN GRAND PRIX . . . and 24 hours of LeMANS!

PRINCESS PATRICIA IS HOTEL IN ACAPULCO

PRINCESS PATRICIA may be the answer for your hotel accommodations in Acapulco, during this busy season, when most hotels are sold out. A few exciting cruise dates remain on PRINCESS "PAT'S" itinerary between now and Easter.

The "TOREADOR CRUISE" sails from Los Angeles on February 25th; "PINATA CRUISE" on March 11th; "VIAJE de la LUNA CRUISE" on March 25th; the "EASTER CRUISE" sails on APRIL 8th; and the "VAYA CON DIOS" cruise on April 22nd. The duration of the full cruise is 14 days—calling at PUERTO VALLARTA, MAZATLAN, ACAPULCO and MANZANILLO. Your ship is your hotel while in port.

You do not have 14 days to spare? Sail one way on the PRINCESS PATRICIA and return by air; you may even call a few days in Mexico City for a bull fight or a hop to the Pyramids.

PRINCESS PATRICIA returns to her INSIDE PASSAGE CRUISE at the end of the Mexico Spring season; offering enroute a unique three-country cruise. Sail from Los Angeles on Friday, April 22nd, to Mexico and return all the way to Victoria, Canada on May 3rd.

Again, if you only have a few days to spare, why not board ship on April 29th in San Francisco for three fun-filled days to Victoria?

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

More bargains on the Nonesuch label:

SHOSHTAKOVICH: Sonata for Cello and Piano; R. STRAUSS: Sonata for Cello and Piano in F Major—Harvey Shapiro, cello/Jascha Zayde, piano — Nonsuch Stereo H-71050:

This is the first stereo performance of the Schumannesque cello sonata by Strauss, and the equal of the other stereo version of the Shostakovich piece.

The Russian composer's effort of 1934 was one of the last works he wrote before being leaned on by the party authorities and prevented from composing in an atmosphere of artistic freedom.

Both of these works exhibit the singing voice of the cello and are more Romantic in nature than most modern works.

MILITARY FANFARES, MARCHES & CHORUSES FROM THE TIME OF NAPOLEON—Brass and Percussion Ensembles of Gardiens de la Paix de Paris directed by Desire Dondeyne, Vocal Ensemble directed by Jean Rollin—Nonsuch Stereo H171075:

A curious and unusual collection of colorful band and choral music from the royally magnificent Napoleonic Empire.

Just as the soldiers' uniforms were ridiculously ornate, so is this music. Melodies are short and to the point, but there is much repetition, with ceremonial drums, cymbals, etc. Composers such as Gossec, Paisiello, and that indomitable fellow, Anon., will be recognized. Great in stereo!

LITURGICAL MUSIC FROM THE RUSSIAN CATHEDRAL—Soloists, The Johannes-Damascenus Choir of Essen directed by Karl Linke—Nonesuch Stereo H-71073:

This choral a cappella music of the Russian church is very little known in the outside world. It has as long and distinguished a tradition and reportory as Gregorian Chant in the Catholic Church.

The melodies are not actually plain chant, but very close to it. The music swells up and dies away in late-Romantic fashion, the harmonies frequently suggest sacred music of Mozart or Haydn, and the fantastic Russian bassos are often used in a doubled bass part a full octave below the already-sub-basement level of the low voices.

This music must be heard to be believed—it makes Western unaccompanied church music sound pale indeed.

Although the lp is rechanneled from an original mono tape, the sound is full of depth and richness.

BAROQUE MUSIC FOR RECORDERS—Concentus Musicus of Denmark directed by I. K. and A. H. Mathiesen—Nonesuch Stereo H-71064:

Edward Tatnall Canby's liner notes are the first I've come across that begin by explaining that the recorders in question are not the sort you put reels of tape on and make your baby cry into, but instead the type of ancient wooden flute that one blows. This explanation should be little needed in Marin County, where the recorder is one of the most popular do-it-yourself instruments, and several amateur groups exist for those interested in ensemble performance.

This lp is one of the best collections of recorder music I have heard, and the performers are absolutely unbelieveable—almost no squeaks, gasps or intonation problems usually heard even with professionals. Perhaps the tape editor was the genius, I don't know.

There are some fascinating galliards, Polish and German dances from around 1600, sonatas (both in A Minor) by Loeillet and Handel, and a sonata for recorder, oboe, violin and continuo by Johann F. Fasch, a predecessor of Bach's whom the great master admired very much.

MARC-ANTOINE CHARPENTIER: Oratorio de Noel (Pastoral on the Birth of our Lord Jesus Christ)—Roger Blanchard Ensemble — Nonesuch Stereo H-71082:

This 17th century work for the Christmas season partakes of both the Italian and the French styles in music of the period. The characters of the angels, shepherds, etc. are both dramatic and sympolic. The music is much more colorful than the liturgical works of the Flemish or Dutch school of this period.

MARIN POETS' CORNER

APOLOGY

I lie in silence, tears full in my eyes,
And look at him despondently. I know
He will not speak. My sigh of counterfeit
Profundity falls on impassivity and dies.
Unhappiness becomes a ritual, and in this
I always offer tears to his inquiring quietness.
I wait for him to speak, to pierce
My discontent, to offer comfort through analysis.
He lingers; and silent, goads me so
That I, frantic, irate, burble forth
A practiced protest to his unresponsiveness
As if that were my problem. But I know
With shame, the unyielding silence we now share
Is just reproach to my self-righteous, inarticulate
despair.

STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

Long after the sweetness of the discount purchase has wilted away, the bitterness of the poor service and wrong combination of items that were purchased remains. Ponder these words! Remember, that the purchase of a component home music system is a purchase intended to give many years of relaxation and enjoyment. Remember, also, that the average user is not a radio technician; therefore, he cannot select and interconnect and maintain the components without the aid of an expert.

Let's analyze the so called DISCOUNT STORE and the quality HI-FI STEREO SALON. In order for any store to exist, it must make a profit on what it sells to pay its employees and its expenses. The average discount house cannot afford to hire experienced radio journeymen knowledgeable audio consultants. To make a profit, the discount store has to hire low salaried clerks, with little or no experience in their products, and has to maintain a low operating overhead. What does this mean to you the consumer? Low operating overhead robs you of being able to shop in a well organized atmosphere where there are sufficient personnel to help you with your needs and to give you the individual attention that you deserve so that you can make the right selection. Instead, the consumer is left to drift through a barn-like structure and between counters heaped with merchandise. Select what you can with little or no help.

The purchase of Hi-Fi Stereo Components from the average discount house is even worse. The consumer gets a sealed carton containing the component. When the consumer arrives home, opens the carton and finds that the item does not function properly, he has no recourse with the discount house. Most of them do not have any service department and will not take returns, warranty repairs, or exchanges. The consumer is left to drive to the nearest factory warranty station, plunk down his unit, and wait from 3 weeks to 3 months to have his unit repaired.

Demonstration facilities, if any at all, are very meager and coupled with the inexpert knowledge of the salesman gives the consumer little chance for a very wise home music system.

Next week, the advantages of the Hi-Fi Stereo Salon.

Who Drives Best—The Men Or Women?

Tam District Instructors Dodge A Loaded Question

No one has really ever settled the question of whether men or women are the better drivers.

The five-man driver instruction team in the Tamalpais Union High School District, through their experience in drivo-trainer, classroom, and training cars, often consider the poser.

In two sessions per year at each of the district's schools—Tamalpais, Drake, and Redwood — the teachers prepare youngsters for the road.

THEY TEACH in the simulated conditions of the mobile drivo-trainer, where they can observe and measure by instrument; they teach in the conventional classrooms where they can discuss, lecture, and test; and they teach in the dual-controlled automobile where they can demonstrate and watch.

So who's the better driver, girl or boy?

Naturally, to a complex and tricky question like that, no one's going to give a direct and simple answer. It could be dangerous.

HEAD OF THE district team, which does a land rush business during the summer as well as during regular year and in adult sessions, is Morris T. Shepherd of San Anselmo, a veteran driver education teacher.

He says: "The mores and social concepts of boy-girl relationships become apparent when they get involved in driver training. Boys think they have to show their physical male superiority by being daring. They soon learn that physical ability is secondary to good judgment and healthy attitudes about driving.

"Girls, on the other hand, entertain a belief that chivalry still exists in driving. (It probably never did.) They soon find out that there is no double standard on the road. Men don't give women the right-of-way on the basis of sex, for example."

Shepherd says the female student also realizes, sometimes to her surprise, that she can be just as adept in the necessary physical skills. She realizes that she can compete, at least in the driving world.

"THAT NOT ONLY helps the girl, giving her confidence and eventual competence, it helps the boy get a more realistic view of himself. It tends to stabilize his ego," Shepherd adds.

Then he concludes: "In general, male and female students attain the same amount of physical skills, develop the same attitudes, and exert the same good judgment. Regardless of sex, the hope is to get them all in the category of safe and sane drivers when the course is completed."

Marin's Irish Don

Timoteo Murphy Was A Colorful And A Much Beloved Figure

By FLORENCE DONNELLY
Independent-Journal Historian

Don Timoteo Murphy, who received the vast land grant of Rancho Santa Margarita, Las Gallinas and San Pedro, was a giant of a man— physically, in his properties, and morally.

The grant, received from Gov. Manuel Micheltorena on Feb. 14, 1844, covered what is now the northeastern portion of San Rafael, and extended north to Ygnacio Pacheco's Rancho San Jose.

Don Timoteo was born in Wexford County, Ireland, in 1800. His father was in comfortable circumstances and gave the son a fairly good education. After leaving school, young Murphy was employed in a commercial house in Dublin, leaving that for a more lucrative position with Hartnell & Co., an English firm operating in Lima, Peru.

HE WORKED IN Lima two years, then was sent to Monterey in California, where Hartnell had its northern branch. This was in 1828.

Murphy, the "extranjero," as foreigners who came to California were called by the Spanish-speaking population, commanded instant attention. He was tall, six feet, two inches in height, and almost 300 pounds in weight. Young, erect, handsome, fair-skinned, he rode a horse as if he were molded in the saddle.

But it was not stature alone which commanded respect for the newcomer. He had learned to write and speak Spanish fluently while in Lima, was witty and generous, and became extremely popular with the Spanish-speaking population.

Jasper O'Farrell, the pioneer civil engineer who knew Murphy well, said that the Hartnell enterprises (packing and exporting beef and hides) in Monterey, failed.

"MURPHY, BEING, a good shot, started otter hunting on the Coast, a lucrative employment, as the skins were worth from $50 to $80 each," O'Farrell related. "He continued in this business until 1838, when he joined the partisans of Governor Alvarado against the appointee for that office, Don Carlos Antonio Carrillo. Alvarado, being successful, appointed Murphy administrator of the mission at San Rafael (San Rafael Arcangel), a position of responsibility and trust which he retained to the end of the Mexican regime."

In 1839, Don Timoteo became a naturalized citizen of Mexico. He had decided he wanted to live in Marin when he first visited his good friend, Capt. William A. Richardson, at his Rancho Saucelito.

When Murphy took over his duties at the mission, he found it in a deplorable condition: The buildings were badly in need of repair and the Indian population had dispersed since the decree of secularization.

IT IS SAID of Don Timoteo: "As administrator of the San Rafael mission he discharged his duties with rare humanity, business methods and absolute justice. Especially is this true of his treatment of the Indian neophytes. Alone among the various administrators, he made an earnest, sincere and almost successful effort for their betterment, spending many years of his life in this unselfish work.

"He secured for them a grant of land comprising upwards of 57,000 acres, which embraced the entire Nicasio Valley and the north shore of Tomales Bay —a section containing considerable arable land, great stretches of unsurpassed pasturage and inexhaustible fishing grounds.

"Don Timoteo learned the Indian tongue and, partly through his kindly nature and commanding presence, gained the respect and friendship of the natives. As Indian agent his authority was absolute, but he exercised it so lightly he was regarded only as a wise friend. He induced his Indian wards to settle in rancherias on the Nicasio grant, where their needs were best met, gave them cattle, agricultural tools and seeds, and encouraged them in the ways of civilized life."

DURING THE mission days some of the neophytes had become good mechanics and craftsmen. The younger Indians had acquired the rudiments of education. They imparted their knowledge to others.

Under the Mexican law the Indians could not sell their products directly to traders, but their agents were authorized to sell any surplus beyond the needs of the community. In many instances the Indians were the losers, but Don Timoteo worked for the best interest of his wards. With the proceeds from the sales he made for the Indians he bought tools, clothing and other necessities for them.

In February of 1844, Don Timoteo was granted five square leagues, which included a portion of San Rafael and land to the north, by Governor Micheltorena. The grant was known as San Pedro, Santa Margarita and Las Gallinas.

DON TIMOTEO built a large two-story hacienda on his property on the west side of C Street between Fourth and Fifth in San Rafael. In his spacious garden, vegetables were grown. At one side were the stables for the fine horses and sheds for the imported cattle.

He also had a kennel for his 50 greyhounds and Irish setters which he used for hunting.

The Irish don often rode one of his horses to visit the Indians at their rancherias in Nicasio to learn what supplies were needed. He also had a sort of walking delegate, a young Indian known as El Corporal, who reported to the don twice a week.

Under Don Timoteo's mild and wise administration the Indians led contented, carefree lives and showed marked evidence of advancement in the younger generation.

DON TIMOTEO always claimed that, "given a decade or more of fair treatment, the Indians will develop into a fine people."

Indians, friends from the other ranchos, strangers, all were welcomed to the hacienda. There they feasted and rested before they mounted their horses and rode to their destinations, sometimes to Sonoma or remote ranchos.

One of the more frequent visitors was Antonio Osio, who had the grant to Rancho Punta de Los Reyes Sobrante of 48,189 acres, a vast section of the Point Reyes Peninsula. Don Osio raised cattle and some sheep on the rich grazing land.

Frequently Don Timoteo rode over his vast empire to the shores of San Pablo Bay. Often he returned with a deer slung over the back of his horse. Wild game abounded in the hills and flocks of ducks and geese darkened the skies in their flight.

BUT SOON the land, too, was darkened by the arrival of John C. Fremont and his troops. Ostensible purpose of his visit was to make a geographical survey for the United States. However, from reliable sources, it became known that Fremont had secret orders to work out plans for the occupation of California. His men, including a bodyguard of Delaware Indians, and a ragtail army of hunters, scouts and farmers, carrying axes, were a fearsome sight.

It was in June of 1846 that Fremont and his "company" arrived in San Rafael and took over the mission as his headquarters. The second day after his arrival, he ordered the killing of three unarmed Californians, who were on their way to Sonoma. An account of this was given by Jasper O'Farrell, who was present when Fremont gave the order.

Fremont took 60 of Don Timoteo's fine horses and, as he had done at many ranchos in California, made no effort to recompense the owner.

UNTIL THE occupation of California by the United States, Don Timoteo was alcalde of the pueblo of San Rafael, agent for the Marin Indians, land commissioner and justice of the peace.

Although Don Timoteo and the other holders of land grants were worried by the invasion of Americans, he continued to hold open house at his hacienda and to welcome strangers.

Edwin Bryant, who wrote "What I Saw in California," and who was traveling from Yerba Buena (San Francisco) to Sonoma, said: "We put up at the house of Mr. Murphy, a scholastic Irish bachelor, and found a table spread with cold mutton and beef." Next day Bryant, his party and their horses, refreshed, left to continue their journey.

IN HIS BOOK, "Forgotten Pioneers," Judge Thomas F. Prendergast wrote: "The only recorded case in which the authority of the military in civil matters was disputed during the American territorial regime in California was that of Alcalde John H. Nash of Sonoma (irregularities in his acts). General Kearney appointed L. W. Boggs to succeed him in 1847. Nash denied the general's right to remove an alcalde. Nash was arrested and taken to Monterey . . .

"The high regard in which Don Timoteo was held is shown by his appointment with J. R. Snyder as commissioner to investigate the charges and report findings to the governor.

"Murphy was named on a committee of Americans in San Francisco in 1847 to protest to the President of the United States against the appointment of General Fremont as governor of California. When information was received from the East that an attempt would be made to induce the President to appoint Fremont governor, opposition was aroused and a public meeting was held in San Francisco."

THE CALIFORNIA Star, issue of June 19, 1848, noted: "The prominent men named were Nathan Spear, R. H. Sherman, Frank Ward, T. J. Farnham, Timothy Murphy, Jasper O'Farrell, Robert Semple, Thomas Leese, Leisdorff and Guerrero."

Although he could no longer aid the Indians in Marin, Don Timoteo's heart was touched by the plight of children who were left without parents, by the frequent epidemics which swept through the colony of argonauts. Don Timoteo was a bachelor and, not having children of his own, lavished his affection on those of others.

Always a man of action, Don Timoteo deeded to the Roman Catholic Church a large piece of property on Market Street (where the Sheraton-Palace Hotel now stands) in San Francisco. He stipulated that a school and orphanage should be built there.

Don Timoteo made several trips back to his native Ireland. Dissatisfied with local methods of cattle raising and agriculture, he brought back a shipload of animals, pedigreed horses, cattle, swine and Merino sheep, as well as good seed and the newest of farming implements.

THE IRISH DON was now a wealthy man, ruler of a vast empire. He continued to visit the Indians and, although he had no authority or legal responsibility to help them, he continued to do so.

Now in his middle years, he yearned to have some of his own relatives with him. His nephew, John Lucas, arrived from Ireland to visit with him in 1849, and Don Timoteo's younger brother, Matthew, and two of his children also came from the Emerald Isle to stay at the hacienda in San Rafael.

John Lucas was much like Don Timoteo, soft-spoken, kind and generous.

Matthew Murphy, on the other hand, had a hot temper, was impulsive and disliked taking orders. However, the family had a wonderful life together. All enjoyed the visits of friends at the hacienda and particularly the fiesta celebrating St. Raphael's Day in October.

THE FIESTA had been started by Don Timoteo, and hundreds of people came in small boats to San Rafael. The hacienda was filled with friends and gigantic feasts were prepared there. The vaqueros, riding spirited horses, performed great feats of horsemanship, galloping at high speed to pluck handkerchiefs from the ground.

The horses jumped high hurdles and the vaqueros would lasso wild cattle as the crowd applauded.

The vaqueros wore brilliantly colored blouses, dark pants and boots, often with spurs that came high above the ankle. The horses had bridles and saddles mounted in silver and gold.

John Lucas yearned to see the Irish lass, Maria Sweetman, to whom he was engaged. He returned to Ireland and brought his bride back with him in 1855.

WHEN HE arrived, both Don Timoteo and Matthew Murphy were dead. The great Irish don was stricken fatally ill in January of 1853. From what is said by those who cared for him tenderly, his Indian servants and his close friends, it is believed he was a victim of appendicitis.

Although he was racked with pain, Don Timoteo's mind was clear.

He said he wanted to make his will and to make a deed of about 317 acres of land on his Las Gallinas grant. The deed was written by Judge Al Birney and was made to Archbishop Joseph Alemany of the San Franciso diocese for the purpose of establishing a school or seminary of learning for orphans. The deed provided that if the land were not used for the designated purpose it would revert to Don Timoteo's heirs.

THEN THE will was drawn and read back to Don Timoteo. He left to his brother, Matthew, and John Lucas, the remainder of his vast estate. He made minor bequests, including money for four of his "faithful Indian servants." However, he provided that the money should be invested for them and clothing and other necessities bought with the proceeds.

He also instructed the executors of his will, James Black, Patrick Lambert and James Miller, to buy silver engraved loving cups for his godchildren, Augustina Black, Julia Miller, Catherine Merrell, Catherine Pacheco, Juan Reed and Toto Martin. There was no provision for a huge memorial for the great don. He did not need one.

He signed the deed and the will in the presence of witnesses Judge Barney and D. K. Richards, and then lapsed into a coma.

The giant don was dead on January 13, 1853. The deed was recorded on the day of Don Timoteo's death. The will was filed a short time later.

IT WAS A brisk March morning and Matthew Murphy was riding horseback on the trail he liked the most, to Punta de Quenta (San Quentin Point), which is now a main highway to the Richmond - San Rafael bridge. The convicts at the prison were working near the regular trail and it was closed.

As Matthew rode along, a guard shouted to him to halt. Whether the horseman heard the order or refused to heed it is not certain; but a shot rang out and JOHN LUCAS was the nephew of Don Timoteo Murphy, and, like his uncle, a popular and important figure in early Marin. He was an heir to much of the Murphy property in the county.

MRS. JOHN LUCAS was the Irish-born Maria Sweetman. Don Timoteo's nephew returned to Ireland from California to marry his sweetheart and bring her back to Marin.

Matthew fell dying from the saddle.

This was indeed a sad homecoming for John Lucas and his bride. The adobe and the property in San Rafael had been sold. The adobe later served as the Marin County courthouse until the present structure, now facing destruction, was completed in 1873.

John Lucas and his wife wanted to have their first child born under their own roof, so they moved into a small house about where the Silveira ranch home is located on Highway 101 now. The eldest daughter, Alice, and several other children were born there.

THE HOME burned to the ground in January of 1863. The Lucas family lived in small houses until they moved into an imposing two-story white house in 1867. This was on the Santa Margarita Ranch of 2,340 acres. It extended from Puerto Suello Hill, covering what is now Los Ranchitos, Terra Linda and Lucas Valley.

The heirs of Matthew Murphy owned what was the McNear property, Peacock Gap and China Camp.

On the property which had been deeded to the Catholic Church for an orphanage and school, St. Vincent's was built. Both motherless girls and boys were reared there.

The late Miss Maria (Dotie) Lucas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lucas, told of her childhood and her girlhood days in the big house on the ranch, where friends stayed for weeks as houseguests and enjoyed the bountiful feasts.

DURING THE summers she and her friends (the girls riding side-saddle) would go to the summit of Mt. Tamalpais where they enjoyed a picnic lunch. On Sundays, the family went to mass in the chapel of St. Vincent's.

The girls were educated in convents, most of them at Notre Dame in San Jose. The boys were students at Santa Clara, and one of them completed his education at the university in Dublin.

Mrs. Ernest Langdale (Mary Cadogan), daughter of Mrs. Patrick Cadogan (Alice Lucas) and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lucas, who lives in San Rafael with her sister, Carmelita, recalls a later era.

She said: "Some of the happiest days of our lives were spent on the ranch."

THEY HAD the privilege of stopping the train, which had a right-of-way over the Lucas property, at the Lucas crossing, about where the Terra Linda interchange is located now, to ride to Tiburon and later to Sausalito to board the ferry for San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucas had a summer home at Bolinas where the children and grandchildren would gather each year. Sometimes they would ride in a buckboard, sometimes in a carriage. The women and girls wore linen dusters to protect their clothes and had veils tightly drawn over their hats.

The coachman would give the horses a strong brushing to cleanse the animals of dust and sweat before they were put into their stalls.

MRS. LANGDALE remembers her grandmother, Mrs. Lucas, as a delightful person, warm and gracious. Her hair was long and dark until the years brought gray to it.

John Lucas was kind and generous. He and his wife gave the property for Mt. Olivet Cemetery to the Catholic Church and that is where Mr. and Mrs. Lucas are buried. The body of Don Timoteo was first laid to rest in the churchyard at the San Rafael mission. Later the remains were interred in the family plot at Mt. Olivet.

With the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas (he died on March 7, 1897, and she in 1910), another era had gone.

The Lucas home ranch became the property of the M. T. Freitas family. Now the former Lucas home is gone to make way for St. Isabella's Church, rectory and school.

A Marin Profile—

No Thumb-Twiddling Ahead For Frank Beckmann At 78

By ROSS DAVIS

"I don't just want to sit and twiddle my thumbs," remarked a spry, goateed little man who appeared to be in his early 60s.

"Maybe I should at my age," he added, though not with much conviction, "but my way of life is profitable and enjoyable, and my health is good."

There's little evidence that Frank H. Beckmann, aged 78, of Marinwood, need be concerned with twiddling in the near future. Traveler, businessman, author, lecturer, photographer, speech instructor—he's been all, and apparently will continue as most of them.

THE FIRST LABEL comes with an impressive number of jaunts, the traveling to more than 100 countries and islands in the past 29 years. His businessman title was earned long before that, having entered the sales field with an Ohio company in 1913.

The "author" handle developed from the first two, with 16 books published in connection with his business experiences and three more on travels. Lecturing came also as a fusing of journeys and business training. Photography was a hobby that came naturally with the traveling.

Speech instruction, however, was more evolution than goal for Beckmann, and it is a topic that moves him quickly to his seat's edge with enthusiasm.

IT STARTED insignificantly enough, with the observation while he was an industrial engineer with the San Francisco firm he organized of Beckmann, Hollister and Co. in 1925 that there was a large need and desire by business people for speech training.

"We tried referring them to public speaking courses and correspondence studies," he said, "but apparently that was not what they wanted. They wanted the practical businessman's public speaking training."

Beckmann said his firm became intrigued with the demand, and since what was asked seemed neither awkward nor complicated, "we developed a copyrighted course, different from anything on the (speech-teaching) market, then or now."

THE COURSE, he said, was not advertised, yet over 15,000 people have taken it.

"Governor Brown was one of our outstanding students," Beckmann said. He added they were introduced by a friend when Brown was still San Francisco's district attorney, and who said of Brown: "One day this man is going to be governor of California and he needs your training."

Instruction started in a 14-member class composed of district attorney personnel, Beckmann said. Later, when Brown became governor, Beckmann drove for many weeks to Sacramento for additional instruction.

TRAVELING, for Beckmann, has been a lifetime project, with a "See America First" approach in his youth. In 1934, however, he indulged in a two-month trek to Mexico.

The pattern was established soon after. With a three-month trip to the Orient, including Manchuria, Beckmann was soon hooked. "You take a few trips," he acknowledged, "and you want to travel all your life."

The wanderings through the 100 countries have followed on at least a one-a-year program for the past 29 years. Beckmann said the motive was pleasure and information, rather than business, although the three travel books were a consequence.

HIS WIFE, Jeannette, whom he wed 19 years ago, fortunately also loves to travel. In October of 1959, the couple carried off a globe-trotting trip in the 80-day manner attributed to Jules Verne, but in modern airliners.

That trip, and others, understandably has filled their home and yard at 280 Adobestone Court with enough relics and souvenirs for a junior-grade museum. There are carvings from Haiti and Tahiti, llama-fur patches from Peru, and copper trays from India.

There is even a replica of a Torii Arch, honored in the Japanene Shinto religion, in their backyard. Not surprisingly, however, there is also space still available there, incentive enough for Beckmann to continue his refusal to twiddle his thumbs for years to come.

BECKMANN, born in Lapeer, Mich., in 1887, took his early schooling at Flint High School, in Michigan. Industrial training followed at the University of Wisconsin, with postgraduate work at Bradley Polytechnic Institute at Peoria, Ill.

He then attended Stout State College at Menominee, Wis., and taught industrial training for four years in a Garfield, Wash., High School.

This he followed with teaching at Everett, Wash., and next at Kansas State Normal College at Emporia. From 1911 to 1913, he was head of the industrial training department at Tamalpais High School in Marin County, prior to going to New York for sales training.

HIS ORGANIZATION of his San Francisco firm followed shortly thereafter, lasting until his business retirement 12 years ago.

Not the least of Beckmann's endeavors is being instrumental in organization of two breakfast clubs, the Golden Gate Breakfast Club, San Francisco, 17 years ago, which started with 12 men and now has its 160-member limit, and last December, the Marvelous Marin Breakfast Club.

The latter, Beckmann stated, began with inviting 12 men to The Kettle in San Rafael. To date, there are 92 members, all executive or professional men.

SO WHAT ABOUT his non-twiddling plans? More travel, mostly, said Beckmann, but also more lecturing across the country, and perhaps more forming of clubs.

Too, only last January he started a new public training course for 18 business and professional men in Marin County. "After you get to be my age, you don't want to feel useless," he said. And needn't.

IN HIS MARINWOOD home, surrounded by mementoes of his travels, writing, lecturing and business careers, Frank H. Beckmann, 78, thinks, not of the busy past, but of the still active years that lie ahead. (Independent-Journal photo)

"FLOCKED FABRIC HELP IN SELECTION GUIDES"

Here are some simple guides learned at the National Institute of Drycleaning to help you in selecting flocked fabrics.

"Examine the flocked fabric or design for splits or pin holes. If you find these; the flocking will eventually "give" and break apart.

The areas around the flocked design or between parts of it should not pucker or rippie.

Bend the fabric or design between the fingers. The fabric should be flexible. Stiff boardy fabrics or designs will crack with wear and cleaning.

Some fabrics are flocked on both sides; others on one side only. If the fabric is flocked on only one side, the fabric side should not show cracks, bubbles, hairlines, or feel hard.

Hold the fabric up to the light. The design should be sharp and distinct . . . not muddy or indistinct.

The flock itself should feel soft, slightly cushiony. If the flock is too thin it feels stiff; if too thick, hairy.

Rub your fingers over the flocked area. If the flock feels gritty, it will eventually wear off with wear and cleaning.

Note if the flock clings to your fingers and clothes. If you see lint, the flock is shedding."

Consult your professional drycleaner on the care of your flocked fabrics.

WHEN law enforcement officers fire at the San Rafael pistol range, whether fulfilling their departmental qualifying requirements, or practicing for upcoming competitive shoots, they aim at special targets that are silhouettes of human beings. Marin Law Officers Keep Their Target Eyes Sharp

Pistol Shoots Serve Practical As Well As Recreation Purpose

By DON KEOWN

For the law enforcement officer, his gun is a tool that can protect the public and perhaps save his own life.

But it can also be a piece of sporting equipment as well as a weapon.

For the men who make up the pistol teams sponsored by police agencies across the country to compete against each other in the PPC (Practical Police Course) system devised by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, their guns are both these things.

One such group is the 12-member squad made up of officers from the San Rafael Police Department.

THEY'VE BEEN shooting on the range off Francisco Boulevard near the sanitation plant as a competition group now for nearly three years.

It all started back in 1963 when the Kensington Police Department asked to use the San Rafael range for its annual spring match.

"We decided that since the shoot was going to be held right here in our own city we ought to be represented," John Riordan recalls, "So four of us entered as a team, and we did surprisingly well, considering our lack of competitive experience. We finished 15th among 65 teams."

AND THAT, he adds, was the way the San Rafael Police Department Pistol Team all began.

An older group in the county is the crack Marin County Sheriff's Department squad, long among the top marksmen in California, and three years running state police pistol shooting champions.

"It's our ambition," says Riordan, "to catch up with them, and some day outshoot them. We feel we're gaining."

Also coming up fast is another younger team—the Novato Police Department sponsored marksmen.

SAN ANSELMO'S force has just begun fielding a team as well.

Competition among the law enforcement agency-sponsored teams is unlike that of civilian meets.

For one thing, the police officers fire at targets that are cardboard silhouettes of human beings.

The Practical Police Course competition calls for four-man teams, with each man firing 50 shots for a possible score of 250, as hits in the vital center area of the target earn five points, strikes elsewhere a lesser number.

THE SHOTS ARE fired from a distance ranging from seven yards (where the shooter must get off 10 rounds in 25 seconds) to 60 yards, and from 10 different stances including sitting and kneeling.

Theoretically a crack team could get 1,000 points.

"But I've never seen that," says Bart Stinson, who with Riordan, Jim Carlton and Dick Douglas made up the original foursome that first represented the San Rafael force back in 1963.

Before then, the San Rafael officers had used the Francisco

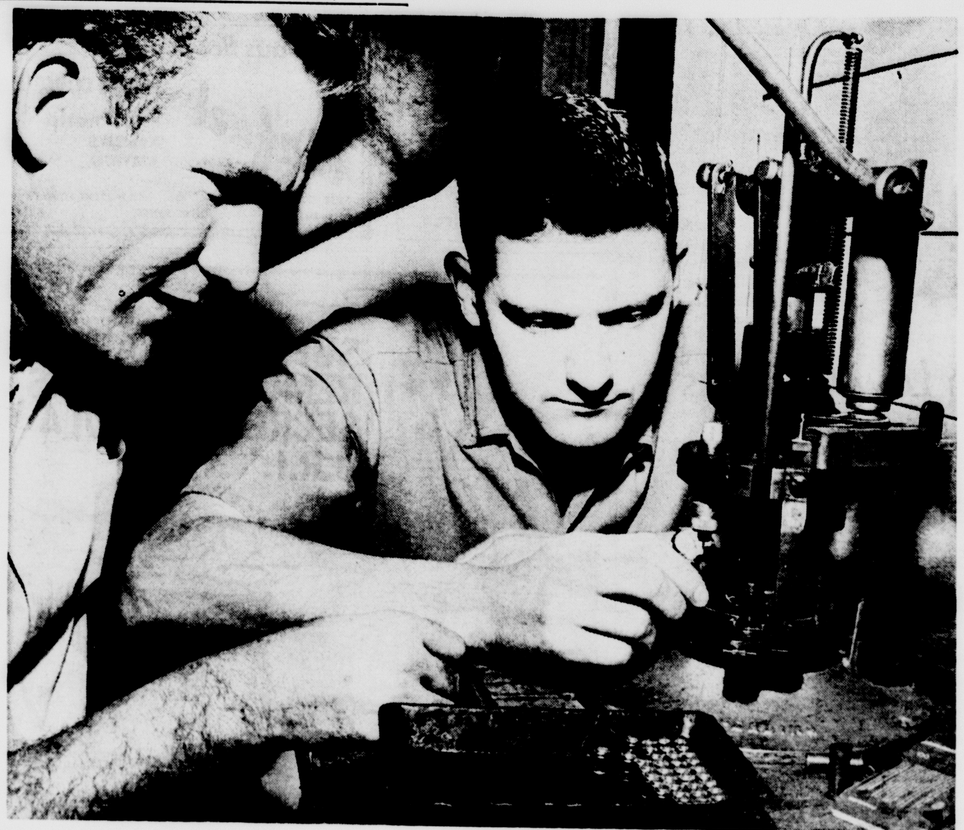
Police And Their Pistols

Officers' Weapons Can Serve For Recreation As Well As Duty



PACKING POWDER AND PRIMER into lead bullets that will go into the guns of the San Rafael Police Department's pistol squad, of which they are members, are Sgt. Jim Carlton, left, and Robert Larrison, with the help of a machine. The pistol team must provide its own ammunition for practice and competitive shooting. By setting up their own loading operation in the basement of a San Rafael house at 224 H Street occupied by some of the officers, the policemen make a substantial saving in the cost of their ammunition.

Boulevard range only to sharpen their skill with the gun and to meet the department's requirement for qualification shooting.

TEAM MEMBERS still must do the qualifying shooting set forth by department regulations, in addition to their practice for competitive events.

Other law enforcement officers from throughout the county, including Air Police from Hamilton Air Force Base, make use of the range to keep their shooting eyes sharpened.

The San Rafael police teams will compete in a half dozen matches or more during the year, always with other law enforcement sponsored opponents.

One of those meets—the H. O. Peters Memorial Winter Championship—is conducted on the Marin range. Held Feb. 5 and 6 this year, it represented a merger of what previously had been two separate matches hosted locally. It is named after the late master of the San Rafael range.

THAT RANGE, the officers say, is now one of the best in the state. City efforts and volunteer labor from the ranks of the police have resulted in extensive improvements, including an expansion from two to four lanes.

A bank with reflecting shield and sawdust eliminates any hazard from flying bullets.

Making up the "first team" for the San Rafael department in the local meet were Carlton (team captain), Douglas, Ken Homen and Riordan. Shooting on the second team were Stinson (captain), Phil Green, Bob Larrison and Gary Walker. Don Merkley, Bill Hool (captain), Joe Leonard and Terry Lucchesi made up the third combo.

The number of officers that can be accommodated on the squad is limited at present by the loading operation, Riordan says.

THAT LOADING operation has been set up in the tool-equipped basement of a house at 224 H Street, San Rafael, occupied by three of the officers.

The city provides its police with 50 rounds of ammunition per month with which to meet its qualification shooting requirements. But the officers must buy their own bullets for practice and for competition.

By loading their own ammunition, Riordan says, the men save substantially.

"When we were buying our ammunition, it cost us anywhere from $1.50 to $4.50 for a box of 50 rounds," he adds. "Now it costs about 50 cents a box."

THE MEN FIRE the same weapons they carry while on duty. For most of them, this is a Smith and Wesson K-38. Some of them, however, shoot Colts.

Big event of the year is the state competition which will be held in 1966 at Tracy in September.

There, in a field of 100, the San Rafael team annually finishes among the top 20.

BUT THE REAL goal of the San Rafael policemen is to outdo their friendly rivals, the Marin sheriff's deputies.

Another goal is to extend the membership of their squad to more of their fellow officers.

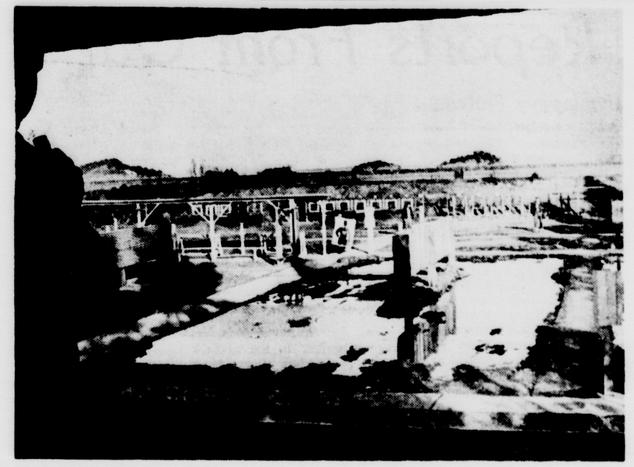
"We have plans for another loading operation, and that will permit us to add at least another team," says Stinson.

The competitive matches and the practice that precedes them —the men will spend six or seven hours each per week on the target range preparing for a shoot, along with another eight to 10 hours at work loading— must be done on the officers' own time during off-duty hours.

And even with the reduced cost brought about by the loading operation, the amount is considerable.

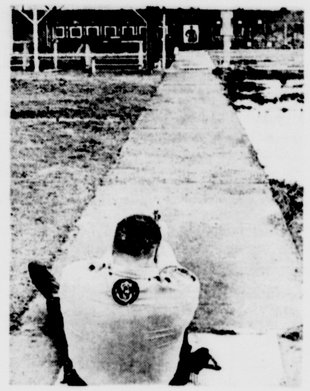
"BUT WE THINK it is worthwhile," declares Stinson. "The Practical Police Course procedure which we follow in our matches is just what the title indicates — highly practical, placing us under conditions we are most likely to encounter in the performance of our duties."

And, he feels, the officer who has spent those long hours on the pistol range will be most likely to react cooly and effectively when those conditions do arise.



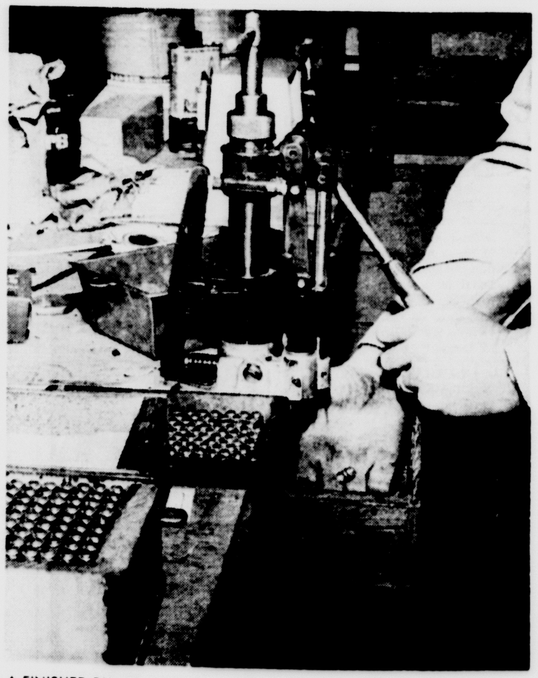
YOU ARE LOOKING from the "time shack" out over the pistol range where Marin County law officers sharpen their marksmanship. It is there that they also practice for competitive pistol meets with teams from other law enforcement agencies, and host meets. The range is located on Francisco Boulevard in San Rafael.

FROM BEHIND the barricade, Bart Stinson of the San Rafael Police Department pistol team gets off a round at the target. Stinson is one of the original quartet that first represented the San Rafael force in competitive shoots, and currently captains the No. 2 team.



FROM THE difficult sitting position, John Riordan fires at a silhouette target 60 yards away. In competition, the police marksmen fire from distances ranges from seven to 60 yards, and from 10 different stances, for a total of 50 shots per man.

THE MELTING POT and dies used for the making of the lead bullets are essential tools in the ammunition manufacturing and loading operation that the San Rafael Police Department pistol squad has set up in a San Rafael basement.



A FINISHED BULLET comes from the machine where it has been sized and greased, into the palm of the operator of the equipment. The police officers spend hours each week at work making ammunition in preparation for upcoming meets.

RIORDAN DEMONSTRATES the technique of rapid loading after firing, necessary to save precious fractions of a second when shooting on the timed course. The procedure set up by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the competition among law enforcement agency pistol teams is practical, the officer says, in that it closely approximates the situations the policeman may encounter in the line of duty.

Reports From Our Reviewers

Hemingway Protege

RAGE OF HONOR by Denne Bart Petitclerc, Doubleday, 264 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Larry Kramer Jr.

"Rage of Honor" deals with the frustrations of Mark Chamberlain, a giant among men, who is growing old.

The changes in his hometown where his family was once a cattle-raising first family all seems to be for the worst. Relentlessly, "business interests," the men who control them, and the men whom they control are constricting Mark's way of life, just as barbed wire changed the cattlemen's life.

Partly these changes are being wrought because of changing times, partly because today's men are lesser beings than those of yesterday. Finally, driven to despair by the death of his love and his friend and the loss of his home and his horses, Chamberlain takes revenge on his tormentors and escapes into death.

This is a first novel by a newspaperman who was also a protege of Hemingway. All of these facts are reflected in the book.

The journalistic style, the terse, punchy dialogue, and the galloping pace of the narrative all camouflage the romantic, pathetic theme of the story. Flashbacks are used very effectively.

Despite his youth (he's 35), the author captures the sense of frustration that older people often reflect as they consider the too rapidly changing world around them. The reader is left with the feeling that to live too long after your world has gone is not a blessing.

ALLENBY OF ARABIA: Lawrence's General by Brian Gardner, Coward - McCann, 275 pages, $6.50. Reviewed by Alan P. Cunningham.

Gen. Sir Edmund Allenby, writes Gardner in the preface to this book, "has always been overshadowed by (T.E.) Lawrence; he is remembered, if at all, as a character in the cast of the Lawrence story. The perspective of history may well reverse the roles."

This, and the book's jacket—showing the general, complete with British mustache and stiff upper lip, while an Arab-clad Lawrence looks out from the background— may lead many who saw the 1962 Oscar-winning motion picture to read it.

Gardner liked the movie. But Lowell Thomas, who contributes a 26-page introduction, says "the portrayal of Lawrence was surely 90 per cent distorted, and the treatment of Allenby almost as far out of line." Thomas however, terms Gardner's book a splendid one.

And splendid it may well be to any reader who is interested enough in (a) military strategy, (b) British campaigns and (c) biographies written in a dry, very British style of understatement.

Based largely on Allenby's collected papers it is certainly a product of thorough, careful research.

It portrays in detail the battles which led to Allenby's taking of Jerusalem. Under him, the Holy Land was returned to Christian control for the first time in seven centuries, earning for him the accolade "deliverer of the Holy Land." from the New York Times upon his death in 1936.

Surely this book offers an opportunity to fill in some of the gaps on a phase of First World War history which may have totally escaped many Americans.

Its main drawback is simply that Gardner's dilligent research is wrapped in an often stuffy and seldom colorful style. One never really finds the human being behind the history, in spite of numerous passages from his letters.

As long as people must choose between lavishly produced action motion pictures and dry biographies to get their historical perspective, the Lawrences will continue to overshadow the Allenbys.

A Kind Of Laughter

THE BOOK OF NEGRO HUMOR edited by Langston Hughes, Dodd, Mead & Co., 265 pages, $5. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

Real interest in literature by the American Negro, as opposed to literature about him, is still comparatively new. Consequently, an editor must use a broad base in selecting from the dearth of material available.

This is what Hughes has done when he describes the contents of this book: "Humor is laughing at what you haven't got, when you ought to have it . . . Humor is when the joke is on you, but hits the other fellow first-before it boomerangs . . . Humor is what you wish in your secret heart were not funny, but it is, and you must laugh . . . Humor maintains its distance while at the same time keeping you company so long as you are capable of meeting it halfway."

Most of this book affords us the privilege of an unselfconscious view of the Southern Negro, with a lesser contribution of topical civil rights humor.

The format is an excellent way of presenting selections of unrefined literature because the pieces are amusing enough to entertain and short enough not to tax the reader's patience for lack of style.

THE DRY YEARS: Prohibition and Social Change in Washington, by Norman H. Clark, University of Washington Press, 254 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Books about the prohibition era commonly start with ratification of the 18th Amendment and end with its repeal; not so "The Dry Years" by Norman H. Clark.

Clark, who teaches history at Everett Junior College and University of Washington, has gone clear back to the days of the fur trade and Marcus Whitman to trace the history of the temperance and prohibition movements in the state of Washington.

The early chapters of his book are illuminative of the progress of the temperance movement in rural America, and the reasons for it. Most of "The Dry Years," however, concerns state and local political fights and figures in Washington, and is of scant interest outside the state. As a whole, the book—well researched and well written though it is—must be considered a local publication.

Fresh Perspective

CORPORAL GLASS'S ISLAND: The Story of Tristan de Cunha by Nancy Hosegood, Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 192 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer Jr.

Because we live in a society that tends to equate technological improvement with progress in human affairs, it is instructive to see our civilization through the eyes of an outsider.

"Corporal Glass's Island" is a popularized history of the island community of Tristan de Cunha, which for all practical purposes existed outside modern Western industrial society between 1816 and 1961.

Isolated in the South Atlantic, midway between Africa and South America, on an island 24 miles in circumference, the community was founded by a British soldier in 1816. He chose to stay on the island after his garrison had been transferred rather than expose his half-caste wife to the slurs which would accompany life in England.

Despite incredible hardships the community grew to include seven interrelated families, comprising 264 persons, by October, 1961. At that time the core volcano of the island began to erupt, forcing the evacuation of this polyglot, ingrown group to England.

In spite of kind treatment from the public, and government enticement to assimilate and adjust, two years later 249 members of the community had returned to their island. In their eyes, life on their tiny, barren, isolated isle was more purposeful and satisfying than what they perceived as the superficial, immoral and hurried pleasures of civilization.

The story of the development of the Tristan clan and their reaction to industrial England provides an opportunity "to see ourselves as others see us."

The narrative is fast-paced and gives the reader a fresh perspective on contemporary life.

DENNE BERT Petitclerc, reporter for San Francisco, Santa Rosa and Miami newspapers and war correspondent, has written a first novel, "Rage of Honor," telling the story of a lonely cattleman and his efforts to maintain his individuality and integrity.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE SPYMASTER by Philip Freund, Ives Washburn, 220 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Donald G. Davis.

It is no wonder in this day of the spy thriller that this quartet of short stories should be headed by one called "The Spymaster." That, one assumes, helps the sell.

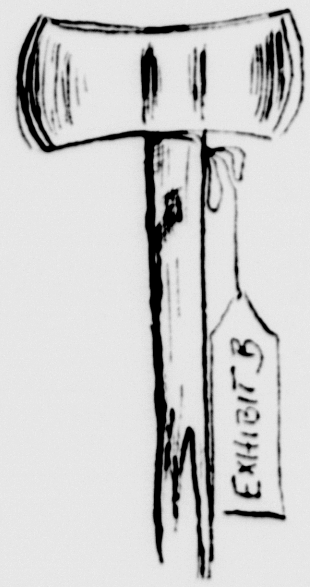
That doesn't mean the little book is a come-on. Freund is a storyteller-master and while "The Spymaster," set in the cold war divided Berlin, is outstanding, so are the other tales.

The writing of the title story is low-keyed, matching the cold surroundings of the background. Mainly it is a psychological tale, and Freund needs only 74 pages to complete a superb yarn.

Another longer story, "Black on Red," set in and around New York City, concerns the loss through deception of a valuable stamp belonging to a young couple. How the stamp is regained leads through a trail of blood and murder. This story perhaps could have been developed to a full-length mystery, but it stands as good reading.

Two short stories, "The Picture-Framer" and "The Process-Server," set in New York City, while provocative reading seem only to be sandwiched in to fill out the book size.

All in all, though, it's a neat package.



When you are planning to buy a new sofa or chair, it is not only important how the piece looks now, but also how it will look 5 years from now.
Cover and inside construction play an important role.

David Sarnoff: American Success Story

By DON KEOWN

DAVID SARNOFF by Eugene Lyons, Harper & Row, 372 pages, $6.95.

A MOTHER IN HISTORY by Jean Stafford, Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 121 pages, $3.95.

Eugene Lyons has a well-earned reputation for biographies that are substantial and meaningful.

His latest work, "David Sarnoff," does not injure that reputation, but it comes precariously close to doing so. The peril springs from Lyons' attitude toward his subject, which is more than the admiraton that Sarnoff surely deserves, but adulation so unrestrained that the reader must pause and wonder if he is receiving a truly balanced report.

Over all, however, Lyons rates commendation for an exhaustive yet selective job of research and for the kind of literate writing that has elevated his earlier work.

And if the author seems at times in awe of his subject, it must be admitted that David Sarnoff is, indeed, a remarkable person.

Sarnoff is the classic American success story. He is the poor immigrant boy (from Russia) of a minority group (Jewish) who came to America and grew up in a slum (New York's Hell's Kitchen). Still a child and with very little formal education, he became his family's breadwinner. Genius and perseverance combined to carry him to the very head of one of the country's great industrial complexes, to the role of pub figure, and to the status of spokesman for one vast section of the new technology.

Sarnoff, as Lyons makes clear, is the man most responsible for the direction that electronics has taken, and especially for first radio, then television.

He has demonstrated an uncanny ability for looking into the future and foreseeing the future courses of science, technology and finance. He has been considerably less acute in his social and political prognostications.

The Lyons biography impresses the reader with the caliber of an American who has rendered great service to his country and to humanity in both private enterprise and public capacities. It would have been even more impressive had Lyons adopted a less partisan tone. But the mettle of Sarnoff is such that the reader senses in him, if not quite the superhuman that Lyons pictures, nevertheless an extraordinary personage. And an honorable and well-meaning, if hardly warm, personality.

THERE IS an element of morbidity to the very idea of doing a book about Marguerite Oswald, mother of Lee Harvey Oswald.

Thus one reads novelist Jean Stafford's "A Mother in History" with a sense of embarrassment for both subject and author, and with a feeling of guilt for prying into something that is not healthy.

Miss Stafford (Mrs. A. J. Liebling) justifies the book — based upon three days of tape recorded interviews with the garrulous Mrs. Oswald—on the grounds that we need to know "the influences and accidents and loves and antipathies" that led up to the Dallas killings.

It soon becomes apparent that Mrs. Oswald is not the one to shed light upon her son's fateful course.

Miss Stafford does somewhat better in spotlighting in the mother characteristics that must have had their impact upon the son. Mrs. Oswald emerges as an unstable woman, lonely, pitiable, defensive, ridden by a persecution complex, starving for public attention (the book title is her own description of herself), almost totally divorced from reality.

But this wretched portrait has already been apparent in sickening clarity to those who read their newspapers.

Miss Stafford's interviews were worth perhaps another newspaper story, if we must have one, or just perhaps a magazine article (indeed, much of the material did appear first in McCall's), but hardly worth a book.

It would be a kindness to Mrs. Oswald and to society if she were forgotten now and left to whatever uneasy peace she can find.

For whatever it is worth, Mrs. Oswald at least at times accepts the theory that her son killed John F. Kennedy—but, she insists, he acted heroically and patriotically as part of some fantastic plot to rid the nation of a critically ill, about to become incapacitated President.

Flowering Trees Will Give You A Big Color Show

Now that the flowering plums have announced the approach of spring with their pink and white blossoms, let us look at the panorama of color left to come!

The types and colors of the flowering fruit trees offer a wide selection. Here are the choices among the flowering peaches, which follow the plums in flower:

Earliest to bloom is the variety known as Early Double Red—really a deep rose pink. There was a time when it was accompanied by San Jose Pink, but this one was discarded because the foliage came with the flowers, destroying the effectiveness of the display.

NEXT WILL BE Helen Borchers, a magnificent double medium pink. Double White (or Iceberg) an absolutely pure white, a variegated pink and white form called Peppermint Stick, and last, Late Double Red. Some of these varieties produce a very small amount of white-fleshed fruits, inferior in quality and flavor. The trees are grown for their flowering quality, with no concern for the fruit.

Double Delight and Saturn are two other excellent peach varieties.

The flowering crabapples comprise varieties good in gardens large and small. Some, like Floribunda and Eleyi, will become fairly large trees. Others, like Arnold and Bechtel, can be kept to small trees for small gardens. The range of color is excellent; pure white through all the pink shades and reds to almost purple-red.

Flower forms may be single, double or halfway in between.

WHEN WE HAVE an early spring the flowering cherries will bloom right with the crabapples, but ordinarily, they are likely to come a little later. First to bloom is the variety Akebono, with showers of pale pink flowers. It is followed by the double pink Kwanzan and double white Mt. Fujii.

These are the three best-sellers.

Lesser known varieties include a creamy double yellow, Ukon; Whitcombi, a single pink that blooms with Blieriana flowering plum, and Autumnalis, an early semi-double pink.

The really spectacular flowering trees come last in the season. They are erroneously called "tulip" trees (a name belonging to an entirely different plant) and are properly known as the Deciduous Magnolias.

THE FLOWERS OF many kinds resemble those of large tulips, come in shades of pure white, light pink, pink and rose, pink and purple, and lavender pink. Some are very fragrant. All have rather large foliage, as you would expect in a magnolia.

Popular varieties include the Star Magnolias, with pink or white flowers, the Saucer Magnolias, which include the pink, lavender and purplish-pink shades and the Lily-flowered Magnolias with slender, tapering buds and blooms, purplish in hue.

Something should be said about pruning the flowering trees: If it is done at the wrong time, or the wrong part of the tree cut away, no blooms will appear. No pruning should be done until after the flowering season.

The peaches are cut back severely—to two or three buds and the past season's growth. Plums may be headed back lightly, but the others are never cut back, only thinned out to eliminate interfering branches.

THE DECIDUOUS Saucer Magnolia or Tulip Tree is an excellent choice when garden space is limited, for it puts on a big color show while not outgrowing its bounds. This is an ideal time for planting magnolias, both the deciduous and the evergreen varieties. (Photo courtesy of the California Assn. of Nurserymen)

Why Not Grow House Plants That Are Not So Common?

You don't have to grow the same old house plants that everyone else does.

Some of the less common ones are just as easy to grow—and occasionally easier. More important, they will hold a lot more interest for you and will make you the envy of your neighborhood.

For example, have you ever grown the King and Queen, Mother or Pick-a-Back fern?

Tiny little plants grow out on the top-side of the fronds. Potted up and kept slightly moist until rooted, they soon make new, little plants.

Another easy one is the Bird's-Nest fern with uncut, broad, flat, glossy leaves in rosettes from the ground.

Still easier is the Rabbit's Foot fern. Daintily cut leaves grow from hairy, rabbit's foot-like rhizomes that creep down over the sides of the pot.

All three require far less light than flowering plants, hence are excellent for north windows and not-too-well lighted apartments. Just see that they get enough water to keep them from shriveling and a little plant food occasionally to perk them up.

The last one especially takes a great deal of abuse. It can go without water for quite long spells and, if left outdoors accidentally, can stand a considerable amount of cold weather.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Bareroot planting time has just about run out. Choose among the new varieties of roses now. Set out birch trees in small groups this month while they are dormant and you'll be rewarded with fresh, lacy foliage as soon as the weather warms up, and a graceful landscape effect in every season. Put birches where they'll get plenty of water and some shade.
- Lawns will come to life any day now. A feeding at this time will get them off to a good start.
- Dormant pruning should be completed now—roses, fuchsias, deciduous fruit trees, grapes, berries. Cut fuchsias back at least one third to be sure of plenty of new growth to carry blooms.
- There is still time to plant a cover for bulb beds. Annual alyssum is quick and good at drawing attention from ripening foliage. Pansies and violas can be set out from flats. For a striking effect now and after the bulbs have faded, set blooming Marguerite plants among your daffodils.

Now Is The Time Of Year To Take Stock Of Garden

You can't find a better time of year to evaluate your garden, according to the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

This is the time when choice of variety reaches its peak. Nurseries have all of their stocks on hand for the "spring rush" and wise gardeners choose now.

In gardens small or large, young or old, there are bound to be a few "mistakes" - tall plants where shorter ones are needed, foliage plants where flowering plants would do a better job and plants in shade that should be in sun, and so on.

There may be vacant spots screaming for something growing to make a better garden picture. Whatever the problem, it is more easily rectified when the choice is greatest.

WE ARE IN the close of the bareroot season — meaning that such seasonal items as fruit trees, grape vines, berry plants, spring flowering shrubs, artichokes and rhubarb are in some supply—and lower priced. This advantage is due to the stock not requiring the additional expense of a container.

This is a beautiful time of the year to exploit your specialty, whether it be azaleas, camellias or rhododendrons, or all three. Most varieties of azaleas and camellias are already in bloom, a chance to "see before you buy".

Rhododendrons' flowering season is still a matter of a month or so away, but some of the newer varieties must be bought now — they will never last until the blooming season! Another advantage. You get the full cycle of bloom, not just the part remaining after you have purchased the plant.

ONE OF THE big problems every year is trying to find your favorite variety of dwarf fruit trees. There never seems to be enough to go around. Small gardens require more dwarf trees every year, and the supply just doesn't match the demand. Choose now while variety is at its peak.

Maybe you made a mental note last summer that you were going to plant shade trees "next winter." That is now!

Among the deciduous (leaf-dropping) varieties, the time to make a selection couldn't be better.

Investigate the advantages of the new patented varieties, such as the thornless honey locusts, some with golden-tipped foliage — all with desirable growing habits. Ask about the new red maples, all sports of the old-favorite Norway maple, with its generously large and handsomely formed foliage, brilliant flame-red in the new kinds.

YOU CAN CHANGE a drab garden into a spring paradise, simply by planting flowering trees that will bloom this spring. You'll find a wealth of variety from which to choose among the flowering groups of peaches, plums, crabapples and cherries.

Beauty of planting these trees now will be the enjoyment of their flowers this year, a preview of the really big splash of color you can anticipate with another year's growth.

A tip about planting: If the weather is wet, just heel in the plants to protect the roots until sunny days permit planting.

Always use a special planting mix incorporated with your own soil when planting in heavy or very light soils, or in soil just vacated by a plant you have recenfly removed. Don't use any fertilizer when planting — feed next month. Soak the soil immediately after planting — even if it's raining! And be sure to stake tall plants against harsh March winds.

Deeper Colors Liven Up The Homes Of 1966

Houses are more colorful in 1966.

Deeper colors in house exteriors are being accepted, and some builders even venture to paint exteriors in primary colors.

Think how it would liven up the terrain to find a cluster of houses just around a bend in vivid red, yellow, blue or brilliant intermediate colors, orange or green.

PRIMARY COLORS are moving indoors and what begins to look tasteful indoors will no doubt become socially acceptable outdoors.

There was a time when gray was the only alternate to white in house exteriors. But when charcoals and limes coated interior walls, the watered-down values of those and other hues began to go to house exteriors—slates, greens, pinks, yellows.

When a large development in the East color-coordinated its houses a couple of decades ago, it was considered a giant step that could only be tested in low-cost housing areas. But soon owners of expensive homes began to take color cues.

AND TIMID types put deep, vivid color on doors and shutters.

Now we are braver — automobiles are going high fashion and home interiors are taking pointers from our wardrobes where dramatic Pucci prints, shocking pinks and oranges provide exciting change of pace from basic black.

More home owners find the white pattern in houses drab. One may spot a vivid blue house with shutters here and there, and long time barn-red users have livened up the color to a depth red.

RED IS THE universally favorite color.

Ancients used bold colors — reds, greens, blues. But somewhere along the line vivid colors became associated with gaudiness. Christmas took over red and green combinations, Halloween garnered orange and Easter was a yellow-green combination.

Any use of these colors in the home seemed to create a holiday atmosphere.

Now that orange has become a big color indoors (often combined with pink) it is more pleasing to the eye. New floor tiles are in solid deep green, red, blue. Even wash basins are available in the primary colors, and new flocking techniques for walls is encouraging the use of these strong colors for their velvety richness.

THE JUST RIGHT red, green or blue can be a posh background for traditional or contemporary furnishings.

Just before his death a few years ago, famed portrait painter Rene Bouche was working in the primary color medium. One thing that these paintings illustrated was how beautiful primary color combinations could be when used by skilled hands.

As these colors are used in the home and become more pleasing to the eye their use will increase. The idea is to learn how to use them effectively.

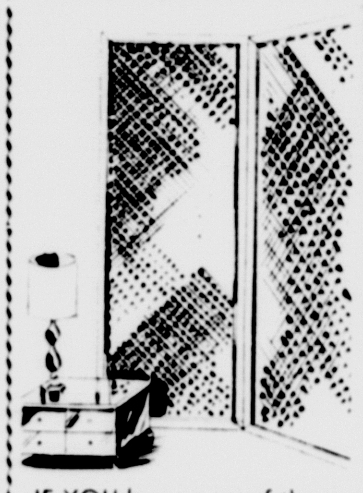
In a recent display of low-priced sisal rugs made in Ireland, a green rug with a red flame-like design was one of the more elegant patterns.

WHEN BUILDERS learn to color coordinate homes in these deep colors as effectively as interior designers are doing indoors, the effect will light up the landscape.

Some bright color combinations that have been spotted are:

Deep garnet (including shutters), vivid blue with white shutters; pumpkin with pale shutters; deep yellow with deep blue shutters.

The yellow color was put on an enormous 18th century white house in the East that was barely noticeable before. Now it has come into its own once again as it stands out in an area where white house have always dotted the landscape.



IF YOU have one of those dead corners in your living room, den or bedroom, perk it up with these pierced screens made of lattice molding set in a framework of one-by-fours. It is built floor to ceiling, as wide as needed, and nailed directly against the wall. Color makes the big difference. Some suggestions: gold screens against a scarlet wall, Avocado against turquoise, pink over orange. All materials are available at the lumberyard.

METTE HONNINGEN, as an aspiring ballerina, and Henning Kronstam perform with the internationally famous Royal Danish Ballet in "Ballerina," a two-part story on "Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color" Sunday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

The Best On TV This Weekend

Sports enthusiasts will have a TV-filled weekend, with many varied athletic programs to be seen, beginning with a professional basketball game between the San Francisco Warriors and the Cincinnati Royals led by Jerry Lucas and Oscar Robertson at 8:30 tonight on Channel 2.

Other sports specials and shows of interest this weekend:

SATURDAY: Bill Bradley, the spectacular basketball star and winner of the Sullivan Award as the top U.S. amateur athlete of 1965, will be seen in action playing for a Milan, Italy, team against Prague, Czechoslovakia, on "The Wide World of Sports" at 5 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

Two members of the Professional Golfers' Assn. Hall of Fame, Sam Snead and Jimmy Demaret, provide the action on "Shell's Wonderful World of Golf" at 5 p.m. on Channel 4.

Comedian Milton Berle hosts a surprise party for Jackie Gleason, as "The Jackie Gleason Show" departs from its usual format to feature an all-star cast on the occasion of the "Great One's" 50th birthday. Heading the program at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10 will be Bobby Darin, Connie Francis, Arthur Godfrey, Al Kelly, Erroll Garner and Frank Fontaine.

American-born Janet Flanner has become almost as much a part of France as her part-time pen-name, Genet. She has lived in Europe since 1921, authoring The New Yorker's regular feature, "Letter From Paris." "The Open Mind" will present Janet Flanner at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

Celebrating his 25th year in the world of entertainment, pianist Liberace returns as host of "The Hollywood Palace," introducing guests Marni Nixon, John Davidson and Bob Newhart on Channels 7 and 11 at 9:30 p.m.

Actor-author Charles Bickford will appear on "Book Beat" on Channel 9 at 7:30 p.m. to comment on his biography, "Bulls, Balls, Bicycles and Actors."

Bob Hope and Hedy Lamarr star in the comedy "My Favorite Spy" on "Saturday Night at the Movies" on Channels 3 and 4 at 9 p.m.

SUNDAY: The North American Gymnastics Championships in Montreal, Canada, and a close-up study of National Football League rookie Ken Willard of the San Francisco 49ers will be presented on "CBS Sports Spectacular" at 2:30 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10.

The settings are Southwest Texas and the remote regions of British Columbia as Robert Fuller hunts whitetail deer and bow and arrow expert Fred Bear stalks (as his name might suggest) grizzly on "The American Sportsman" at 4 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

Professional basketball action originates from the Civic Center in Baltimore as the Boston Celtics meet the Baltimore Bullets on "National Basketball Assn. Game of the Week" at 11 a.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

Marlin Perkins and Jim Fowler travel from drier areas of Africa to explore a luxuriant oasis filled with uncharted floating islands and unknown water courses in the desert country of Bechuanaland on "Wild Kingdom" at 5 p.m. on Channel 4.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. Barry Goldwater and Sen. J. William Fulbright, three of the nation's most influential spokesmen on the U.S. commitment in Viet Nam, will be interviewed on "Issues and Answers" at 1:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits and Frank D. O'Connor, president of the New York City Council, will discuss the need for dedicated young people in public service on "Look Up and Live" at 8:30 a.m. on Channels 5 and 10.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz will be the guest on "Meet the Press" at 1 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

Rep. Melvin R. Laird, chairman of the House Republican Conference, will be the guest on "Face the Nation" at 9:30 a.m. on Channel 5.

Lisa Hobbs, the San Francisco Examiner reporter who made an unprecedented visit to Red China in 1965, will answer reporters' questions about her observations on "Next Question" at 11:30 a.m. on Channel 5.

The distinguished author and humanitarian, Pearl S. Buck, will be interviewed on "Golden Gate Story" at 2:30 p.m. on Channel 7.

Melvyn Douglas will narrate

3-DAY sofa sale

MONDAY TUESDAY WEDNESDAY

That is all the time we have allotted to clear our showrooms for the new custom sofas that will be arriving from the recent Furniture Markets. Inasmuch as so many of our fine upholstered pieces are made in the cover of your choice, these sofas now on sale served as models in our decorated room settings. There you admired them—now thrill to the ownership, at a fraction of their worth, some of the finest seating pieces anywhere.

The illustrations shown are only approximations of many of the styles on sale. No special orders can be taken since the sale prices will indicate the piece you actually see. Do shop early for the best selection —savings are well worth the effort.

Our complete decorating service is available to you with your purchase. Come in and meet the people who can solve your decorating problems.
